OUTSOURCING

Would you be surprised to learn that the pain you experience in one part of your body is being caused by a problem in an entirely different area? For instance, you may experience pain and tenderness in your shoulder; yet, the source of the pain may be your neck even though there is no neck pain. This pain phenomenon, known as "referred pain," owes itself to the fact that the origin of the pain and the body part experiencing the pain share a common nerve pathway. The brain is then unable to differentiate between the pain and its source. Fortunately, chiropractors are very familiar with referred pain and can trace its source and thereby formulate an effective treatment plan.

The practice of chiropractic focuses on the relationship between structure (primarily the spine) and function (as coordinated by the nervous system) and how that relationship affects the preservation and restoration of health. At Family Practice of Chiropractic, our skilled professional staff is dedicated to addressing your needs. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Many disorders associated with the abdomen can cause referred pain to the back.

Quincy Youth Arena Vying For America's Most Passionate Hockey Community

Online, Text, Phone Voting Continues Through Thursday

Quincy Youth Arena is among 10 finalists in a contest for America's most passionate hockey community sponsored by Kraft Hockeyville USA.

Thanks to an essay submitted by Quincy resident and youth hockey coach, Paul Martin, Quincy Youth Arena was named a top 10 finalist. The winner will receive $150,000 in rink upgrades and an opportunity to host an NHL™ pre-season game.

Out of thousands of nominations, Quincy Youth Arena was the only rink in Massachusetts to be named.

"I have personally seen how hockey teaches valuable life lessons and sustains a successful community," said Martin. "Not only will the 300 kids participating in our program benefit from receiving these funds, but thousands of players from surrounding towns would experience the enhanced facilities and witness the unwavering support of countless residents, coaches and participants."

Votes are needed - by the community - this week in order for Quincy Youth Arena to advance to the next stage of the contest. The first round of public voting began Tuesday and continues through today (Thursday, April 16.)

Each person can vote up to 50 times a day and there are three methods to vote: (1) visit the Website and follow the links and instructions to vote; (2) call 1-855-255-5975 and follow the instructions to vote; or (3) use a two-way text-messaging capable device and text "QUINCY" to 35350 to vote.

The grand prize winner will be announced on NBC on May 2 and receive the grand prize opportunity to host an NHL® pre-season game televised on NBCSN and $150,000 in arena upgrades. For voting rules and more information, visit www.krafthockyville.com.

QYA opened in 1973 after a seven-year drive to get the children of Quincy a place to play hockey. What started as an ad in the paper in the winter of 1967 where 47 children responded grew to 750 skaters by the time the rink was finally open. Quincy Youth Hockey founders Bob Hayes, Dan Davis, Hector McBournie, Jerry Courney, Frank LaPierre, Frank Noonan and Al McKay had the idea and determination to build the rink in the Merrymount section of Quincy. Keohane's Funeral Home sponsored the first jerseys (and remain a sponsor still today) and the Kiwanis Club of Quincy donated the first scoreboard and sponsored the February tournaments.

NQ Shows Tough Defense Against Hingham

BOYS LACROSSE

By BILL GRIFFIN

Sometimes the numbers do not tell the whole, or even the best part, of the story.

Hingham scored 10 goals in the second half to defeat North Quincy, 15-1 in a Patriot League lacrosse match at Veterans' Memorial Stadium last week. However, the final score does not tell of the good defense the Red Raiders played in the first half, the steadfast work of keeper Joey England, and the wise outlook England brings to playing goal which made possible his fine play against the powerful Harbormen.

Begin with a little perspective. Hingham and Duxbury are annually two of the best teams in the league and frequently two of the best teams in the state. They have been playing lacrosse year-round since they could walk, and it shows in the quality of their play.

That said, North played a hard, decent match, especially on defense.

"I was thrilled with our defense in the first half. We were within 3-1 after the first period and 5-1 at the half. It's difficult to hold a team like Hingham to five goals in a half," said North coach Jimmy Finn.

The defense started with England. He was terrific. He made 14 saves, most of them on point-blank lasers, before leaving the match early in the fourth. He stood fearlessly against a series of rockets fired by the Harbormen. He played good position, protected the post, won grounders in front of the net, and cleared the ball out of the danger zone.

"He made some big saves, and he backed it up by handling the ball well," said Finn.

A good part of the reason was mental. England has the perfect world-view for a goalie. He has a short memory. Once a goal goes in, a keeper must forget it. It's over. It's finished. It never happened. If a keeper dwells on a goal against a team like Hingham, everything will steamroll. For a half, against a great club, England kept his team in the game because he lived in the present, not the past.

"You have to forget about a goal," said England who also plays keeper for the soccer teams. "That's the way a goalie in any sport has to approach a match. If you worry about the goal that just went in, then one goal becomes two, two becomes three, and it just keeps going.

"Against a team like Hingham, you know they are going to score. The important thing is to work on your core skills and make sure you stay solid and fundamental against them."

There is more to it. Much more than soccer, lacrosse is a game of possession. A skilled team can control the ball and possession endlessly. They can pass, cut, shoot, pick and roll until the moon rises in the sky. This all hap-

Red Raiders Bow To Harborwomen

GIRLS LACROSSE

By TREVOR WENNERS

Ciara Forde has jumped out to a quick start in her senior campaign for the North Quincy High School girls lacrosse team as she has recorded eight combined goals in the first two games of the season.

"She places (the shot), it is more of a finesse rather than a strength, she just tries to finesse it by the goalie which is great to see," said Red Raiders head coach Megan Therrien. "Her stick work getting into the alleyway and her speed allows her to have that scoring opportunity."

The Red Raiders received a pair of goals in the first half from junior center Marissa McGue in a 16-5 loss to host Hingham April 9.

"She puts up a lot of offensive points and defense," said Therrien about McGue who also plays varsity soccer and basketball. "She definitely has the natural ability to play lacrosse. She's an athlete, too. She understands what's open, the positions and she sees the whole entire field."

The Harborwomen went up 4-0 behind a pair of goals from sophomore Halle Sullivan, a goal from sophomore Abby Landry and a goal from senior Mackenzie Manning.

Junior attack Sarah Tsan responded with a goal for the Red Raiders and then McGue found the back of the net with 13:38 remaining in the opening half to bring the Red Raiders to within 4-2.

Senior goalie Marguerite Belcher recorded 15 saves for the Red Raiders.

"Hingham's a great team and although we did lose, Marguerite our goalie had one of the best games I've ever seen her play," said Forde who served as a team captain for the varsity soccer team this past season. "Our offense did a really good job moving the ball, defense did a great job getting back and keeping up with some of their best players. Our defense was right on them."

Forde scored with 7:56 left in the first half but the Harborwomen took a 10-4 lead into intermission. Sophomore Karyn McEvoy scored a second half goal for North Quincy.

In the season-opening 15-12 loss on April 7 against host Whitman-Hanson, Forde registered seven goals and an assist.

"She is a leader on the front," said Therrien.

Junior attack Savannah Flynn scored a pair of goals, Tsan added two and sophomore attack Kerin Coleman put one in the back of the net.

Senior captain and midfielder Molly Minton, who also plays varsity basketball and volleyball, tallied a couple assists.

"I'm looking forward for her defense," said Therrien about Minton. "I'm always amazed at what she can do and her footwork."

Senior attack Aislinn Collins tallied two assists and junior midfielder Charlotte Chretian picked up one.

The Red Raiders have six seniors on the roster in Forde, captain and defender Kiera Clifford, Minton, Collins, captain and defender Evlyn Scuzzarella and Belcher.

"Six seniors that are here, they're returning and they are providing so much leadership which is great," said Therrien. "They are very dedicated."

Winning 10 games and qualifying for the tournament is a goal that Forde and her team are trying to achieve.

"Definitely our goal, we're trying to get into tournament," said Forde. "Obviously we haven't had the best start but we're 100 percent shooting to win 10 games and I think if we keep going like this we'll definitely have a chance."

Juniors Molly Kate Cannon and Katie Sautter have been impressive.

"Molly Kate Cannon, I am excited for her defense because I had her in the whole entire game (against Hingham) and she was very strong on the defensive end," said Therrien. "This is (Sautter's) first year on varsity, she surprised me the first game even with her skills, you can tell she really wants to improve her skills and she is dedicated so I can definitely tell that she might

Eagles Edge Presidents

By TREVOR WENNERS

Monday in Quincy brought warmer temperatures that finally made it feel a little like spring outside and an extremely entertaining boys lacrosse game at Veterans' Memorial Stadium between visiting Plymouth North High School and host Quincy High.

In a game of runs, senior Steve Ross recorded a hat trick and senior Sean Brennick tallied a pair of goals for the Presidents but Plymouth North scored two goals in the final 2:58 of the game to record a 6-5 win.

"It's a tough loss," said Presidents head coach Martin Bowes. "I give Plymouth North a lot of credit, they played hard. I think we struggled in the first half offensively, I think we struggled overall offensively but that's a team we're going to face again."

Ross scored 3:20 into the game and tallied another goal with 1:44 remaining in the first quarter to give the Presidents an early 2-0 advantage. The Blue Eagles responded with four unanswered goals to take a 4-2 advantage into the locker room.

Ross tallied a goal with 2:53 remaining in the third and senior goalie Andy Johnson turned away a Plymouth North opportunity with approximately 1:30 left to send the Presidents into the final quarter only trailing 4-3.

Brennick evened the game with 6:45 remaining and found the back of the net with 4:48 remaining which gave the Presidents the lead at 5-4.

"I think just a desire to score," said Bowes of what he saw from his team during the stretch of three straight goals after going down 4-2. "Guys just wanted the ball a little bit more; that was my message at halftime – we need guys that want the ball which there was a lack thereof in the first half but (the run of three straight goals) obviously wasn't enough."

Junior Jake Hallisey tallied a couple assists for the Presidents and senior Gavin O'Hare pitched in with one.

"He is a great player," said Bowes of Hallisey. "We rely on him a lot offensively. He's a junior so he stepped up big for us this year for sure."

The senior class has been pivotal so far for the Presidents. It consists of 10 players and it is a deep class filled with talent. The players are Ross, Brennick, O'Hare, Ryan Higgins, Andrew Cook, Andy Johnson, Aidan Pugsley Ryan Harty, Brian O'Callaghan and Chris Doyle.

O'Callaghan's name might ring a bell from his stellar career as a hockey player at Quincy High. He tallied 16 goals and 13 assists this season in 21 games for the Quincy High hockey

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, April 6, 2015, the Quincy Police Drug Unit conducted surveillance in the Brewer's Corner area due to numerous complaints of drug activity in the area. At approximately 7:00 p.m., Detective Duran observed a male (suspect 1) emerge from a Water Street address and immediately give a head nod to a male driving by slowly. The Detective recognized suspect 1 to be an opiate dealer and substance user from past drug incidents. The driver stopped the car and suspect 1 got in.

As Detective Duran followed the suspect vehicle, he checked the car owner's criminal record which showed that he too had past drug charges. The Detective also recognized the owner's name to be involved in drug activity in Quincy. Detective Duran continued surveillance on the vehicle and contacted the other members of Drug Unit to assist.

The suspect vehicle stopped at a house on Independence Avenue, which is known to the Officers because of a past complaint of drug activity there. The driver pulled down the driveway and parked in the back. Detective Powers then observed suspect 1 walk to the rear of the house and within a few minutes, the vehicle came back out of the driveway and onto Independence Avenue with suspect 1 back in the same seat. The Drug Unit believed that a drug transaction just occurred.

The Detectives followed the suspect vehicle to Doane Street in Germantown, where Detective Powers observed suspect 1 exit the vehicle and knock on the door of a residence. The Detectives were familiar with the tenant because of his history as a known heroin user. About a minute later, the suspect vehicle drove away from the residence with suspect 1 back in the passenger seat. Through their training and experience, the Detectives believed that suspect 1 had just conducted another drug transaction.

The driver then drove down Yardarm Lane and turned onto Binnacle Lane. Binnacle Lane is a very small side street so the vehicle was not followed for fear of being spotted. The Drug Unit believed that suspect 1 was making another drug delivery as there was no reason to drive on Binnacle Lane and known drug users live on that street. Less than a minute later, the suspect vehicle drove out of Germantown.

Detective Duran contacted Quincy Police Communications Teletype Operator Flynn and requested the status of suspect 1's Trespass Order from the Quincy Housing Authority and granted by the court for the suspect to stay out of the Germantown area. Operator Flynn was able to find the trespass order which was issued in 2002 and still appeared to be valid. Detectives stopped the suspect vehicle by the Quincy Police station, where the occupants were separated and questioned.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Duran read suspect 1 his Miranda Rights to which he stated he understood. When asked where he was coming from, suspect 1 said he was walking down Water Street when he was picked up by a friend and they drove to Germantown to visit his 12 year old son. Suspect 1 left out the stop on Independence Avenue as well as coming out of the residence on Water Street. When asked the address of his son, he stated, "I don't know - 120 Doane or something."

Detective Duran asked suspect 1 why he went to see known drug dealers and he responded by saying that he just went to say hi but no one was home. Detective Duran told suspect 1 that they believed that he was selling drugs and asked for consent to search him. Suspect 1 said, "Go ahead - I got nothing - I ain't doing anything like that." The search produced a large vial in his inner jacket pocket which contained several marijuana roaches. There was also $377 in his wallet. The suspect said he just got paid.

Meanwhile, Detective Powers questioned the driver, who said he picked up suspect 1 on Water Street and drove him to Germantown. He too left out the stop on Independence Avenue. The Drug Unit requested a K-9 Unit to conduct an exterior sniff of suspect 1 for drugs due to the totality of the circumstances. Officer Morse of the Randolph Police Department and his canine Rando arrived in approximately 15 minutes. K-9 Rando alerted to the presence of a narcotic odor in the area of suspect 1's front waist/crotch area. The suspect then admitted that he had two bags of heroin in his front waist area. Detective Duran removed two knotted plastic bags which contained (8) and (12) smaller bags containing a brown powder believed to be heroin from the inside liner of the pants zipper. Suspect 1, a 38 year old Quincy resident, was then told that he was under arrest. Suspect 1 appealed to the Detectives that he was a user and that the heroin was for him – that he was selling, just using. He added that the driver had nothing to do with the drugs and was just giving him a ride.

Suspect 1 was charged with, "Possession With Intent to Distribute a Class A Substance (Subsequent Offense) and Trespassing." The driver was sent on his way. The $377.00 and iphone found on suspect 1 were seized pending civil forfeiture. Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE/COUNCIL ON AGING TEAM UP!

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit presented their third self defense program for the Council of Aging at the Kennedy Center. This program, covered over two nights, was taught by Quincy Police Officers to 28 seniors. Mary Clifford, one of the students, said, "The presenting officers were knowledgeable, professional, knew how to evaluate our strengths and weakness and speak to the public. This was the best ever for me. I often take the T by myself including evenings. I think of my four granddaughters, teens to early twenties and hope there is a program for them. This is an invaluable service and I hope it is ongoing at the senior center, both high schools and the local colleges." The Quincy Police Department does offer self defense programs in the high school and for the general public.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You still might have to deal with some lingering confusion that marked a recent workplace situation. But for the most part, you should now be well on your way to your next project.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new commitment might demand more time than you'd expected to have to give it. But rely on that special Bovine gift for patience, and stick with it. You'll be glad you did.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're earning the admiration of a lot of people who like the way you handle yourself when your views are on the line. Even one or two of your detractors are being won over.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking your responsibilities seriously is what you do. But ease up on the pressure gauge, and make time for much needed R & R. Start by making this weekend a "just for fun" time zone.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some recently uncovered information might make a change of plans inevitable. If so, deal with it as quickly as possible, and then find out what went wrong and why. What you learn might surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Aspects favor moving carefully and deliberately when making any significant changes. Could be there are more facts you need to know, which you might overlook if you rush things.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A problem neighbor might be looking to goad you into an action you don't want to take. Ask someone you both respect if he or she would act as an impartial arbitrator for both of you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A recent workplace accomplishment hasn't been overlooked by those who watch these things. Meanwhile, start making travel plans for that much-too-long-deferred trip with someone special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Those money matters continue to move in your favor. Now would be a good time to start putting some money back into the house, both for esthetic as well as economic reasons.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A changing workplace environment can create job pressures. But, once again, follow the example of your birth sign and take things a step at a time, like the sure-footed Goat you are.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Cheer up. You could soon have the funds you need for your worthy project. Your generous gifts of time and effort are well known, and someone might decide it's time to join with you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your inner scam-catcher is right on target, and you're absolutely right to reject that "too good to be true" offer. Meanwhile, something positive should be making its way to you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are generous, and also sympathetic to people who find they need the help of others.

team and helped them qualify for the tournament in back-to-back seasons.

On the lacrosse field, he has been all over the field whether it is fighting for a ground ball, picking up a ground ball, leading a fast break or locating a teammate in a scoring position.

Sophomore Thomas Pugsley has also been a huge factor this year for the Presidents.

The Presidents are currently 1-5 as they defeated Hull 8-6 and have lost to Sharon twice, Canton, Duxbury and Plymouth North. They led in the Canton game for a portion of it and they led multiple times against the Blue Eagles on Monday.

Bragging rights are at stake tomorrow (Friday) night when the Presidents will be taking on the Red Raiders at 5 p.m. The two teams are scheduled to meet again on Thursday, April 30 at 6:30 p.m. The Quincy and North Quincy girls lacrosse teams will play against each other at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow night after the boys game and will play before the boys game at 5 p.m. on April 30. All four of those games will be at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Bowes is highlighting the importance of fundamentals going into the game on Friday. "We need to be crisp with our passing and stick protection," he said.

Bowes also talked about the importance of the game overall.

"(It is a) rivalry, big game for us, where we are right now that is a must win game," he said. "If we don't win that we're hurting pretty bad."

The Presidents also host Plymouth South at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Monday at 10:30 a.m.

The Red Raiders will be playing against Quincy at Veterans' Memorial Stadium tomorrow (Friday) at 6:30 p.m.

"Yeah definitely a rivalry between us but I mean it's always a good game because they're a great team just as we are," said Forde. "Both teams work hard so I think it will be a fun game to watch."

Sixteen of the 19 players on the Red Raiders team are either juniors or seniors. They also have three sophomores.

"We've lost our first few games but definitely huge improvements from scores last year," said Forde. "We're putting up some really good competition up against some really good teams. We're playing really well, we're passing, we're moving, defense and offense is just a thousand times better than what it was last year because we're all working really hard to improve."

The juniors include Haley Houlihan, Chretian, Flynn, Tsan, McGue, Sautter, Kara Carchedi, Leona Tu, Cannon and Jamie Meade. They also have three sophomores in Coleman, McEvoy and Abigail Koch.

"Even like the transitions look so much better but (our main goals are) just our fundamentals," said Therrien. "Our passing, catching and keeping the ball in the offensive end more than we did."

pens in the offensive zone, mere feet and yards in front of the net. The offensive presence is relentless. The threat is constant. A bullet of a shot could arrive in an instant. As much as anything, a keeper's focus, patience, and endurance are tested.

England's approach? Don't worry. Be happy.

"I'm a pretty lighthearted person, and that helps playing goal," he said. "When the ball is in the offensive end, I'll talk to the opponents and make friends with them. My teammates do the same thing. We joke around a little. It relieves the pressure, so when the attack comes our way again, we're relaxed and ready to focus again."

The defense was more than England. Finn designed a defensive zone which frustrated Hingham in the first half. Ryan Moreschi blocked about a 100 shots. Cornelius Koch and Fred Barsamian had a solid day on the back line. Tom Koch, Rob Hines, and Jacob Peterson defended well at midfield. Hines and Tom Koch started several rushes which moved the ball from defense to offense.

"I was very happy with the way we executed our defense," said Finn. "We just put it in the zone and only had a day of practice to work on it, but we did a good job throwing off Hingham in the first half. After that, they adjusted. They, move, pass, shoot and are a highly-skilled team."

North scored in the first period, and it was a beautiful goal. Hines (who played an excellent all-around match) rushed up the right wing, fought off a defender and delivered a perfect pass to Mike Finn who was cutting clear in front of the goal. Finn finished it for his sixth goal in four games to tie the score at 1-1 with 7:08 left in the period.

"Rob was a workhorse all day," said Jimmy Finn. "He won faceoffs and rushed the ball well. On the goal, he held the ball until the defender slid off Mike and got him the ball in great position."

Mike Finn played a strong match in the offensive end. He is a gifted player, and he is always a threat. Therefore, teams have been doubling him all over the field in the early matches of the season. There were times against Hingham when the Harbormen sent three defenders chasing Finn behind the net.

"Teams have been doubling him. It takes its toll, especially on the arms because he's taking so many checks," said Jimmy Finn.

North fell to 0-4, including overtime defeats to Cardinal Spellman and Abington, and will face Quincy Friday at the stadium at 5 p.m.

National Recognition For Overdose Prevention Program

Norfolk County's strategies for saving lives in opiate overdoses were held up as national models at the Prescription Drug Abuse Summit in Atlanta last week.

"We all saw the lives that the Quincy Police Department was saving after training and supplying their officers with the overdose-reversal drug naloxone as part of a pilot program through the state Department of Public Health," Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey said after the Atlanta Conference. "Stoughton was experiencing its own surge in fatal overdoses, but the DPH was not willing to expand the program. We knew we had to break down the barriers to make it available to every town that wanted it."

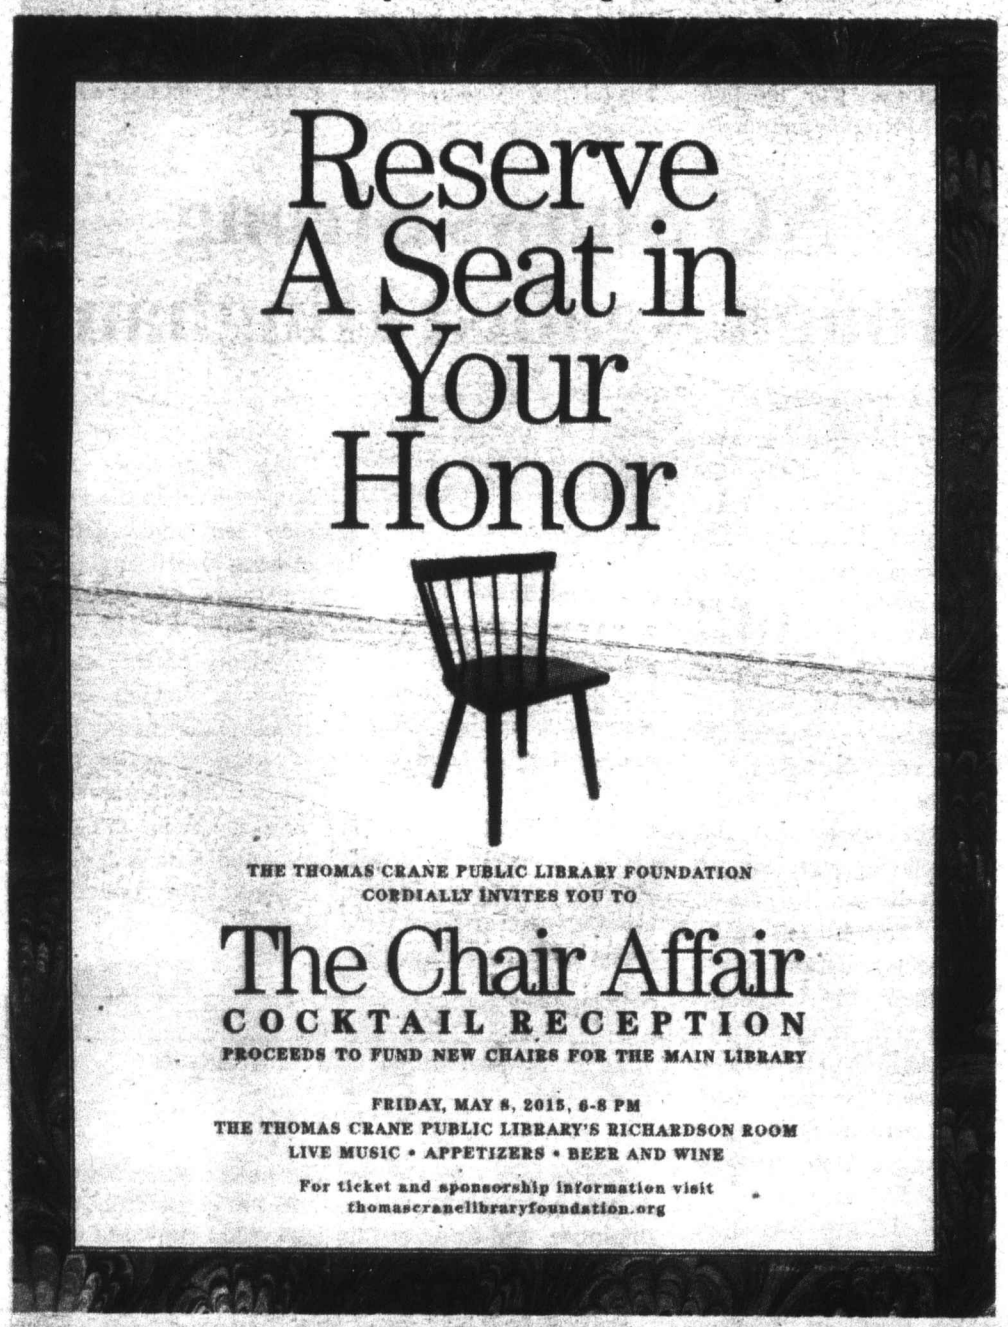
Naloxone, commonly referred to by the trade name Narcan, is a controlled substance although it has no dangerous or euphoric properties. Naloxone provides a temporary halt to the life-threatening effects of opiate overdose; it is simple to use, but it is not a panacea, and those administering it need appropriate training, Morrissey said. And a prescription, or its equivalent, is needed to acquire the substance.

"Stoughton overcame the roadblocks to having Narcan in every cruiser by acquiring a medical director who would provide the needed training and standing order to resupply the drug after it is used," Morrissey said. "We were able to look at the success in Quincy, take the Stoughton model, and replicate it for departments throughout the county."

The March 26, 2014 training that resulted from the partnership included police departments, fire departments, or both from every community in Norfolk County that did not already have a program in place. Morrissey also used money forfeited by drug dealers to purchase 900 doses of naloxone that he provided to the 28 communities in his district.

South Shore Cong. William R. Keating, part of the Congressional Caucus on Prescription Drug Abuse and a former Norfolk DA, and North Shore Cong. Katherine Clark were among national leaders attending the conference. "Some of these cry out for national solutions, like making naloxone an over the counter drug and readily available," DA Morrissey said.

"Massachusetts has strong partners like Rep. Keating and Rep. Clark working in Washington. But today, right now, there are things that local and regional authorities can do to save lives in the midst of this overdose epidemic. I hope that, to the best of our ability, we were able to share some of those strategies with others from across the country."



E. Howard St. Project OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board has given its approval to a 140-unit apartment building proposed for Quincy Point.

The board on April 8 voted to give David Crocini and William Caulder permission to construct the new building at 116 East Howard Street on a parcel of land currently home to vacant brick office building and parking lot. The site is located across the street from the Fore River Shipyard; the development will be known as the Watson on East Howard Street as a nod to Thomas Watson, who founded the shipyard in 1882.

The four-story building will include 140 units and a gross floor area of 150,194 square feet.

The project was scaled down twice in response to concerns raised by area residents. Initial plans called for a six-story building with 184 units, which was then reduced to five stories and 164 units prior to a Planning Board hearing in February. The developers cut down on the size of the building again following that hearing.

The Zoning Board of Appeals must still OK the project.

The Planning Board attached a list of 20 conditions to its approval of the project.

Among other conditions, the developers will need to submit a post-development parking analysis one year after final occupancy permits are awarded. If the analysis determines there is not enough parking on site, the developers are required to take steps to address that. The parking analysis will also account for snow storage and its impact on parking availability.

Galvins Excited To Be Part Of New Downtown

Hope Condominium Project Goes Before Planning Board This Summer

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sean Galvin, who earlier this month unveiled plans to build at least 48 condos on Hancock Street and is eyeing another project on Washington Street, has fond memories of what Quincy Center was like when he was growing up and believes it can be fun once again.

Galvcon Development's $27 million plan to construct a pair of buildings with 48 condos and 8,000 square feet of ground floor retail on Hancock Street was one of three Quincy Center projects announced on April 7. Peter O'Connell of Quincy introduced his plan to build a 15-story apartment building and a Hancock Street hotel, proposed by Alex Matov and Andrian Shapiro of LBC Boston, were also announced at a City Hall press conference that afternoon two weeks ago.

Galvin, a fifth generation Quincy resident whose father, Tom, is the city historian, discussed his company's

Smoking Banned In QHA Units

Commissioners Vote 4-1 For New Policy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Smoking will be prohibited on all Quincy Housing Authority properties beginning July 1, except in specially designated areas.

The housing authority's commissioners approved the ban in a 4-1 vote on April 15. The policy will come into effect on July 1.

James Lydon, the agency's executive director, said following the meeting enforcement would likely be done through the property manager at each Quincy Housing Authority development. The housing authority doesn't have penalties for violating the new policy in place, but they are expected to be finalized "relatively soon," Lydon said, noting the intent won't be to kick residents out.

"My sense is we're going to go with a warning for the first offense and then a fine," he stated. "I'm not looking to throw people out on the street."

The housing authority will provide designated smoking areas on each property. Property managers will work with residents to determine their location.

"We will provide designated smoking areas in each development, pretty much leaving it up to the managers with resident input," Carolyn Crossley, the housing authority's tenant services program management director, explained at the board meeting.

"We will continue to have many meetings with residents to get their input on where they would like to see the designated smoking areas."

The goal is to have designated smoking areas at each property by the time the non-smoking policy goes into effect on July 1. The no-smoking policy won't be enforced until after the designated areas are set up.

"We should have them in place. If for some reason something happens and they

Adams Green Road, Sidewalk Work Update

Road and sidewalk work will continue this week along the portion of Hancock Street between Coddington Street and Saville Avenue (in front of Presidents Place) as part of the $8 million Adams Green transportation improvement project.

The parking lane on the southbound side of Hancock Street in front of the Monroe Building has been temporarily removed to accommodate the realigned traffic pattern.

Sidewalk and street lighting work is also continuing this week on the north side of Granite Street between Hancock Street and the loading area adjacent to the Stop & Shop Building.

The relocation of a duct bank on Temple Street by the Subway to Christmas Tree Island will continue during overnight hours this week.

Pedestrian detours and barriers have also been set up on Chestnut Street, Hancock Street, and Cottage Avenue near the West of Chestnut project site.

Remove Decorations, Items From Gravesites

The City of Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers requests that all Christmas decorations, wreaths and other items be removed from the gravesites at city cemeteries.

The decorations should be removed since they could interfere with maintenance operations at the cemeteries.

Three Vietnam Veterans To Be Honored

Memorial Square Dedications April 30

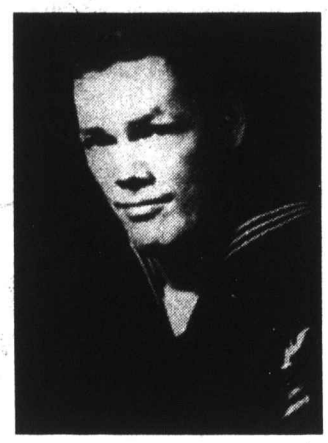
By SCOTT JACKSON

Memorial squares will be dedicated to three servicemen from Quincy who gave their lives during the Vietnam War during a series of solemn ceremonies on Thursday, April 30.

The ceremonies begin at 11 a.m. at 561 Willard St., where the square will be dedicated to C.P.O. George R. Levesque, U.S. Navy. At 11:45 a.m., the square at Alrick Road and Adams Street will be dedicated to 1st Lt. Alfred V. Schofield, U.S. Army. The final dedication is at 12:30 p.m. at 260 Quincy Ave., where a square will be dedicated to P.F.C. John P. Coughlin, U.S. Marine Corps.

The day's events will conclude at 2 p.m. with a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower located at 500 Victory Rd. in Marina Bay. Fr. John C. Gregan, a retired Marine Corps lieutenant colonel, will be the special guest speaker at that ceremony.

Levesque joined the Navy in 1955, shortly after graduating from Quincy High School. He was killed on March 13, 1969, when the jeep he was riding in collided with a truck six miles south of Long Binh, South Vietnam. Levesque was 30 years old and left behind a wife and two stepchildren.



GEORGE R. LEVESQUE

ALFRED V. SCHOFIELD

Levesque had served in Norfolk, Va.; Newport, R.I., and had returned from a three-year assignment in Bermuda before going to Vietnam in July 1968. During his service with the Navy, he had been awarded the Good Conduct Medal with two bronze stars, the Navy Expeditionary Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal with one bronze star, and the Vietnamese Combat Medal.

Schofield was a graduate of Quincy High School and was a captain of the school's soccer team. He attended Quincy Junior College for two years prior to joining the Army and was a member of St. John the Baptist Parish, where he was active in the CYO. Schofield had been a weapons instructor at Fort Benning, GA. He left for Vietnam on Aug. 14, 1968, three days before the birth of his daughter.

LAW ENFORCEMENT LIAISON Ralph Poland and Director Scott Martin, both of SafetyNet by Lojack, presented the Quincy Police Department with 4 new tracking kits. Accepting the kits is Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton. Thee kits contain equipment that is used to find individuals with cognitive disorders (including autism, Alzheimer's and other conditions) who go missing and are wearing a SafetyNext Bracelet. The program is simple. The client wears a SafetyNet Bracelet at all times (about the size of a watch) which has a Radio Frequency transmitter that emits a continuous signal. When the caretaker realizes that their loved one (the client) is missing, the care taker calls the Quincy Police immediately. Trained officers respond to the area where the client was last seen and use the tracking equipment to pick up a signal to locate the client. Additional Officers set up a perimeter to keep the client contained within the area. Once police officers locate the missing loved one, they reunite them. The Quincy Police Department has made numerous successful saves through the years. For more information on how to register a loved one for this program, contact Lt. Minton of the Quincy Police Department at 617-745-5719. Photo Courtesy Quincy Police Department

THE TRANSFORMATIVE LOOK

While many owners of Ferrari sports cars keep their prized vehicles in their garages and only drive them in sunny weather, others use theirs as their daily rides. After all, why not enjoy beauty and perfection? This same attitude is increasingly being held by owners of fine jewelry. Instead of reserving their fine pieces for special occasions, many are wearing their luxury jewelry every day. The pieces that best lend themselves to anytime wear are "transformational" pieces that can be worn any number of ways and transform from one form to another. Jewelry of this sort includes two-sided necklaces and pieces that can be broken down into multiple forms of jewelry, such as a ring that doubles as a bracelet.

If you're looking for a lovely selection of earrings, gemstones, wedding bands, engagement rings, pendants, and watches, you will find it at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. We also feature a constantly changing assortment of estate and pre-owned jewelry. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. For more information, please call 617-773-3636.

Fire Sprinklers Save Lifes

By MIKE SLADE
Quincy Fire Department

Recently, the National Fire Protection Agency held a sprinkler presentation, demonstrating a fire in a room with sprinklers, and a fire in a room without sprinklers.

Two identical three-sided wooden furnished rooms stood side by side in a parking lot at the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) headquarters in Quincy. The event was sponsored by the NFPA and the Massachusetts Fire Sprinkler Coalition. Over 200 people, including fire officials, building officials and members of the public, observed the demonstration.

The demonstration exemplified the speed of fire growth in a room without sprinklers and the lack of fire growth in a room with sprinklers. The point of the demonstration was to make clear that having a sprinkler system in your home dramatically reduces the risk of death and or injury. The demonstration showed a small candle size flame growing rapidly, engulfing the entire room without sprinklers in a little over two minutes. The fire in the room with sprinklers was extinguished within seconds.

Over 2,500 people die in house fires in the United States each year, even with smoke alarms.

Sprinkler systems cost approximately $1.35 per square foot and the average home is 2,200 square feet. At the time of construction, the cost of a sprinkler system is usually less money than a granite countertop to install.

National Fire Protection Association President James Pauley said, "People have a misconception of how sprinklers work. You can thank Hollywood. Every sprinkler goes off at the same time. In real life, he said, sprinklers are designed to only go off in the room with the fire."

Nine out of ten fire deaths happen at home. Fire sprinklers have been saving lives and preventing injuries for more than a century. Many other states are adopting sprinkler requirements for one and two family new construction homes. Home fires cause billions of dollars in damages every year. Even if everyone gets out safely, families lose personal items that they could never replace. A fire sprinkler works automatically when a fire starts. In home sprinkler systems, only the sprinkler closest to the flame flows water, slowing the spread of deadly smoke, heat and gases. The sprinklers fast action saves lives and protects the contents of the home from being completely destroyed. In most home fires, a single sprinkler can control the spread of fire. No other protective device can do what sprinklers can do.

How do home sprinkler systems work? Most home sprinklers are hooked up to the household's water supply, just like the plumbing. Others use a supply tank and pump. The sprinklers are connected to piping that's runs behind the walls and above the ceiling throughout the house. The system is charged with water in case of fire. Each sprinkler is temperature sensitive and acts like a plug for the water in the piping. The sprinkler will activate when the temperature from a fire reaches between 135 and 165 degrees. Sprinklers in homes work separately and in response to a high temperature of a fire, not steam from a shower or burnt toast or independent smoke alarms.

Today's new homes are built with light weight construction materials. Although they are strong, in a fire, these modern materials fail sooner than traditional building materials. Today's house fires grow much more quickly. A flashover is when everything in an entire room is engulfed in flames. A flashover can happen in a home in less than three minutes. Fire sprinklers can prevent a flashover from happening, and allow time for a family to escape from harm.

The Quincy Fire Department is dedicated in protecting the citizens of Quincy. If you should have any questions or concerns whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the fire prevention office at 617-376-1015.

Quincy Fire Thanks Student Kevin Ballerino

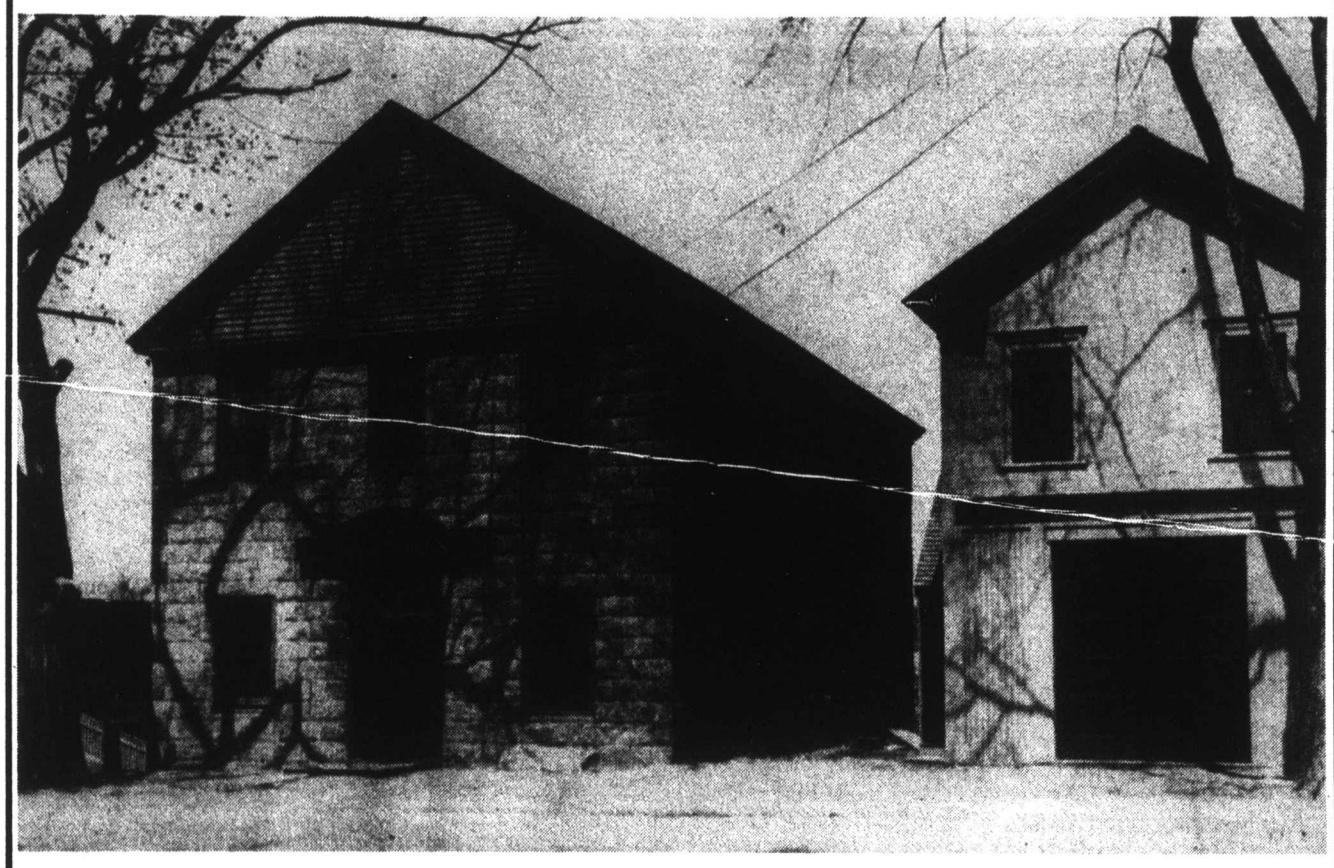
The Quincy Fire Department recently learned about an amazing young man named Kevin Ballerino.

Kevin is a sixth grader at the Broad Meadows Middle School. After continuing to hear of how amazing Kevin is, Quincy Fire's Engine 1 visited him at his school. Engine 1 had to let Kevin know that he has friends everywhere, especially on the Quincy Fire Department.

On the fire crew's time off, they went to Broad Meadows Middle School to speak with Dan Gilbert, the school principal, to ask the principal if it was ok if Quincy Fire visited Kevin. Gilbert felt it would be great for Quincy Fire to visit Kevin and gave Quincy Fire his full support. Mrs. Ballerino, Kevin's mother was very supportive of the visit as well.

On Friday, April 17, Quincy Fire's Engine 1 crew visited Kevin and thanked him for being an incredibly awesome young man. Engine 1 asked Kevin to be an honorary member of their team. Kevin accepted, and Engine1 crew presented Kevin with a Quincy Fire Department hat, Quincy Fire t-shirt, and Quincy Fire sweatshirt. The Quincy Fire Department is honored to welcome Kevin Ballerino to the Quincy Fire Department family.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS a 1912 real-photo postcard reproduction showing on the left the first Quincy police station on School Street. The building on the right was an old firehouse. They were across from the end of Marsh Street west of the tracks in Quincy Center. Built in 1829 of Quincy granite, the station was originally the South District Schoolhouse. It was a dark, cold, damp and unhealthy building from the beginning. After it became fire headquarters in the 1880s, the fire chief told the City Council in 1890 that it was "not suitable for man or beast." He got a new headquarters building in 1892. Then the police were moved here from City Hall. Conditions were still bad. Chief Alfred Goodhue worked tirelessly to get a new station and finally in 1924 when he again reported the "unsanitary, unfit and unhealthy conditions" the state health department ordered its use discontinued. A new police headquarters building was built in 1926. Later this old building was spruced up some and was used by the city Welfare Department until it was finally demolished in the 1950's. Council On Aging Thanks Quincy Police Department

Recently Lt. Dan Minton and his team visited the Kennedy Center for two evenings of Senior Self Defense. The team which included Sgt. Pat Buonaugurio and Officers Kristen Bowes, Lisa Devine, Lauren Lambert and Matt Miller did a great job.

Seniors talked about the program for days after the event. The seniors felt more confident after officers taught them how to protect themselves using awareness skills and to be on guard for any potential threats.

They also had a lot of fun while learning the skills. Thanks again QPD.

QHS International Culture Day Serves Up A Winner

Last week, the students at Quincy High School held an International Culture Day in the school's cafeteria as students set up individual tables selling foods from around the world and even provided some international dancing routines to entertain students and others while tasting foods seldom eaten by them.

I was lucky to be working inside the school and had a delicious Puerto Rican lunch for a reasonable price too. I could only try one plate. Too bad we couldn't sample a little of everything but sometimes you must make an executive decision.

All the student chefs had a great time hawking their ethnic cuisine. It was a good day to be hungry and to learn a bit about various cultures too.

City Budget Looks Like $117.8 Million

If this week's City Council Finance Committee meeting is a sign, it appears that the city's $117.8 million dollar budget for fiscal year 1990 will be approved with little or no changes.

The committee reviewed a number of departmental budgets and passed most of them. Only a handful did not receive committee support, but it appears there will be another budget review meeting.

Finance Committee Chairman Stephen McGrath said another committee meeting would be held May 8. At that time other departmental budgets including fire, police and schools will be analyzed.

NQHS Celebrates 50 Years Of 'The Sound Of Music'

Performances Friday, May 1 - Sunday, May 3 In The Peter J. Chrisom Sr. Auditorium

"And I'll sing once more…" sings senior Olivia McEvoy in the final days of rehearsals for the North Quincy High School Drama Club's production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's The Sound of Music.

McEvoy, President of the Drama Club, will bring the beloved Fraulein Maria to life when the show opens on May 1.

"It's fitting, really," McEvoy explains. "I've had such a wonderful high school experience, and the Drama Club and Music Department have had so much to do with that. [The Sound of Music's] theme of music's ability to uplift and guide you is quite appropriate as the other seniors and I go on to the next chapter of our lives."

This is just what directors Zach Innis, Tracy Phelan, and Marisa Smith had in mind when choosing this year's musical. "We wanted something with a large cast and ensemble, something that would involve new faces and faculty performers," says Phelan. "The fact that this is the 50th anniversary of the movie makes it that much more special. The kids jumped at the idea."

After losing 11 days to 2015's malicious winter, the cast, crew and directors have felt a sense of urgency to have the show polished and ready by the original show dates, May 1-3. "Knowing we had limited time to work with pushed us all to be that much more cooperative and efficient," remarks Innis. "The actors have shown a lot of professionalism memorizing their lines and blocking, and the crew has paid close attention to detail early on to make sure the show looks good and flows smoothly."

The cast includes not only students from NQHS, but also students from Quincy middle, elementary, and pre-schools. Over the course of the weekend, the role of Gretl, the youngest von Trapp, will be shared by four daughters of NQHS teachers.

Luke Molloy, an eighth grade student at Central Middle School, will conduct the pit orchestra. Michael MacRae, a senior playing "Uncle" Max Detweiler, says, "The younger students' talent and professionalism is incredible. Working on numbers like 'The Lonely Goatherd' with them has been a blast."

To create the musical's settings, which include the mountainous Austrian landscape, the von Trapp villa, and the graveyard of the Nonnberg Abbey, the directors enlisted Mike Bowes and his carpentry students, along with a multitude of other student and staff volunteers. Many set pieces have been recycled and refurbished from previous Drama Club performances. Tom Ducette of Quincy High School helped install long-needed new stage lights, and other improvements to the auditorium will be made next year, thanks to Principal Rob Shaw, an enthusiastic supporter of the arts, and his administration.

The shared DIY method was also used in creating the costumes. "They were a true collaborative effort, with staff from several departments custom designing many outfits," explains School Psychologist–Turned–Costume Mistress, Peggy Farren.

Staff from several departments will also find themselves in the spotlight during the large party scene, which includes a dance number choreographed by Marisa Smith. "With such a classic show, you want to do it justice while at the same time bringing our own creative element to the dances," Smith tells us. "It's been a lot of fun choreographing this show with the cast, students from the dance class, and the faculty and staff. I think our sense of unity here at North Quincy High will really shine through this show."

Performances are Friday, May 1 at 7 p.m., Saturday, May 2 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m. in the Peter J. Chrisom Sr. Auditorium. Tickets are $10.

Two Local Floral Designers Participating In 'Art In Bloom'

Two local floral designers – Mary Cassidy and Cynthia Lews of the Wollaston Garden Club – will be participating in the 39th annual Art in Bloom Saturday, April 25 through Monday, April 27 at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (MFA).

The event will feature 51 art-inspired floral arrangements, hand-crafted by New England garden clubs and professional designers. This year's arrangements will artistically accentuate works found throughout the Museum, including objects in the Ancient Greek galleries, the Arts of the Pacific Gallery, and the highly anticipated exhibition, Hokusai. Additionally, a special "Director's Choice" arrangement will be inspired by one of Ann and Graham Gund Director Malcolm Rogers' favorite paintings, Picture Gallery with Views of Modern Rome (1757, Giovanni Paolo Pannini).

On Friday, April 24, a Bubbles and Blossoms Preview Party will jump-start the celebration, providing attendees with a glass of bubbly, some light bites and a sneak peek of the arrangements. Sponsored by Galerie d'Orsay, the party will spotlight a painting by artist Bruno Zupan, who plans to create a new work in the Shapiro Family Courtyard inspired by one of the arrangements.

On Saturday, April 25, flower arranging demonstrations and lectures will be given by French flower expert, Christian Tortu, who uses nature as a source of inspiration and has crafted floral arrangements for Paris couture houses and royal weddings alike. Join Converse on Family Day – Sunday, April 26 – for two art-making activities where kids can take part in an Art in Bloom-inspired collaborative mural project and then customize a pair of Converse Chuck Taylor All Star sneakers.

Baked Seafood Stuffed Shells

By MARIE

There are so many ways to make stuffed shells, and I certainly have made a good amount. Today's recipe for a seafood stuffed shells or tube pasta is one that I hadn't made for awhile, but it's a family favorite.

They can be made ahead of time. It's always nice to have the tomato sauce done.

SEAFOOD STUFFED SHELLS

2 large fresh shrimp (cut up in small pieces) 2-3 large scallops (cut the same way)
1 egg (beaten)
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2-3 tablespoons white wine
1/2 to 3/4 pound large shells
2-3 cups tomato sauce

Heat the butter and oil in a skillet. Saute the shrimp and scallops. Add the bread crumbs, egg, wine – stirring until the mixture is blended. Set aside.

Parboil the pasta. When cooled, stuff each shell. In a lightly greased pan, place a bit of tomato sauce on the bottom. Place each shell side by side and cover with more sauce.

Bake covered in a 350-degree preheated oven for 15 minutes, and uncovered for another 15 minutes or until done.

Serve with extra sauce and a favorite grated cheese.

Nicoise Deviled Eggs

By SUZIE

Nicoise salads are a French version of our Cobb salads, but normally are made with tuna, or anchovies, green beans, and olives, among other vegetables as well.

Originated in Nice, here is a delicious way to incorporate some of these flavors in a deviled egg. The roots of modern-day deviled eggs can be traced back to ancient Rome, where eggs were boiled, seasoned with spicy sauces and then typically served at the beginning of a meal—as a first course known as gustatio—for wealthy patricians. These make a great appetizer.

Enjoy!

Nicoise Deviled Eggs: Make one dozen hard cooked eggs as you normally would and let cool, halve and scoop out the yolks. Mash with 3 tablespoons olive oil, 1 tablespoon good mayonnaise (I use Sir Kenningtons) a can of tuna drained, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped chives, 1 teaspoon mustard, and a splash of lemon juice. You can use a dash of hot sauce if you like. Check for seasonings.

Scoop into the whites; top with sliced olives and chopped tomatoes.

Stuffed Chicken Bragioli

By MARIE

Bragioli is a stuffed piece of flank or thinly sliced steak and a delicious alternative to meatballs or sausages.

However, I recently used chicken cutlets instead of beef, also a nice alternative to those who don't eat red meat.

They can be stuffed with just about anything, from ham, cheese or today's easy bread recipe.

STUFFED CHICKEN BRAGIOLI

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 garlic clove
1 teaspoon basil
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2-3 tablespoons tomato sauce
3 tablespoons or so of Parmesan or Romano cheese

Heat the tomato sauce in a large skillet. In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and add the breadcrumbs, tomato sauce, salt and pepper and the basil. Cook until mixed well.

The chicken should be about 1/2 inch thick. Before you spread the stuffing, sprinkle with the grated cheese.Then place the stuffing on the chicken leaving about an inch away from the edges. Roll the meat like a jelly roll and then tie with a piece of string.

In some oil, saute the bragioli in a frying pan searing on both sides, and then place them in the tomato sauce. Cook for about 25 minutes until done. When ready to serve, make sure string is removed. If they are large, cut into one inch pieces. If small serve individually.

These are usually served with a favorite pasta.

Sleiman Twins Recognized By School Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twin sisters who attend the Montclair School were recently recognized by the School Committee for their accomplishments in track and field.

Kaylee and Kiera Sleiman were honored by the committee at its meeting on April 8. The Sleimans – both members of the Quincy Track Club as well as Junior Olympians – competed at the Colgate Women's Games in New York City.

"They were participants at an event called the Colgate Women's Games in New York City. The Colgate games are sponsored by the Colgate Palmolive Company. It began in 1974 and it's grown to 11,000 girls and women from Boston to Virginia," Geoff Hennessy, the coach for the Quincy Track Club, explained.

"Athletes range from age from 7 to 70 competing in six different divisions. The Sleiman twins competed in the elementary 'B' division, which is grades 4 and 5. They competed in the 55 hurdles and high jump. They won some educational grant-in-aid, which they will present to the Montclair School.

"Kiera in 2014 was the Northeast Regional Junior Olympic champion in the long jump at 12 feet, five inches – I always tell the kids if you can long jump your age, that's pretty good – also in 2015 fourth in the elementary division 55 hurdles at the Colgate games.

"They competed in a series of trial rounds at the Pratt Institute of Technology in Brooklyn and the finals were held at the New Balance track and field center in New York City, formerly the 168th Street Armory, which is a hotbed for track and field on the East Coast.

"Kaylee is also a 2014 Northeast Junior Olympic champion in the high jump, runner-up in the 1,500 meters. The twins not only compete in the track and field, they were members of the North Quincy Apaches football team, they also play youth basketball, and have been members of the Quincy Track Club."

"Congratulations young ladies," added School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

Meeting Notebook

"We're very, very proud in the Quincy Public Schools and I'm sure the Montclair School is very proud as well, but not nearly as much as your family.

"Keep up the good work."

$4 Million Sought For Pump Station Repairs

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city is seeking permission to borrow up to $4 million to renovate the 44-year-old sewer pumping station in Quincy Point.

A request to borrow up to $4 million from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust to engineer and complete the renovations for the pump station, located at the corner of Chubbuck Street and Des Moines Road, was submitted to the City Council on April 6. The abatement trust fund allows communities to use low cost financing to complete water and wastewater infrastructure projects.

The request to borrow the $4 million from the trust was referred to the finance committee for further review. The committee will meet on April 27 to discuss the plan to replace the pump station.

"We'll be going through the report comprised by Weston & Sampson talking about the ill repair of the Quincy Point pump station," Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall explained.

"We had some substantive discussion before. My understanding is we'll go through this report. The hope is to proactively repair that pump station as it is one of the premier pumping stations in the city."

The pump station was built in 1971 and last renovated in 1985; a report submitted to the council said the station is nearing the end of its useful life. The thickness of pipe walls within the air release valve structure, for example, has been reduced by as much as 64 percent.

The renovation project would entail replacing the air release valves and applying corrosion protection to the force main within the air release structure. The pumps inside the station would be replaced, sluice gates upgraded, and the odor control unit replaced. The building's structure and roof would be improved and the plumbing, HVAC, and electrical systems would be upgraded or replaced.

Following the cleanup, Mayor Thomas Koch will host a free cookout for cleanup volunteers at Pageant Field at 12:30 p.m.

28 Seniors Take Part In Police Self Defense Program

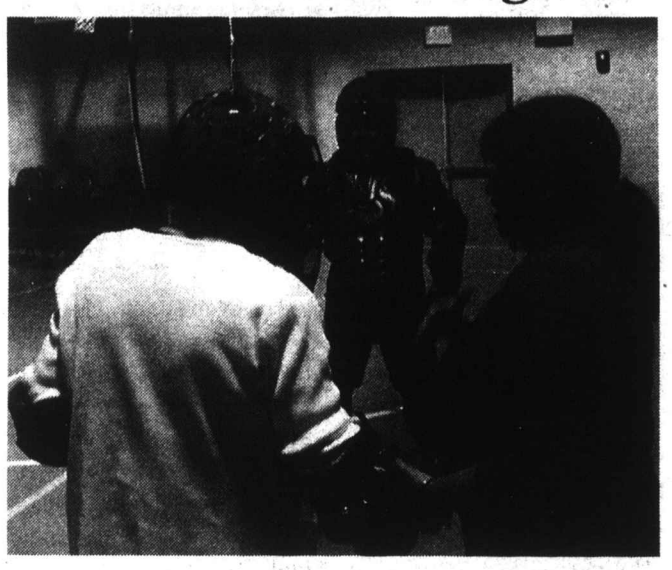
The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit recently presented its third self defense program for the Council of Aging at the Kennedy Center.

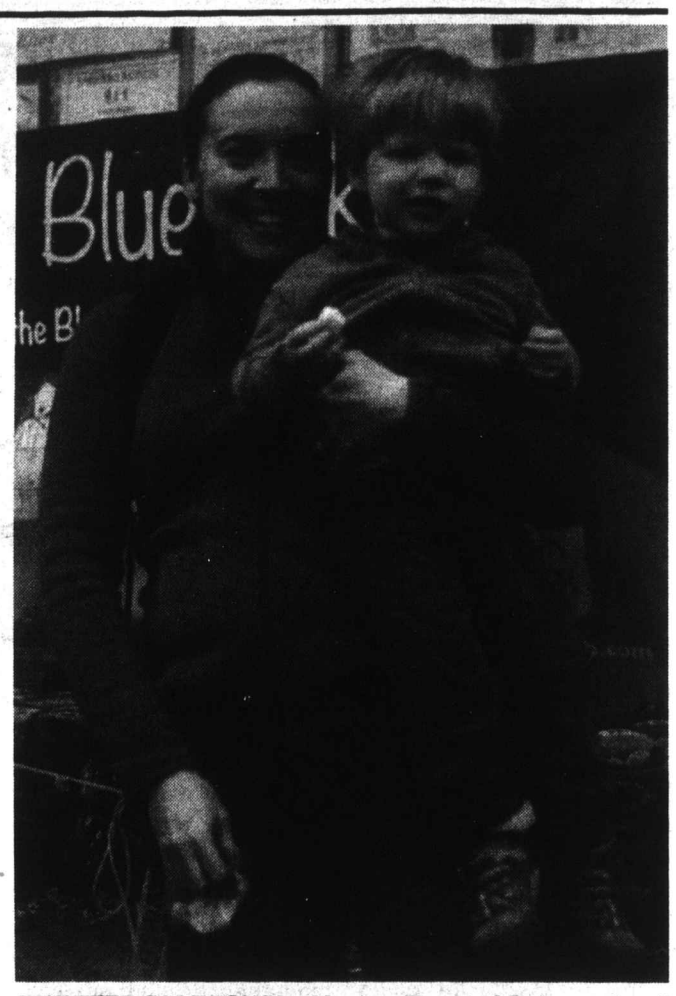
The program, covered over two nights, was taught by Quincy Police Officers to 28 seniors.

Mary Clifford, one of the students, said, "The presenting officers were knowledgeable, professional, knew how to evaluate our strengths and weakness and speak to the public. This was the best ever for me.

"I often take the T by myself including evenings. I think of my four granddaughters, teens to early twenties and hope there is a program for them. This is an invaluable service and I hope it is ongoing at the senior center, both high schools and the local colleges."

The Quincy Police Department does offer self defense programs in the high school and for the general public.





JENNIFER SAMMONS and her son Forest of Quincy enjoyed their first Peek-a- Blue Hike in the Blue Hills April 14. Forest looked for things like "pretty leaf" and "unusual rock" on the scavenger hunt around Houghton's Pond. Peek-a-Blue Hikes are free, weekday hikes sponsored by the Friends of the Blue Hills for parents with babies in backpacks or with children age five and under. The hikes are offered every other Tuesday morning, beginning at Houghton's Pond main parking lot, 840 Hillside Street, Milton. A naturalist from L.L. Bean leads the hikes, and free healthy snacks and drinks are provided. For more information and for a schedule, visit www.Friendsofthe-BlueHills.org/peekablue.

Eastern Nazarene College Spring Commencement May 9

Guest speaker at this year's commencement will be Daniel C. Chung. An alumnus of ENC, Chung has enjoyed a long career in ophthalmology and genetic research. He currently serves as medical affairs ophthalmic lead for Spark Therapeutics, Inc., a biotech company engaged in gene therapy for retinal blindness. Spark was founded by the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), where Chung served as a clinical advisor, instructor and senior research investigator at the University of Pennsylvania's FM Kirby Center for Molecular Ophthalmology at the Scheie Eye Institute. In this role, he was an integral participant in the hospital's Retinal Gene Therapy Clinical Trial Team attempting to find gene-based cures for childhood blindness. The CHOP gene therapy team was the first to successfully restore vision in children with a blinding congenital disease.

After receiving a BS in biology (1985) and MA in family counseling (1988) from ENC, Chung went on to the New York College of Osteopathic Medicine from 1990-1994. He was then selected as an Intramural Research Training Award Fellow at the National Eye Institute/National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, for work in ocular gene therapy. He went on to an internship and residency in ophthalmology in Akron, Ohio and completed a clinical fellowship in pediatric ophthalmology and a research fellowship in ocular genetics at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation.

Chung has published numerous papers, abstracts and reviews, presents annually at national meetings, has been an invited lecturer both nationally and internationally, and holds grants from foundations and the National Institutes of Health.

Quincy Student Welcomes State Senator To 'Legislators' Day' At Crossroads School

Roger White, 19 years old, a Quincy student who attends Crossroads in Natick, was all smiles as he welcomed state Sen. John Keenan and 15 other legislators to Crossroads on April 3rd.

The "Legislators' Day" was co-hosted by Crossroads and Rep. David Linsky (D-Natick). The purpose of the event was to highlight the success of state-approved Chapter 766 private special education schools and to raise awareness of the financial challenges these schools face.

Crossroads School provides state-of-the-art education and related services to students with autism between the ages of 3 and 22. Crossroads is a member of the Massachusetts Association of Chapter 766 Approved Private Schools (maaps), which recently launched its "Our Schools Count" Campaign to fight for fair funding for private special education schools in next year's state budget.

Crossroads' Executive Director, Dr. Anthony Cammilleri, welcomed legislators and guests and showcased the school's ability to educate students with autism. The Executive Director of maaps, James Major, emphasized the success of C766 schools in providing high-quality, cost-effective education to students with special needs. He also asked legislators for support of C766 schools in the state budget.

In addition to Linsky, Cammilleri and Major, Crossroads' students spoke about what the school means to them. Crossroads' parent, Roger White, Sr., of Quincy, also discussed his son, Roger White's achievements, which were made possible by the work of Crossroads. A special highlight of the day came following the speaking program when Sen. Keenan met with student Roger White and his parents, Andrea and Roger White, Sr.

Mary McCann Recognized For 39 Years Of Service

Longest Serving Current School Cafeteria Staff Worker

THIRD GRADE STUDENTS at the Bernazzani Elementary School with Mary McCann who has worked in the school's cafeteria for 39 years. Enhea Panariti (left), Andrew Corley (center), and Larolyn Zou (right) hold the hot lunches that McCann said are a big hit with the kids who she calls her "lovies." McCann, who manages the cafeteria, said she has no plans to retire and that her job and the children are what keep her going every day. By KRIS KALABOKAS

After 39 years Mary McCann, the longest currently serving cafeteria staff member in Quincy's public schools, is still not ready to retire as the cafeteria manager at the Bernazzani Elementary School.

McCann, a native of Newfoundland, Canada, came to the United States in 1957 and settled with her aunt in South Boston before marrying in 1960 and moving to Quincy, the city she's called home for decades.

All of her five children were students at one point or another at Bernazzani Elementary which is what prompted her to begin volunteering as a lunch monitor, also called a lunch mom, in the mid 1970s.

As a lunch mom, she watched on as students ate their lunches packed from home while sitting at their desks.

Dr. Douglas MacDonald was principal back then, she recalled.

The hot lunch program was implemented in the 1970s while Charles Bernazzani was principal. He hired her in an official capacity in 1976 and made her the cafeteria manager.

"It was different at the beginning for them," she said of the students once the hot lunch program started.

About half of the kids would eat the school-provided lunch while the other half would still bring lunch from home. Slowly, as the years passed, more and more children began eating the school-provided lunches.

She continued on through the years at Bernazzani Elementary with principals Morrie Hibbard, Dr. Patricia DelVal, Richard Hutchison, and with current principal Peter Dionne.

Her job description included ordering lunches and milk to be served the following day which is what she still does 39 years later while sitting in her small office connected to the gymnasium.

The school's multipurpose gymnasium, lunch room, and general recreation area was added on to the building in 1995. Prior to that, said Dionne, the kids ate in a room designated as both the library and gymnasium.

In fact, the giant oven is still in that part of the building, hidden in a storage area and away from sight.

The school population was smaller back then, he said, so it was easier to fit the kids in a smaller space.

Now the school has an enrollment of 365 students, many who know Mary by name.

Instead of the recently retired system in which students handed over a ticket for their lunch, kids at Bernazzani Elementary now punch personalized identification codes into a keypad connected to a touchscreen computer before receiving their food.

McCann mans the computer which she admits intimidated her at first.

"I never had a computer," she said.

Within a month of using it however, she was a pro.

"You should see her on it," said Dionne.

"The kids love it," she said of the keypad system. "Even the kindergartners, they press in their own numbers now and they love that."

"They think they're all big shots now," she said jokingly.

Using the computer has made her job easier although she laments the fact that sitting in front of the monitor makes it more difficult for her to reach out and hug the students who she calls her "lovies."

"The one thing about the computer, I can't get close to the kids because I used to get hugs," she said.

Once she gets more comfortable with the new technology, she said, she'll be able to take her eyes off the screen for a brief second to more freely reach over and make up for all those missed hugs.

One thing that hasn't changed much since she began at Bernazzani Elementary, said McCann, is what is served for lunch. Just like kids today, kids 39 years ago were eating the same rectangular cheese pizza slices alongside a carton of milk and grilled cheese sandwiches with carrot sticks.

"They love the lunches," she said.

Two things have kept her at Bernazzani Elementary all these years; the kids and the school's staff.

"You get friendly all the years with the kids," said McCann who works with six other lunch servers at the school. "The teachers and everybody are so nice to me and it keeps me here."

She moved to Hanson, which is about 30-minutes away from Quincy, about ten years ago but she said she's never considered leaving the Quincy school system and has no plans to retire any time soon because the job and kids are what keep her going every day.

"No, never," she said. "This is mine. I love it."

"I love Quincy and I miss Quincy," she said.

The connections she makes with the students aren't fleeting. Some come back after graduating from college to see her and greet her with open arms.

"They're coming back from college now and I go down and they're in the office," she said.

"Mary is truly dedicated to our students," said Supt. of Quincy Public Schools Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "No other cafeteria manager has had the same effect as she has."

He said she exemplified what Quincy Public Schools are all about: dedication to students.

McCann was among 18 food service staff members with over 20 years of experience who were recognized recently by the School Committee for their contributions to Quincy's public schools. Joanne Morrissey, director of the food service department, spoke on behalf of food service staff.

"The food service staff that we are recognizing here tonight have contributed significantly to the health and well-being of the Quincy Public Schools' students," she said. "Together, this group has served Quincy students for a combined total of 465 years."

The 18 other food service staff members recognized were: Sandra Bernstein (21 years), Georgianna Bonnie (21 years), Diane Bowes-Deagle (22 years), Mary Lou Camerlin (23 years), Donna Costa (32 years), Debra Elder (23 years), Fritz Gerstenecker (26 years), Mary Ann King (29 years), Mary Kintigos (22 years), Florence Mackie (20 years), Judith McNaught (27 years), Joanne Morrissey (21 years), Susan Mullen (21 years), James Nee (25 years), Joseph O'Neill (20 years), Anthony Priscilla (20 years), Debbie Russo (25 years), and Gladys Shaheen (28 years).

All were presented with certificates congratulating and recognizing them for their years of service and their dedication to feeding the children of Quincy's public schools.

plan for the downtown in an interview Tuesday. He said the company is excited to be a part of the new Quincy Center.

"You know my dad and you know how important Quincy is to him. He's instilled that in both my brother Scott and I. To be able to make a major footprint in the new downtown is really exciting for us. We've been building in Quincy now for 20 years; we've been in business 30 years. Having grown up here, I could start at the end of Hancock Street and name every single department store and retailer all the way down," Galvin said, recalling the times he would play on the escalators at Grants during Christmastime and then go to Woolworth's.

"I remember when it was really fun to be in downtown Quincy. Hopefully it can be fun again – I really think it can be. I've been chiding my wife a little bit about, 'hey, maybe we could live downtown.' I wouldn't mind taking the elevator down to the first floor, getting a cup of coffee, taking a walk down Hancock Street and running into people we know in the city.

"I would love to see it hustle and bustle the way it used to be. You used to walk down Hancock Street – you didn't get 10 feet without running into someone you knew. It would be great to see it come back. We're excited about being a part of that, we really are."

Known as Cliveden Place, Galvcon's proposal would be located in the site that was once home to Woolworth's on the corner of Hancock Street, Cliveden Street and Ross Way.

In 2007, the Galvins – Sean and his brother Scott – purchased the building at 1563 Hancock St., next to what was to become the Hannon Parkway. They later reached an agreement to sell the building to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer. When Street-Works left the city last year, the Galvins started planning their own project and realized they would need to purchase the former Woolworth's next door.

"When we found out things weren't going to go in Street-Works' direction, we started thinking about 'well, what can we do with this piece of property,'" Sean Galvin explained. "We knew it wasn't big enough – we needed more land – so that's when made an agreement with the Ricciardi family to buy their building, the Woolworth's building.

"It was really price driven from that point. It's an expensive piece of property so the quantity had to be upped. There was an awful lot of rental units being proposed already for the downtown, and our forte is multi-residential condominiums so that's what we decided to focus on and there is a strong market for them right now."

As proposed on April 7, both buildings at Cliveden Place would include four stories of wood-framed residential units sitting atop a steel-framed base; one building would have two levels of parking with 36 spaces in its base while the other, facing Hancock, would include the 8,000 square feet of retail space. That could change before the permitting process begins to allow for an additional floor of condo units, increasing the total number to 56 units.

"The Massachusetts state building code has some variation in it, which might actually allow five stories over one story of steel frame. We're looking at our options at that right now. We proposed it at 48 units, but it could be as many as 56 units – 28 in each building," Galvin said. "But again, we're finalizing with our architects what we can do and with the Building Department as to what's allowed."

Condos inside the buildings will range in size from 1,200 to 1,600 square feet; the units will include two bedrooms, two bedrooms with a den, or three bedrooms. Galvin said the condos could sell for between $460,000 and $700,000. The most expensive units will be penthouses on the top floor of each building. Those condos will be larger than the ones down below, because the top floors will have four units each instead of six.

In addition to the 36 structured parking spots, 22 spaces will be available in a lot between the two buildings.

Galvin expects Cliveden Place to attract empty nesters who already live in Quincy, as opposed to other downtown projects that are likely to attract younger professionals looking to move to the area or settle in Greater Boston after attending college in the region.

"We're thinking a lot of empty nesters. We think Quincy folks are our buyers. It's amazing how many people have come up to me since we've been in the paper and said 'this is great – if you could get me a three-bedroom, I'd live downtown.' These are all Quincy people who have a stake in Quincy who care about the city. Those are the people you really want to live here, I think, and to be owners downtown," Galvin said.

"They'll be a good balance, I think, against the younger crowd that's going to be drawn to the maybe more stylish units that are going to happen with all the interesting things they're proposing to go along with us."

The condos at Cliveden Place will also have a more traditional look and feel, at least on the exterior.

"We're traditional builders. We think Quincy is a pretty traditional town. There are other builders who will build in the downtown who have a more modern flare to them...ours is very traditional," Galvin explained.

GALVCON DEVELOPMENT has proposed the $27 million Cliveden Place project for the corner of Hancock Street, Cliveden Street and Ross Way. The building in front, known as The Shoppes at Cliveden, has room for three or four retail tenants along a 120-foot colonnade. Condos on site will sell in the range of $460,000 to $700,000 and will have two and three bedrooms and 1,200 to 1,600 square feet of space. The project is expected to go before the Planning Board this summer for approval.

"We like to use masonry, brick. Inside will be a little bit more urban than maybe we are in some of our other projects. You'll see a little more updated cabinetry, finishes, and things like that. A little less layered moldings and more slick, big windows. You'll have more of a city feel from the inside."

While the City Council needs to approve land disposition agreements for O'Connell's 15-story building and LBC's hotel – both are sited at least partially on the Hancock Lot – Cliveden Place only needs approval from the Planning Board.

Galvin hopes to go before the board by this summer to seek a certificate of consistency for the project, which would confirm the proposal meets the standards laid out in the city's 2007 Urban Renewal Plan for Quincy Center.

"If we could get in by mid-summer, that's what we're hoping for," he said. "We have asked the tenants in the building to try and move out by September and we're working with them on other spaces. Some of those businesses may relocate into some of our other properties or other folks we know.

"Grandasia may actually come back to the new building. One part of the business is wedding gowns, and that being probably the higher end part of the business they're interested in bringing that back downtown. We're interested in having them as a tenant."

The plan would be to demolish existing structures on site in September and begin foundation work in October and November, before the start of winter.

Galvin expects three or four retailers to move into the Hancock Street building, which will be known as The Shoppes at Cliveden and feature a 120-foot long colonnade. Galvin is confident in the ability to attract retailers to the site.

"Everybody talks about a coffee shop or a restaurant. I don't think the site is perfect for a restaurant; I think it would be nice for a coffee shop. I'd like to get somebody like that," he said. "We have talked to some chains and they've expressed some interest. We're not overly concerned, it's only about 8,000 square feet, so we're pretty confident we'll be able to fill it quickly."

The Galvins have completed a number of buildings in Quincy in recent years. Those include 20+ residential unit developments at 45 Hancock St. in 2008; 108-109 California Ave. in 2009; 205 Elm St. in 2013; and 39 Fayette St., which is opening this spring. Cliveden Place will be the company's largest development.

"The size of the buildings isn't anything we haven't done before, but the fact that there is two buildings on one site and there is structured parking and a commercial component – yes, this would be the largest development we've done on our own. We've built projects like this before, but this is the first one we've self-funded. It's a big deal for us. We're taking a big faith step into the downtown," Galvin said.

"But we're doing that knowing Quincy Mutual is already here, knowing someone of the depth and quality of O'Connell is willing to make an investment. Alex and Andrian – they've put $24 million in the downtown – I've got to believe they're serious and they're not going to just walk away from it. That's the energy we see. That's why we're excited about it."

In addition to Cliveden Place, Galvin said an agreement was reached in December to purchase 111 Washington St., the site of several former restaurants. That sale has not yet been finalized nor have plans for the lot.

"We've got another piece of property under agreement – 111 Washington St., which is the old pancake house on the corner of Washington and [McGrath Highway]. We haven't finalized our plans for that, but that will probably be another residential and probably a rental property rather than a rental property," Galvin said.

"The site is only about a half an acre, so not a huge property but where Washington Street really becomes the new gateway to the downtown with the re-routing of Hancock Street, we feel pressured to do a really nice project on that corner. We really do see it as the entrance to downtown."

Galvin believes there is a lot of energy in the downtown currently in the wake of the April 7 announcement as well as the start of Quincy Mutual's West of Chestnut project earlier this month. Cliveden Place, he explained, will be successful if residents can be sold on the idea of downtown development. There is a limited window to pull off the projects.

"Financing is key right now. It's not the factors that are happening in Quincy or even on the South Shore that affect our ability to borrow money at reasonable rates. Things happening all over the world right now are affecting the way money is being borrowed and it affects us right here at home. Those things are so tentative. There are so many things that could go wrong," Galvin said.

"But right now everything is stable. Rates are good. There is a positive outlook on the economy. There seems to be some genuine growth going on. Unemployment is stabilized. This is the time you want to be building buildings, not two or three years from now, because you're going to miss your curve.

"It's also what's going on locally. Street-Works had the advantage of controlling the whole downtown and making it exciting for the whole downtown. Where we're doing this basically block-by-block now, developers are dependent on each other for this all to move forward. Even though their permit process may be a little more complicated than ours and the LDA necessary for it, it's important for the powers that be to understand this all has to happen together.

"It's going to change the opinion. It's going to change what people perceive the downtown to be in the future."

QHA Bans Smoking In Properties

are not there we can delay enforcement – a rule is still a rule, but we can delay enforcement," Crossley said.

Quincy Housing Authority residents were surveyed about the proposed smoking ban prior to the April 15 meeting. Surveys were sent to each of the 1,558 units the agency manages; 585 surveys were returned, plus an additional 69 that were omitted from the final tally because of incomplete or conflicting responses.

Overall, 402 respondents – 68.7 percent – said no one in their unit smokes and they supported the ban. Fifty-two respondents – 8.9 percent – responded that someone in their unit did smoke, but they would be willing and able to comply with the smoke free policy.

Sixty-five of those surveyed – 11.1 percent – said they did not smoke but did not agree with the policy and 66 respondents – 11.3 percent – said complying with the policy would be difficult for those in the unit.

James Marathas, the housing authority's director of facilities, outlined several reasons why the board should approve the ban, including maintenance issues and the impact on Quincy Housing Authority employees.

"I happen to be somebody that has asthma. If I go in a unit and there is a smoker, I'm suffering for like the next two days just from the impact of going in a unit that has a heavy smoker. Not to mention the other maintenance staff – who may have similar problems or who may not have similar problems – but they get exposed every time they go into these units," Marathas said.

"The other thing to consider is the cost of renovating one of these units is probably triple of what it is to do any other unit. When a smoker moves out of the unit, the cost and the time of that unit being down is triple of any other unit that we do. Not to mention, I can't guarantee all that nicotine is out of that unit. The next person moving in – whether they have a child or they're a non smoker or they have asthma – there is no way of saying you're going to get all the nicotine out."

Commissioner Thomas Lynn opposed the ban on smoking. He agreed that smoking should be banned in high-rise buildings but the ban shouldn't apply at Crowley Court, a development in Germantown that features 45 units spread among 12 different buildings.

"As leases move forward, I'd say let's write into the lease no smoking," Lynn said, referring to Crowley Court. "But the people who live there now have lived there and smoked there for 20 years and aren't affecting anyone else to a large degree. I think we're overreaching."

Three Bid For Ambulance Services

"The mayor will be putting together a review committee," Chris Walker, a spokesman for the mayor, explained. "The review committee will include members of the Quincy Fire Department, members of the Quincy Police Department, and members of the administration. The committee will meet several times to grade the proposals."

The city does not pay the ambulance contractor. The ambulance provider bills patients, or their insurance companies, directly.

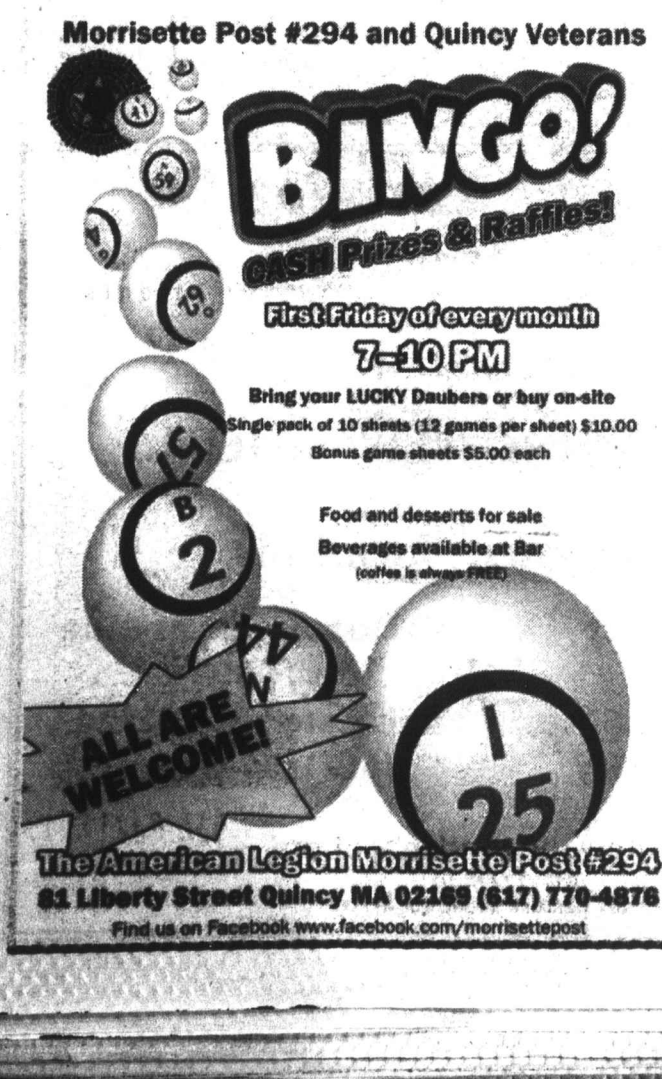
There are roughly 6,000 ambulance calls in Quincy on an annual basis, according to a request for proposals filed by the city. The RFP said the contractor will be required to have a minimum of six ambulances – four advanced life services (ALS) and two basic life services (BLS) – on call between 6 a.m. and 11 p.m. and five ambulances – three ALS and two BLS – on call overnight. Those vehicles, as well as a backup, must all be garaged in the city. The city's RFP also includes requirements for staffing and equipment used in the ambulances.

Additional ambulances must be made available for special events, including July 4th, major sporting events, holiday parades, and tactical police operations. The vendor must also provide ambulance units at all building fires and other matters if requested by the police or fire chiefs, or their designee.

A response time of less than six minutes is required for 90 percent of incidents; if an incident has a response time of 10 minutes or more, the city's police and fire chiefs must be notified and provided with a detailed explanation.

Fallon Ambulance has been Quincy's ambulance service provider since 1997.

"We are very proud of our history. We consider Quincy home and we are very proud to call Quincy home," said Peter Racicot, Fallon's senior vice president of business development. "We are proud of the bid we put together."



Direct Care Worker Training Program Coming To Quincy

Health Imperatives, Quincy Community Actions Programs, Inc. (QCAP), South Shore Workforce Investment Board (SSWIB) and South Shore Career Centers (SSCC) have partnered to offer a free Direct Care Worker program offered by Health Imperatives.

This 55-hour training prepares participants to work with individuals in need of assistance with activities of daily living such as meal preparation, bathing, dressing and housework. The training is hosted by QCAP at their headquarters at 1509 Hancock St., Quincy.

In addition to the Direct Care Worker course training, participants will also have access to free support with soft skills such as interviewing, resume writing, professional interview attire and more, through QCAP's Greater Quincy Financial REACH Center. Launched last November, the Center provides career readiness training, job search and placement, combined with intensive money management, credit counseling and repair. The Center also links with area businesses to match workforce skills with employer needs.

"We are thrilled to announce our partnership with QCAP, SSWIB and the SSCC to offer our Direct Care Worker training in the City of Quincy. This comprehensive program offers an opportunity for individuals who are looking to enter the health care field while also building on vital soft skills," said Louise Gorham, Southeastern MA, AHEC Interim Director at Health Imperatives. "In addition to this program, participants will have access to the comprehensive services that Health Imperatives offers including reproductive health care and supports for survivors of violence and trauma. Together we can provide help, hope and opportunity to those who are the most vulnerable in our communities."

Established in 1977, Health Imperatives is a nonprofit community-based agency that provides vital health and human services to more than 27,000 individuals each year. The agency's mission is to improve the health and well-being of low-income or vulnerable families and individuals in Southeastern Massachusetts.

The vast majority of those served are young, predominantly low-income women and girls who are challenged with multiple barriers to good health and safety. Programs include health care, violence intervention and prevention services. The agency also offers trainings and educational initiatives for other service providers and the public. Health Imperatives supports residents from communities as diverse as Brockton, Quincy, Hyannis and Nantucket and are committed to increasing access to the highest quality care for those who are often left out or left behind.

Since 1965, QCAP has been the leading private nonprofit organization in the Greater Quincy area dedicated to reducing poverty and helping low-income people achieve self-sufficiency. The organization serves nearly 20,000 unduplicated people annually. In addition to the Financial REACH Center, QCAP's programs include adult education, workforce development, free tax preparation, fuel assistance and weatherization, food assistance, housing assistance, early education and care, Head Start, child care resource and referral, and family engagement activities. QCAP's service area includes Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull and more than 80 surrounding Norfolk County, Metro Boston, and South Shore Communities.

"We are pleased to partner with Health Imperatives to give Quincy-area residents the opportunity to access both a skills-based training program and the financial and employment coaching that the Financial REACH Center specialists provide," said Andrea Craig, Program Director of QCAP's Financial REACH Center.

The SSWIB, comprised of private and public sector decision makers, is responsible for oversight of local workforce funding. The Board creates linkages to local employers, educational institutions, community partners and participates in the development of strategic, market driven, workforce goals of the South Shore region (22 cities and towns). In its most recent Labor Market Blueprint, the SSWIB identified Health Care as one of the largest industries in the region with consistent employment growth. QCAP is an active and longtime member of the SSWIB.

The partnership developed for this Health Imperatives course provides an opportunity to build on the work that QCAP, SSWIB and SSCC have done previously on the employment, education and training needs of the South Shore.

Highlights For NQ Track Teams

North Quincy dropped both ends of a twin bill with Plymouth South but the spring track event was not without its stars.

Although the vastly undermanned boys team lost 128-8, Jimmy Cannon was the star with wins in the two-mile and a second in the mile. Other standouts were Brian Jackson, Devin Gannon and Dimitri Legaspi. Most of the team are underclassmen.

The girls meet was a lot closer (92-44) and the team might have eked out the win had not several stars been out of the lineup due to the spring concert or the school trip to France. Nonetheless the team took seven first places including Mia Healy in the 100, Mandy Hazleton in the 200, Molly Donahue in the 800, Cora Cluett in the longjump, Izzy Flaherty in the high jump, Melody Umoren in the shotput and the 4x100 relay of Healy, Cluett, Umoren and Hazelton. Other standouts were Allison Wong in the 100, Devin Hiltunen in the 400 and 400m hurdles, Tara Nguyen in the 100 hurdles, longjump and triple jump and Naika Louis in the discus.

"We were swept in the javelin, triple jump, 100m hurdles, mile and two mile" said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "In a big meet, (invitationals) we look like a force. Mia Healy qualified for states in all three of her meets on day number one. Melody Umoren leads the state in shot. Molly Donahue took the winter off to strengthen after suffering an ankle injury in soccer and appears to be right where she left off after a stellar freshman season.

"Remember, we ran this meet without the Bryson twins and Julia Klincewicz. That's a lot of points left off the books," Hennessy added.

North's next meet is the 228 Invitational at NDA-Hingham for freshman-sophomores.

Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes May 30

The fifth annual JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes will be held Saturday, May 30.

The 2.7-mile walk will begin at 10 a.m. (arrival at 9:30 a.m.) from the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and conclude approximately 45 minutes later at the school.

The walk is a partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and many Quincy Public School students, friends, and family.

After the walk there will be family fun including healthy snacks, a DJ, dancing and face painting.

Money raised will go toward funding for research, treatments, and eventually a cure for Type 1 Diabetes, a disease that affects more than 18 million Americans, with 15,000 children diagnosed each year. JDRF spends more on research from its fundraising than any other nonprofit, with 80 percent of monies raised going directly to research and development, and just 20 percent to administrative costs. JDRF is also the largest organization that funds Type 1 Diabetes research in the world.

One of the fundraising tools is the sale of Quincy Kids Walk T-shirts and bracelets that will be available for purchase in May at many of the participating schools which will be updated shortly.

For more information and/or sales of fundraising items contact one of the walk committee members (Stephen/Jennifer Golden) at 617-786-8738.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

My grandmother constantly tells me my apartment is "stale" and that I need to air it out at least once a week. I have no idea what she's talking about ... opening windows, I guess? -- Kaylie, via email

Well, yeah ... opening windows is the main component of airing out a house, but there are a number of reasons why older folks (and many younger ones) see it as an essential step in keeping a house healthy.

In the early 20th century, airing homes was considered a crucial health component, as it was believed that fresh air would reduce the incidence of flu and other serious illnesses. Modern research has found some validity in this: The exchange of air keeps mold from growing, while a change in temperature can make it tougher for bacteria to live on surfaces around the house. Letting in sunlight also can make it tougher for molds and bacteria to survive.

Most of all, though, airing does get rid of the stale smell your grandmother noticed, and makes your apartment an overall nicer place to live. Here are a few tips on getting the most out of airing:

* Get rid of piles: Boxes, clothes, papers and so on, particularly on windowsills and beside beds and furniture, collect dust and impede airflow.

* Open the windows on first waking up: This is a habit I noticed while visiting friends in Europe, and it makes a lot of sense. Once you're dressed and leaving for work, shut the windows again.

* Or, air your apartment once a week while you're cleaning: Winter and summer, open all the windows and doors, dust and vacuum thoroughly, and change or air bedding (turn down the bed covers for a couple of hours, and shake out the comforter).

* Even if it's chilly, windy or cloudy outside, as long as it's not pouring down rain, you can open the windows for about an hour to allow a fresh exchange of air.

TIP: If allergies are keeping you from throwing open the windows on warm days, talk to an air-quality consultant (or an HVAC contractor) about the best way to keep the indoor air fresh -- such as changing air filters frequently.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

I'm considering a remodel. What are the advantages and disadvantages of an open floor plan? Deb

BARBARA GRACEFFA

When deciding if one large common or great room is right for you, I suggest you make a list of personal preferences or changes you'd like to see in your home in terms of function, organization, style, and lifestyle.

To answer your question, there are many advantages, especially if you have limited square footage – most importantly, by removing walls you gain the illusion of more space An open room can be more attractive, less compartmentalized, and certainly, more functional, too. For example, if your children's safety is a concern, you can watch them in the living room while you are in the kitchen or if you entertain a great deal, you can join in the conversation with guests more easily with fewer walls to separate you. Also, you can use larger furniture or arrange it differently in an open plan. In many instances, a significant advantage would be more natural light and better views to the outdoors. Finally, in terms of accessibility, physically challenged people, like those in wheelchairs, can get around easier in a great room.

On the other hand, there are drawbacks, too. First, such a remodel can be pricy when you take into account the need for structural beams to support the second floor or roof. Or you may need to settle for vertical columns as money-saving structural options. An open floor plan can be noisy, offer less space for privacy, and you'll have to work harder to keep the entire place clean (in other words, unless you have sufficient storage, there is no place to hide your mess and clutter can become a problem!). In the same vein, a kitchen full of dirty dishes can be unsightly if you entertain in an open space. Finally, you'll have far less wall space for artwork and deciding where to start and stop different paint colors can be a challenge.

When designing an open floor plan, consult the experts; you'll need a structural engineer, for sure, and most likely, an interior designer who can prepare an electrical plan with sufficient lighting and outlets (perhaps built into the floor), suggest one consistent flooring to be used throughout, and optimize your furniture arrangement.

Compromises to a completely open plan could include half walls, large cut-outs in walls between two rooms, and open-back bookshelves or two sided fireplaces that physically divide contiguous spaces.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@sec-interior.com.

Realtors Celebrate Fair Housing

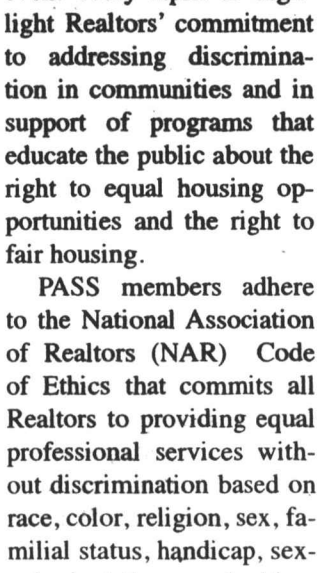
April 11 marked the 47th anniversary of the passage of the Fair Housing Act, Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968.

Realtors, members of the National Association of Realtors (NAR), dedicate the month of April as Fair Housing month to reaffirm their commitment to upholding the tenets of the fair housing law.

Two hundred local Realtors, who belong to the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors (PASS), gathered at their Association Headquarters in Pembroke on April 9th for a Fair Housing Celebration. The PASS Equal Housing and Opportunity Task Force organizes a fair housing event every April to highlight Realtors' commitment to addressing discrimination in communities and in support of programs that educate the public about the right to equal housing opportunities and the right to fair housing.

PASS members adhere to the National Association of Realtors (NAR) Code of Ethics that commits all Realtors to providing equal professional services without discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, familial status, handicap, sexual orientation, gender identity, and national origin. The April Fair Housing Celebration kicks off a year-long Realtors commemoration of the Fair Housing Act.

The Fair Housing Celebration also included a continuing education class on disclosures and a community clothing drive to benefit the Interfaith Social Services' Career Closet. The Career Closet collects men's and women's business attire and accessories for those who cannot afford to purchase the professional attire needed to obtain better jobs.



JOHN HEANEY, associate at Century 21 Annex Realty, was ranked #4 Realtor for AGC (Adjusted Gross Commissions) and #5 Realtor for Unit Sales in all of Northeastern Massachusetts at the end of February. Heaney has been a Broker with Annex for 24 years and is a current Board Director with the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors. He also donates his time to many charities and committees.

PASS members were extremely generous and filled a moving truck with quality attire in support of this local charity.

PASS is the second largest Realtors Association in Massachusetts with over 2,500 members servicing communities from the Neponset River Bridge to the Cape Cod Canal.

Puglsey (4 Goals) Powers Presidents Past Red Raiders

Quincy's Balanced Attack Leads To 15-2 Win Over North Quincy

Sophomore Thomas Pugsley scored four goals for the Quincy High School boys lacrosse team in a 15-2 victory over North Quincy last Friday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents (2-5) took control of the game in the third quarter as they outscored the Red Raiders (1-5) 6-0 to take a commanding 12-2 lead into the fourth.

"It is a big rivalry. Back when I played for Quincy High School, those (games against North Quincy) were some of the biggest games," said Presidents head coach Martin Bowes. "I got a lot of respect for them. I played with their head coach and I got nothing but love and respect for those guys."

Senior attack Mike Finn put the Red Raiders up 1-0 1:42 into the game. Junior Jake Hallisey evened the game at 1-1 assisted by senior Steve Ross 2:30 into the game.

Senior Gavin O'Hare tallied a goal with 6:13 left in the opening quarter to give the Presidents a 2-1 lead going into the second.

Senior Rob Hines scored nine seconds into the second quarter for the Red Raiders to even the game at 2-2.

Quincy scored the final four goals of the half which came from senior Aidan Pugsley, Ross (assisted by Aidan Pugsley), senior Sean Brennick (assisted by senior Brian O'Callaghan) and Thomas Pugsley.

Yes, that is correct six different goal scorers on six goals in the first half for the Presidents. Must be nice to have that depth?

"I think typically we rely on Ross to score our goals," said Bowes. "To see it spread is obviously a good feeling but we still had some things we've got to work on. I'm being a devil's advocate here but we have a long way to go to reach our potential."

Ross added, "It's awesome because you can trust guys to just put the ball in the net and just keep things flowing. It's real nice; it builds team chemistry and all that."

Thomas Pugsley scored his second goal of the game with 7:24 left in the third to give the Presidents a 7-2 advantage.

"He was unreal for us today," said Ross of Thomas Pugsley. "He was beating his man really well right off the corner."

Quincy scored five more goals in the third with two more coming from Thomas Pugsley, one from Ross, one from Hallisey and one from O'Callaghan.

"We've got to get better stick skills," said Red Raiders head coach James Finn. "I mean it was evident today that they just had better stick skills offensively and defensively than we did. Moving forward we've got to have better skills all around."

Hallisey completed his hat trick 2:10 into the fourth, while sophomore Kijuan Murphy and junior Mike Calnan found the back of the net in the final quarter.

"Every win we get is huge but especially against North (Quincy)," said Ross. "It is always a real competitive game, real close, especially in the first half it was real close but we always love winning these the best."

Senior goalie Andy Johnson only gave up two goals and sophomore Ryan Tucker saw some action in net for the Presidents in the fourth.

"I will say it game in and game out Andy Johnson is the MVP for us," said Bowes. "He is great, he does it all, he is a good communicator, he's a good ball stopper (and) he plays with a lot of heart. I'm very impressed with him on a daily basis."

The Red Raiders have a busy week coming up with four games scheduled in a five-day period. They host Rockland at 4 p.m. on Monday and then Hanover at 4 p.m. on Tuesday.

They will have a rematch against Quincy on Thursday, April 30 at 6:30 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Red Raiders will finish off the week with a 4 p.m. game at Abington on Friday, May 1. The first two losses of the season for the Red Raiders came in overtime.

"I feel like if they just learn to trust the game plan and they just apply maybe a little bit more focus in terms of their (stick work), I think we'll be right there," said Finn.

The Presidents will be on the road tomorrow (Friday) against Plymouth North at 11 a.m. On Tuesday, they will travel to Scituate for a 4 p.m. start and then on Thursday, April 30 they will square off with North Quincy for the second time.

"It is a start," said Bowes of the win against North Quincy. "These guys understand where we are and what we have to do to reach our goal of making the playoffs and so this is a good win but we've got a lot more work to do."

McGue, Forde Spark Raiders Over Presidents

North Quincy 18 - Quincy 6

GIRLS LACROSSE

By TREVOR WENNERS

Junior Marissa McGue and senior Ciara Forde combined for 10 goals for the North Quincy High School girls lacrosse team in an 18-6 victory over Quincy last Friday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The chemistry between the two should come as no surprise as McGue and Forde play varsity soccer together for the Red Raiders. They went 10-6-4 during this past soccer regular season and qualified for the Division 1 South Sectional tournament. On the lacrosse field, Forde currently leads the Red Raiders with 16 goals and McGue has tallied 12 for the year.

"Ciara and I have a good personal connection. We've played soccer together for a while so we have really good chemistry and we can read off each other well," said McGue. "I think (Ciara) is just a really good athlete so we just sense off each other."

McGue scored a hat trick each half as she continuously put pressure on the defense with her speed and creativity.

"(Marissa) had a great game," said Red Raiders head coach Megan Therrien. "She works very hard, she's dedicated, she's such a great player, a team leader and she has many moves up her sleeves. She always keeps the goalie guessing which is great to see and she's a big part of the transitioning, even on defense. She is just an all around great athlete who sees the field and understands the game."

The Red Raiders took a 4-0 lead 9:57 into the game behind four different goal scorers in senior Aislinn Collins (three goals in the game), junior Molly Kate Cannon, Forde and McGue.

"I was very proud of every single player on my team," said Therrien. "We worked as a team and it was consistent so we played first half and second half just as strong."

Junior Gabriela Jerahian scored her twelfth goal of the season with 14:01 left in the first half to put the Presidents on the scoreboard.

Forde responded with two goals twelve seconds apart to put the Red Raiders up 6-1 with 11:51 left.

Senior captain and attack Kerry Phelan scored her first of four goals with 10:27 left in the opening half to trim the deficit to 6-2.

"Kerry is always a leader for us on attack," said Quincy head coach Alisa Arakelian. "She is a strong player, anytime she gets the ball, 95 percent of the time it's going to be a goal or a good assist. That's what makes Kerry one of our best attackers and one of our strongest players."

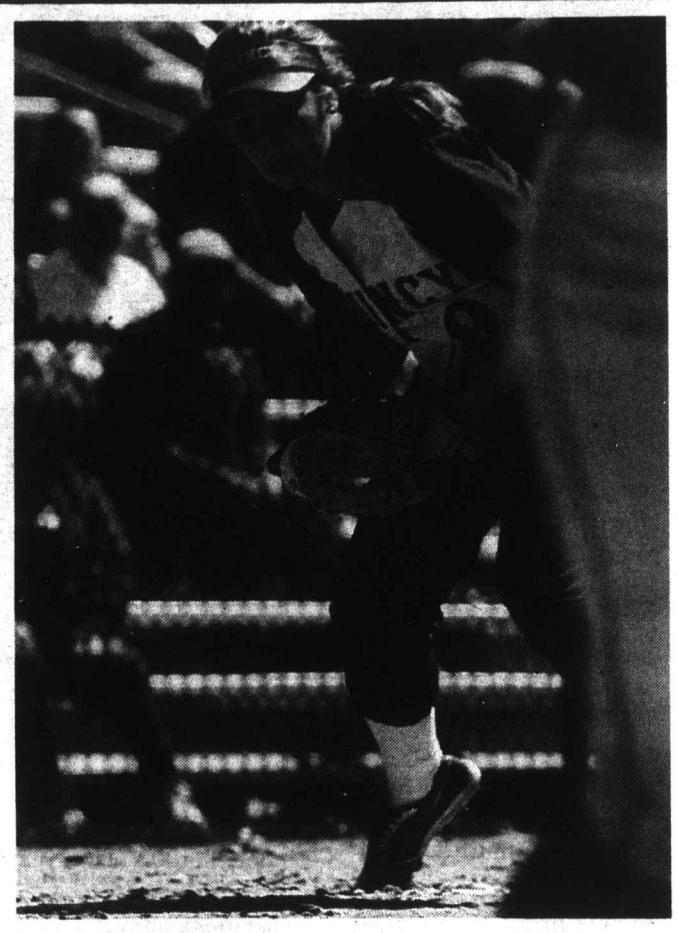
QUINCY'S ALISHA WALKER drives in two runs with a single in the first inning. The Presidents jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first inning enroute to a 8-0 shutout over Hingham last Saturday at Mitchell/McCoy Field.



QUINCY'S DEFENSE also sparkled on the softball diamond. Here Angela McDonald cleanly fields a ground ball and throws out a runner on a close play at first base.

Quincy Blanks Hingham Behind Bresnahan's 1-Hitter

By TREVOR WENNERS

Senior pitcher Saxon Bresnahan pitched a one-hitter and recorded 11 strikeouts for the Quincy High School softball team in an 8-0 victory over visiting Hingham.

"She controlled the game really well," said Presidents head coach Greg Sommers. "She was throwing pretty hard, she kept people off balance, she was able to overpower a couple girls and every time that she's confident on the mound then she pitches a lot better."

Bresnahan pitched a one-two-three first inning by striking out all three batters she faced. Senior center fielder and leadoff hitter Emma Kelly started the bottom of the first inning with a double for the Presidents (2-1) and advanced to third.

"She has kind of been (consistent) for the past couple years," said Sommers. "She's a very quick girl, covers a lot of ground out in the field. Any hit in the infield there is potential for her to beat it out because she's so fast."

Sophomore right fielder Kate McGahey reached on a walk and advanced to second. With two runners in scoring position, Bresnahan grounded out but picked up an RBI as Kelly scored from third. McGahey advanced to third with one out in the inning.

"We did awesome today," said Bresnahan. "I think we all around contributed (very well). We all hit the ball well, fielded well, we did really (well) today."

Senior catcher Angelina Avitabile batted in McGahey to make the score 2-0 in favor of Quincy. Junior second baseman Alicia Walker knocked in sophomore Madison Synan and senior Angela McDonald to give the Presidents a 4-0 lead after the first inning.

"It was good, anytime you can come out and swing the bat right away and get a couple runs it's a good day," said Sommers. "It kind of takes the pressure off the girls in the field, it takes some pressure off Saxon and it ends up benefiting us."

Four runs were more than enough for Bresnahan as she retired the side in order in the second inning with a strikeout and two catches in the outfield by McGahey.

"Kate is a (great) athlete," said Sommers. "She tries her absolute best to get to everything that is hit out there and it kind of showed today. I was kind of joking with her, there was one hit way foul and joked with her (when she) came (to the dugout), 'why couldn't you get that one.' She has been a great addition to the team."

Bresnahan once again struck out the side in order in the third inning.

The Harborwomen picked up their only hit off Bresnahan with one out in the fourth inning but after the runner advanced to second, Bresnahan struck out a batter and the Kelly made a catch in centerfield to end the inning.

Junior Nicole Jorgensen was solid both in the field and at the plate. She recorded two doubles and a single while playing well at first base.

"It is very nice to have a 6-3 girl at first base so anytime a throw is a little bit off she can scoop it up," said Sommers. "And she's hitting well, she hits well down (at) the bottom of the order and it kind of puts a lot of pressure off her and she just can kind of have fun with it."

Jorgensen opened up the bottom of the sixth inning with a double and then Kelly advanced her to third on a ground out. McGahey knocked in Jorgensen to make the score 5-0. Bresnahan then followed that up by hitting a two-run homer to give the Presidents a 7-0 advantage. Junior Catherine Buttomer picked up an RBI by scoring senior Annie Waterman for the final run of the game.

"When you have hitters 1-9 hitting the ball it kinds of puts a lot of pressure on their pitcher," said Sommers. "There is no one that you can relax against so it's great to see all of them swinging the bat."

The Presidents have twelve seniors on the roster which includes McDonald, Bella Falco, Emily Van Tassell, Meghan Caggiano, Waterman, Samantha McMahon, Emma Kimmell, Kelly, Dana Varmahmoodi, Bresnahan, Avitabile and Madison Davis. There are three juniors in Walker, Buttomer and Jorgensen. The rest of the roster consists of five sophomores in Synan, Alexandra MacPherson, Clare Doherty, Lucia Buzzel and McGahey.

"The girls on this team are not only great athletes and great girls on the field but they take care of business in the classroom," said Sommers. "That's very satisfying as a coach and I also teach at the high school so it's very nice to know that these girls are contributing members of society."

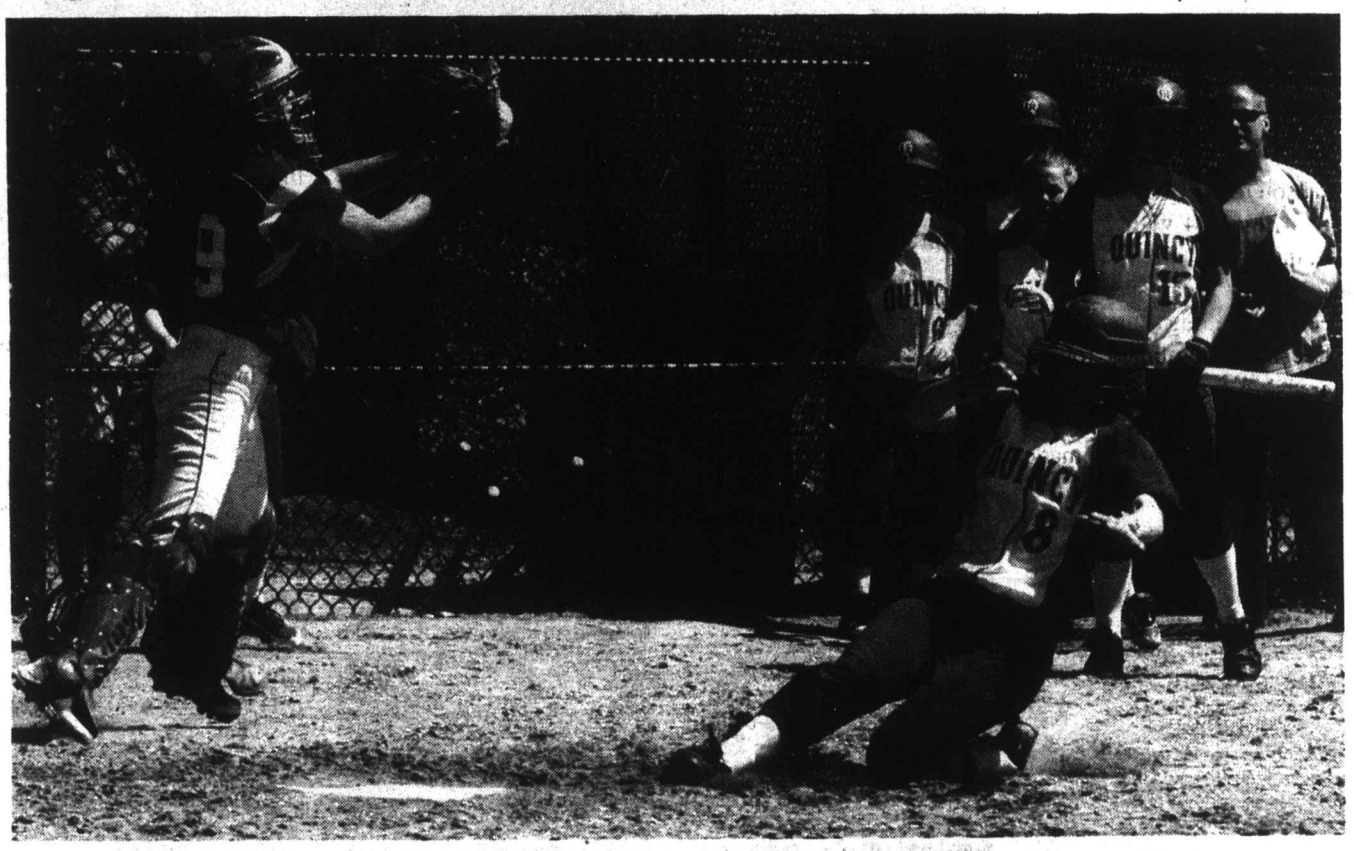
Quincy's other two games consisted of a road win at Pembroke and a loss at Silver Lake.

Quincy finished 15-7 last season and defeated Plymouth North 1-0 in a preliminary round game of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament before losing 5-1 to Hopkinton in the first round.

"My main goal is to have us work as a team and keep working hard every game, go after every play," said Bresnahan.

Sommers added, "First goal is try to win the league, try to make it back to the tournament and then try to get a couple wins in the tournament."

The Presidents will take on Fontbonne Academy today (Thursday) at 10:30 a.m. at Cunningham Park in Milton. They will play against North Quincy at 4 p.m. on Monday at Mitchell McCoy Field in Quincy.



KATE McGAHEY slides home scoring one of the Presidents' four runs in the sixth inning against Hingham.

NORTH QUINCY'S MARGUERITE BELCHER makes one of her 14 saves in the Red Raiders' 18-6 victory over Quincy. Moving in for a potential rebound are North Quincy's Evelyn Scuzzarella (#17) and Quincy's Riley McLaughlin. McLaughlin had a goal for the Presidents.

son) scored back-to-back goals for the Red Raiders and McGue scored again to give the Red Raiders a 9-2 lead with 7:49 left in the half.

Phelan scored and sophomore Riley McLaughlin tallied her twelfth goal of the season to bring Quincy (1-8) to within 9-4 with 2:47 left in the half.

Senior captains Noreen Palbutong and Nicole Lee have combined for 13 goals so far this season for the Presidents. Sophomore goalie Emi Guarente made 13 saves in net for the Presidents and that gives her a total of 76 saves on the season.

"She is making great saves," said Arakelian. "I'm very proud of her, she is stepping into the role very well, she is doing a great job for us and she's a good solid player on our defense."

McGue and Collins added goals in the final two minutes to send the Red Raiders into the locker room with an 11-4 advantage.

"This is (a) huge (win) for us because the program is definitely building," said McGue. "And I'm just happy that we're getting off (to) a good start at the beginning of the season and against Quincy of all teams."

Senior goalie Marguerite Belcher made eight saves in net for the Red Raiders to earn her second win of the season.

"I though she did amazing," said McGue. "And she is just getting better and better every game and it's really awesome to see that from her."

The Red Raiders showed the importance of their depth by having seven goal scorers which included McGue, Forde, Collins (five on the season), Cannon, McEvoy (five on the season), junior Katie Sautter and junior Savannah Flynn (three on the season).

"I definitely think that there is always a person that steps up when they need to," said McGue. "We have a lot of athletes and we have a lot of people that will step up to the (plate) when they need to and I just think everyone is feeding off each other really well and picking up lacrosse."

Phelan scored her 17th and 18th goals of the season in the second half for the Presidents.

"We're just going to work on our defensive strategy, getting the ball up on offense and just hustling more, we're going to work on our overall game," said Phelan.

This win was the second consecutive for the Red Raiders as they defeated Plymouth South 8-7 on Tuesday, April 14 behind a hat trick from McGue, two goals from Forde and a goal apiece from Collins, McEvoy and sophomore Abigail Koch. Belcher made 14 saves in net for the Red Raiders. Junior Charlotte Chretian picked up a pair of assists while Flynn, Koch and McEvoy each tallied one.

Quincy hosts Plymouth North at 11 a.m. on Friday, while the Red Raiders will travel to Hanover for a game at 4 p.m. on Tuesday.

The Red Raiders and Presidents will square off again on Thursday, April 30 at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Therrien talked about the importance of picking up a win in the city rivalry which now makes them 2-3 on the young season.

"It's a big rival so the kids are excited," she said. "So, I think that will help with the momentum going forward, just bringing that energy to the next games."

North Quincy Downs Durfee In Boys Volleyball

Jackie Chen Paces Straight Set Win With 16 Kills

By BILL GRIFFIN

The big points.

Frequently the shade of difference in volleyball between two evenly-matched teams is determined by which side steps up and makes the telling plays on the important points. It is most helpful to have the dominant player on the court for these moments, and that is exactly what North Quincy had in senior captain Jackie Chen in its match against Durfee.

Chen had 16 kills, 11 digs, two aces and served 11 consecutive winning points in the third game to lead the Red Raiders to an entertaining, well-played 25-21, 25-22, 25-18 decision over Durfee at the North Quincy gym Friday afternoon.

"We did play the big points well. It helps to have a go-to guy on those points like Jackie," smiled coach Jason Cai after his club went to 6-2 overall and 3-1 in the Southern Alliance. "I thought we played very well. Our intensity was good. You could hear that in our chants and the way we reacted on the court."

That focus showed itself in the big points. Begin with Game 1. North was up, 23-21. Chen dotted his spot with a perfect cross-court placement, and Eric Huang earned one of his 30 assists by setting up Calvin Ma (five kills, three digs) for the smash that put away the game. Two big points. North led, 1-0.

"Eric did a good job spreading around the ball. We cut down the number of different plays we run and I think that helped. He could just react and play," said Cai. "Calvin had good hits and played good defense. We've moved him to a new spot opposite Jackie, and he adjusted well."

Game 2. North rallied from down, 17-15 on the serving of Huang (nine straight winning points) and took a 24-18 lead. Durfee ran four straight to draw within, 24-22. Chen then stopped the rally by putting away a rocket from the left wing off a feed from Huang. A big point. North led, 2-0.

"Having Jackie hitting like that to decide the game is a big advantage for us," said Cai.

Game 3. Durfee led for most of the game and was up, 17-11 when Kevin Huang drove home a winner to change the momentum and give the serve to Chen. Game over. Match over. Chen relied on placement and accuracy rather than speed. He got 11 straight serves in play, all of them with spin and twists, which forced mistakes. North feasted on the chances, opened up a 23-17 lead, and put away the victory. 11 big points. North won, 3-0.

"That's all Jackie," said Cai. "I never tell him when to serve or what kind of serve he should use. Whether he wants to go for an ace, a winner, of if he wants to just place it in play, it's up to him."

"I just tried to stay calm, get it over and into play," said Chen.

The winning run showcased well the range of his skills. The serve is obvious. He had a big-time kill in the run. He had three digs, one a leaping left-handed save, that verged on the acrobatic. He kept points alive and moved the ball to the net where North could end the rally. Add up his digs and kills. The sum is 27 points – out of North's total of 75 – that he saved or finished.

"He is such a well-rounded player," said Cai. "Offense, defense, passing, and serving. He can give you the whole game. He really understands volleyball."

"I practiced a lot over the summer. I played in the Boston Nights League against players who were older and better than I am. It helped me improve," said Chen.

Anxhelo Taho (nine kills, three blocks, two assists) and Kevin Huang (four kills and one block) had strong matches playing the middle of the net. Shiggy Zheng returned serve well, had five digs and played a solid match at libero.

"Angelo and Kevin had very good timing timing at the net. They moved at just the right moment to take Eric's passes," said Cai. "Kevin had a big kill to change the momentum in the last game."

Cai's approach to the match was interesting. Mostly, he just watched. The players made the on-court calls. The players ran the huddles between games. Cai would rise and interject a thought or two during a timeout, but nothing too bothersome. Mostly he sat and saw a fine volleyball match. He had a good seat and a good plan.

"I wanted to let the players play their game without feeling any pressure from me," said Cai. "I just wanted them to just go and play volleyball. It's their team, their game. I thought they reacted well to it."

North will host Brockton Thursday at 2 p.m. The Red Raiders will take part in the Cambridge Invitational Sunday. North won the silver bracket in the event last year, and Cai felt it was a help to his team in the second half of the season.

"It's all-day volleyball. We must have played 12 matches to 21 points. It's great to push your body and get ready for the final part of the season," said Cai.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

Chiropractor

DOWN AT THE HEELS

Heel pain involving inflammation of the fibrous band of tissue (plantar fascia) that runs from the heel at the bottom of the foot is called "plantar fasciitis." The painful condition can be caused by inadequate footwear that leads to improper pronation, or it may result from "compensation," which involves moving the body in a new way in order to avoid pain. For example, plantar fasciitis may result from compensation for chronic Achilles tendonitis, and persistent plantar fasciitis pain may cause a shift in weight that throws the body out of alignment, leading to further complications. The good news is that the chiropractor can identify the cause of the inflammation and prevent it from leading to additional problems.

There are amazingly twenty six bones in the foot, each and every one capable of causing foot pain! We will only accept you as a patient if we sincerely believe we can help you. Let us at Family Practice of Chiropractic help you live your life to the fullest. A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, April 15, 2015, at approximately 3:00 a.m., Officers Thien Le, Bryan Donovan, Thomas Gaeta and K-9 Officer Chris McDermott were dispatched to a Whitwell address for a "Breaking and Entering" call in progress.

As the Officers arrived on scene, they immediately noticed the window of the front door was shattered inward. Officer McDermott immediately took out his Police dog while the other Officers surrounded the house. Officer McDermott then approached the main entrance, stepping around the glass.

As the Officer slowly walked in, he suddenly came across a male suspect in the main hallway. Officer Donovan, who was with Officer McDermott, drew his weapon and ordered the suspect to show his hands and get down on the ground. The suspect seemed unfazed by the presence of the Officers and did not respond. He just stared at the Officers as they kept instructing him to get to the ground. The Police dog was barking continuously and the Officers escalated their voices to get the suspect to comply. It was clear that the suspect was either not comprehending or planning action against the Officers to escape, so Officer Donovan quickly moved in on the suspect and brought him to the ground and handcuffed him.

Officers Gaeta and Le then entered the house and searched for any other suspects or people. They then went upstairs and advised the family that the situation was under control and they could come out of their bedroom. The suspect then began yelling, "I just broke into the house because I need help." The suspect smelled of alcohol, had slurred speech and his pants indicated that he had urinated on himself.

Sergeant Allison arrived on scene and went upstairs to speak to the occupants, a husband and wife who were naturally visibly shaken but unharmed. The Sergeant brought the owner downstairs to see if he knew the suspect and after a look, determined that he had never seen him before. Due to the suspect being saturated in urine, he was transported by police wagon to the station. Officer Le then interviewed the residents about what transpired before the Police arrived.

The wife said she heard someone ringing the door bell and thought it might be her mother, so she sent her husband down to open the door. The husband said that he made his way into the upstairs hallway as the bell was ringing again and looked down towards the door. He then heard and saw the glass door shatter and fled back to the bedroom to call the Police. After closer examination of the home, a pool of urine was found on the first floor bathroom. The suspect, a 56 year old man, provided an address of a local homeless shelter and was charged with, "Defacing or Vandalizing Real or Personal Property and Unarmed Burglary." Nice Work!

INCREASE IN MAIL SOLICITATIONS: informing people that they "are eligible for a $200 gift card." The letter instructs the reader to call to redeem the gift card and has a date listed when the offer expires (usually a few days to put pressure on the recipient). One letter in particular is signed, "Loyalty Rewards."

No one is going to give you a free gift card.

On the back page of this letter are the standard conditions for using it. It is lengthy, so most will not read it to the end. The last paragraph tells you that the recipient must attend a 90 minute open house/ presentation about "future travel business." It also requires the recipient to call a number to get more information, which will lead to high pressure tactics. A check of "Google" showed many companies who have Loyalty Rewards programs; however, since this offer does not provide the name of the company anywhere in the letter, it is best to stay away from such offers.

Schofield, with complete disregard for his personal safety, braved the devastating enemy fire as he treated the ailing man. While carrying his comrades to the rear Lt. Schofield was fatally wounded by an enemy rocket," the Silver Star citation read. "His valorous actions were responsible for saving several lives and the successful completion of the mission."

Coughlin was a lifelong Quincy resident and attended Quincy High School before enlisting in the Marine Corps in November 1967. He was on patrol duty near Quang Nam on Oct. 13, 1968, when he was hit by an explosive device. Coughlin died the following day; he was 19 years old.

Coughlin and Schofield both attended Quincy Point Junior High School. They and two other former students killed during the Vietnam War were memorialized by the school, which planted four maple trees in their honor.

Family members of the servicemen will speak at the dedications, joined by local officials. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci and Rep. Bruce Ayers will speak at the first dedication; Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes and Rep. Tackey Chan at the second; and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Sen. John Keenan at the final dedication.

A native of the Bronx, N.Y., Cregan is a pastor of Blessed Sacrament Parish in Alexandria, Va.

While studying at Fordham University in New York, Cregan enrolled in the U.S. Marine Corps Platoon Leaders Class program. At the time, enrollees in the program were required to complete three years of military service – Cregan served in the Marine Corps for 22 years.

Cregan spent tours of duty in North Carolina, Florida, Virginia, Cuba, Japan, and Vietnam. While in Vietnam he served as a rifle company commander; half of Cregan's company was lost in battle.

After the tour in Vietnam, he returned to the United States and began making notification calls, informing families their loved ones had been killed in combat.

Cregan began taking classes at Mount St. Mary's Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md., shortly before retiring from the Marine Corps. He was ordained on May 9, 1987.

Other speakers at the ceremony include Mayor Thomas Koch, U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch, and Keenan. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, the pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former U.S. Navy lieutenant, will deliver the invocation and benediction. Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, will open the ceremony and introduce the various dignitaries in attendance. Joseph McCain, a Navy veteran and brother of U.S. Sen. John McCain is also scheduled to appear at the ceremony.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The Lamb is usually excited about taking on a new challenge. But if that's a touch of doubt you're feeling, maybe it's you telling yourself to go slow on this until you learn more about it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Accepting new commitments when you haven't yet finished the batch on hand could be a bit rash. Better to ease up on the new ones until you get further along with your current lot.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Reward yourself for what's sure to be a dynamic week with a getaway to someplace wonderful, hopefully with a wonderful someone. You'll return refreshed and ready for what's ahead.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some people might be anxious about your plans. So you need to take time to explain what you expect to do and how you expect do it. And don't forget to ask for suggestions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Dealing with an unfamiliar problem can be difficult. The wisest course you can take is to ask for advice from those who have been where you are and have come through it. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Tackle a frustrating job problem by considering possibilities you might have ignored before. This reassures colleagues you're serious about finding a solution, even if it's not totally yours.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your balanced approach to life proves to be helpful this week when someone you care for needs your spiritual comfort, while someone else benefits from your tough-love practicality.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Once again, you're likely to be asked to keep a secret for someone. But do you really want to do so? Be honest with yourself and with your needs before you make any such commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Taking a more direct approach from the more diplomatic one you've used before could make a difference in finally resolving a too-long-held disagreement. Try it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Being asked for advice is flattering to the Sea Goat, who has a habit of saying the right thing. This time, expect someone to be especially impressed and to act on that sentiment.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With a number of pressures easing, your project could be making a lot more progress than you expected by this time. That's great news. But don't let yourself be distracted; stay with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An interesting challenge looms that could be exactly what you've been looking for. Discuss this with colleagues who could have much to contribute and who might want to join with you.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your heart is always open to offer loving concern for others. And they, in turn, reach out to complete the circle.

Quincy Bows In Baseball To SL, Pembroke, Hingham

By BILL GRIFFIN

It will take some time.

This is not an excuse. It is an explanation. Teams like Quincy who are trying to fill multiple holes left by graduation were impacted strongly by the almost non-existent outdoor practice time caused by the banks of snow which lined the fields as late as the final week in March.

Hitting will be the last to develop. A player can take 1,500 swings from an indoor cage and bash a pretend baseball against a gym wall for hours and days and weeks. However, that is far different from going outside and facing live pitching from an opposing hurler firing a real baseball off a real mound at real varsity speed. It is a brave, new world.

The winter rust showed in Quincy's opening week. Anthony Videtto spun a three-hitter through six innings to lead defending Patriot League champion Silver Lake past the Presidents, 10-2 at a cold and windy Adams Field last Thursday.

Earlier last week, Pembroke's Drew CaraDonna fanned 17 to out-duel Quncy's ace Greg Paulo in nine innings, 2-1. Paulo was terrific in the loss. He struck out 15 and gave just three hits through eight innings. Quincy had the bases loaded with no out in the bottom of the eighth, but CaraDonna escaped on a pair of strikeouts and a fly ball.

In a road game Saturday, Hingham dropped the Presidents, 5-2.

"Earlier in the year, it's always a pitcher's game because it's so cold," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan. "This year with the limited practice time, it's more true. We got outside for two days to hit in practice before the season. You can take all the swings you want indoors and it doesn't matter when you get outside. We'll hit. It will just take time outside."

The goal against Silver Lake was to build pitching depth behind the 1-2 punch of Paulo and Cody Desmond. Sophomore Owen Lynch made his first varsity start and threw well for Quincy. He impressed with a good fastball, he kept the ball down and he mixed in a breaking ball. He gave four hits and three runs through 2 2/3 innings, but was victimized by a bad-hop single and a bloop double which drove in runs in the Pembroke third.

Junior righty Peter Saccoach fired 1 2/3 innings of one-hit shutout relief for the Presidents. He placed his fastball well in recording a strikeout and retiring the side in order in the sixth.

"Owen did great in his first start. He gave us just what we needed which was three good innings," said Bryan. "We need to be more than Greg and Cody. We need to build our staff for when the schedule backs up. It will be difficult at first, but we want to be in position to make a good run at the tourney."

The hitting was challenging against Videtto, one of two returning aces from last year's 19-3 team which sent the Lakers to the Super 8. Junior Brendan Collins was the bright spot on offense for Quincy with a double, a walk, a stolen base and a run scored in three trips to the plate. Freshman Curtis Frazier posted his first varsity hit with a clean line drive and scored a run in the sixth.

Bobby Salvucci beat out an infield hit, and Alex Linskey drove in a run with a ground ball.

"Brendan is a good hitter. He'll have a spot in the middle of the lineup for us," said Bryan. "I was happy for Curtis. He a tough, little hitter. He doesn't back down from anyone."

Bryan was happy with his defense. Salvucci made the play of the game in the second, diving to his left at third base for a rocket of a ground ball. He picked it cleanly and made a strong throw to first for the out to save a run. Linskey made a fine grab in left with his back to the plate in the second. Junior catcher Joe Farracane did an excellent job on several pitches in the dirt.

"That was a great play by Bobby. If he doesn't get it, it is a run," said Bryan. "Linskey is a steady senior outfielder who should do a good job in left."

Pembroke broke out to a 3-0 lead in the third. Then Titans scored three in the fifth and four in the seventh.

The Presidents scored one in the sixth and one in seventh. In the sixth, Frazier led with a single and took second on an error. He went to third when Desmond was out on a close play at first and scored on a ground ball by Linskey. In the seventh, Collins walked, stole second and scored on a pair of errors.

In the Pembroke game, Quincy scored on a double by Desmond and an RBI single by Tyler Beach.

Quincy will play in the holiday-week tournament at Adams Field Thursday. Weymouth, Milton and North Quincy are in the tourney. Quincy's opponent and game time are still to be determined.

Burke Donates $5,750 To Purchase QHS Basketball Training Equipment

Quincy attorney George Burke recently donated $5,750 to Quincy High School to purchase a "Shootaway Gun," a piece of training equipment for the boys and girls basketball programs.

The "gun" is a powerful tool for developing shooting mechanics and for getting in a high number of reps in a short time. It basically consists of a net that collects missed shots and a passing machine that passes the ball to any place on the court that is selected by a player.

QHS Boys Basketball Coach David Parry and QHS Girls Basketball Coach Jeff Bretsch asked Burke for his assistance in the purchase of the equipment. The "gun" will be customized to read "Trigger's Gun" named after Burke whose nickname was "Trigger" when he set scoring records as a basketball player at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

All 68 teams in this year'sNCAA tournament own a programmable "Shootaway Gun" as do many local high schools. Both coaches said the training machine would help the boys and girls basketball programs succeed on the court.

Burke also notified Mayor Thomas Koch that he is dedicating "Trigger's Gun" to his mentor, Richard Koch, and his wife, Simmy Koch, and also the Koch Club for winning the State Semi-Pro Championship for all the good the Koch Club did in helping the youth of the City of Quincy.

$1.2M For City Hall Work

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night unanimously approved appropriating $1.2 million to cover costs related to the ongoing renovation of Old City Hall. A request to borrow another $3.5 million for the project was referred to the council's finance committee for further review; the committee will do so on May 18.

The project to restore the 171-year-old building began in September 2013. Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said Tuesday the renovations should be finished by August at a total cost of approximately $12 million.

The $1.2 million appropriated Monday comes from two sources; $637,000 is from unexpended funds borrowed for completed capital projects. Some of those projects date back more than a decade, such as $124,000 in unspent cash from the Water Department's 1998 five-year plan and $93,000 from a 2001 Water Department five-year plan.

The remaining $600,000 is from the $1.5 million bond authorized in September 2013 to pay for construction of a new park at the site of the former Quincy High School. Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh said the city saved $600,000 by having the work done in house instead of by private contractors.

City Awaits $1M To Study Police, Fire Headquarters

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials are waiting on a $1 million state grant that will be used to study the possibility of replacing fire and police headquarters.

Quincy's delegation on Beacon Hill was able obtain the grant for that amount, but the state has yet to release those funds, according to Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We have not gotten the release on that from the state. It's not automatic when they get this legislation through," Koch said in a recent interview. "The state only has so much bonding capacity each year, so they can't release everything the legislature

Council Backs College's Push For 4-Year Degrees

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy College is one step closer to awarding four-year degrees to the school's graduates.

The City Council on Monday night voted 9-0 in favor of sending a home rule petition to the state legislature, which would allow the college to confer baccalaureate degrees. The petition approved Monday includes a preamble that allows lawmakers to amend the bill, but only with the approval of the city's mayor.

"We view the opportunity to award baccalaureate degrees as a natural evolution of the college into a larger organization, which will provide more opportunities for individuals in the city of Quincy and in our service area," Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras told the council.

If lawmakers on Beacon Hill do approve the petition, Tsaffaras said there would be a "bottom up approach" to determine which programs would offer four-year degrees. The faculty and dean of each academic division would prepare an analysis of the plan, which would then go to the college senate for approval. Tsaffaras and the school's vice president of academic affairs would then need to approve the proposal before seeking authorization from the college's board of governors.

"This is a 10-year rollout type program. It's not something you could or actually should do overnight," Tsaffaras said, noting the earliest the college could begin offering four-year programs is September 2016, assuming the legislature approved the petition within six or eight

Presidential Footnotes In 'The City Of Presidents'

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Here's a Presidential pop quiz.

Who is the last sitting U.S. President to make a public appearance in Quincy?

The operative word there is "sitting." Former President Bill Clinton stopped in Quincy 10 years ago this month when he paid a visit to "Cradles to Crayons" in North Quincy before attending a fundraiser in Boston. He was greeted by then Mayor William Phelan and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who presented the former Commander-in-Chief a "City of Presidents" tie and tie tack.

And we're not looking for a future President who visited the city before he won the White House. John F. Kennedy, at the time a U.S. Senator, visited Quincy in 1958. During his time here he greeted youngsters who were part of the Koch Club and donned a baseball cap for one of the rare photos of JFK wearing a hat. The nation's 35th President wasn't too fond of hats.

We asked two local historians – Thomas Galvin and Dr. Ed Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society, this question. And it appears that the last U.S. President to visit the "City of Presidents" while in office was Harry S. Truman.

TRUMAN

That's right.

Harry Truman. You have to go back 11 Presidents - and 67 years - for the answer.

The year was 1948 and Truman, the Democratic incumbent, was running for a full four-year term. He had become President in 1945 after the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Truman and his Vice Presidential running mate, Alben Barkley, were challenged by Republican nominee Thomas Dewey and his running mate, Earl Warren. Also on the ballot in some states was Strom Thurmond, U.S. senator from South Carolina, who had formed the "Dixiecrat" ticket representing the State Rights Democratic Party with running mate Fielding Wright.

Truman defeated Dewey in what some historians have called the greatest election upset in American history. Truman was considered an underdog and predictions pointed to Dewey as the eventual winner.

But Truman won 28 votes and 303 electoral votes to win a four-year term. Dewey won 16 states and 189 electoral votes while Thurmond won four states and 39 electoral votes.

The 1948 Presidential election also spawned one of the most iconic photographs in political history. Taken the day after the election on Nov. 3, 1948, it shows a beaming Truman, the winner, holding the front page of the Chicago Tribune that had jumped the gun with the headline "Dewey Defeats Truman." The President, returning home to Independence, Missouri, held the paper and quipped, "That ain't the way I heard it."

Just five days before Truman's historic victory on Nov. 2 the nation's 33rd President had stumped in Quincy. His appearance here on Oct. 28, 1948 was part of Truman's famous "Give 'Em Hell, Harry" whistle stop tour.

Truman was introduced by Quincy Mayor Charles Ross and made remarks at 7:30 a.m. at United First Parish Church before dashing off to other campaign stops in the Bay State. It is the only church in the country where two Presidents (John Adams and John Quincy Adams) and their wives, First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams, are entombed in the crypt of the church.

Part of Truman's speech included this excerpt:

"I am very glad to be here in this historic city this morning, and it is a very high honor to be presented to you on the steps of this church where two great men and their wives are buried.

"You know, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson were political enemies, but they became fast friends. And when they passed away, on the same day, the last words of one of them was, 'The country is safe. Jefferson still lives.' And the last words of the other was, 'John Adams will see that things go forward.'

"You can't beat that in a Republic like this, my friends. That is what makes this country great. We can have our political fights, but we understand that the other fellow has a perfect right to his views no matter what they may be, and he has a right to express them. That is what makes the Constitution of the United States the greatest document of government in the history of the world."

Truman also was here to stump for Democrat David Concannon who was trying to unseat Republican Cong. Richard Wigglesworth in the 13th District.

"I have known about Quincy all my life, of course, because it is and has been the home of these two great men," Truman said. "Now, I sincerely hope--I sincerely hope that you good citizens here will send David Concannon to the Congress because I will have somebody I can work with, if you do that."

Wigglesworth, who won his first election to Congress in a special election in the 14th District in 1928, defeated Concannon 56 to 43 percent. He would serve in Congress until 1958.

In the 1948 Presidential Election, Truman won Massachusetts (54 to 43 percent) and at the time its 16 electoral votes but the President did not carry Quincy. However, the vote here was close. Dewey polled 19,946 votes while Truman received 18,491 votes here – a difference of 1,455 votes out of 39,954 cast. Turnout was 87 percent of the city's 45,990 registered voters.

While it doesn't appear that another sitting president has stopped in Quincy for a public appearance since Truman, the city was a familiar landing spot for previous chief executives.

We thank Ed Fitzgerald for uncovering these Presidential historical footnotes with regard to visits to Quincy by occupants of the White House.

FDR

• President Franklin D. Roosevelt and First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt came to Quincy on Oct. 21, 1936. FDR had also visited Quincy in 1933. Both were "open car" visits and 1936 was part of a campaign swing.

FDR visited the Adams Birthplaces and stopped in front of First Parish Church. Eleanor got a bouquet of flowers from Mayor Thomas Burgin's daughter, Claire, who was then a little girl.

COOLIDGE

Earlier visits by U.S. Presidents:

• President Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge stopped in Quincy on July 15, 1925. They visited the John Adams Birthplace and stopped in front of the United First Parish Church. Fitzgerald said that Coolidge also inspected the aircraft carrier Lexington that was under construction at the Fore River shipyard. Coolidge also sailed here on a Presidential watch named "The Mayflower."

While FDR and Coolidge visited the United First Parish Church, they did not visit the crypt where the Presidents and First Ladies are entombed. The reason may be that the crypt at that time was not in very visitable shape - unlike today.

A U.S. President pausing at the tombs of John Adams and John Quincy Adams would be an experience - and photo op - that many would want to be a part of.

• President Howard Taft - Coolidge's predecessor - visited Quincy on April 29, 1912. This was also a campaign swing. Teddy Roosevelt, at that time a former president who was challenging the incumbent Taft for the Republican nomination for President, had spent time in Quincy the weekend before. Taft, of course, had also been here for the 1910 Harvard Air meet in Squantum in September, 1910. Galvin, who has a vast and varied collection of postcards that he provides to The Quincy Sun for his popular "Quincy's Yesterdays," column, has a postcard showing Taft at this meet. It's been published several times in The Sun courtesy of Galvin.

In researching this topic, Fitzgerald also came up with another Presidential visit that was mentioned in David McCullough's biography on John Adams. President James Monroe, on a tour of New England, came to Quincy to dine with John and Abigail Adams on July 7, 1817.

Candidates for president, vice president and some First Ladies have also visited Quincy. Adlai Stevenson, former governor of Illinois and Democratic nominee in 1952, who would lose to Dwight D. Eisenhower in the Presidential Election that year, visited Quincy during a whistle stop tour in 1952. Joe Biden visited on a campaign stop in 2012. And First Lady Hillary Clinton - who is making her second run for the Democratic Presidential nomination - drew a large crowd in front of the Thomas Crane Library during a stop in Quincy in 1996. And Lady Bird Johnson was a visitor to the Adams National Historical Site.

There are probably others but it seems, in some respects anyway, that Quincy is not on the radar of Presidents and presidential contenders when it comes to campaigning or visiting here.

There have been instances where eventual Presidents stopped near here. In 1979, Ronald Reagan attended a South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast in Randolph when he was running for president and also famously sipped a beer at the Eire Pub in neighboring Dorchester - but for the most part, Quincy is not seen as a destination like it was back in the early and mid 20th century.

One could speculate that John F. Kennedy would have made it back this way while he was President - but of course his time in the White House was tragically cut short by an assassin in 1963.

So why the Presidential drought here?

One could reason that Presidential elections are waged far differently now. Social media, TV ads and guest appearances on Sunday morning news programs - not to mention the late night comedy circuit - are more efficient at getting messages across than stopping on the steps of a local historical site.

Massachusetts – with its 11 electoral votes – is not considered a "swing state." Of the last 14 Presidential Elections dating back to 1960, the Democratic nominee has won the Bay State 12 times. The exception: Republican Ronald Reagan's victories in 1980 and 1984. A state "more in play" like electoral vote-rich Ohio or Florida is more on the political radar than the Bay State.

Even visits to the Bay State by presidential contenders pale in comparison to other states.

Seems if you want to have a front row seat to Presidential politics, you have to travel to New Hampshire - site of the first-in-the-nation primary. Candidates flock there because a win there can catapult a second-tier candidate into front-runner status.

That's unfortunate for a city of historical stature like Quincy.

After all, the distance from the Granite State border to Quincy – and all its roots in the birth of this nation - is less than 60 miles away.

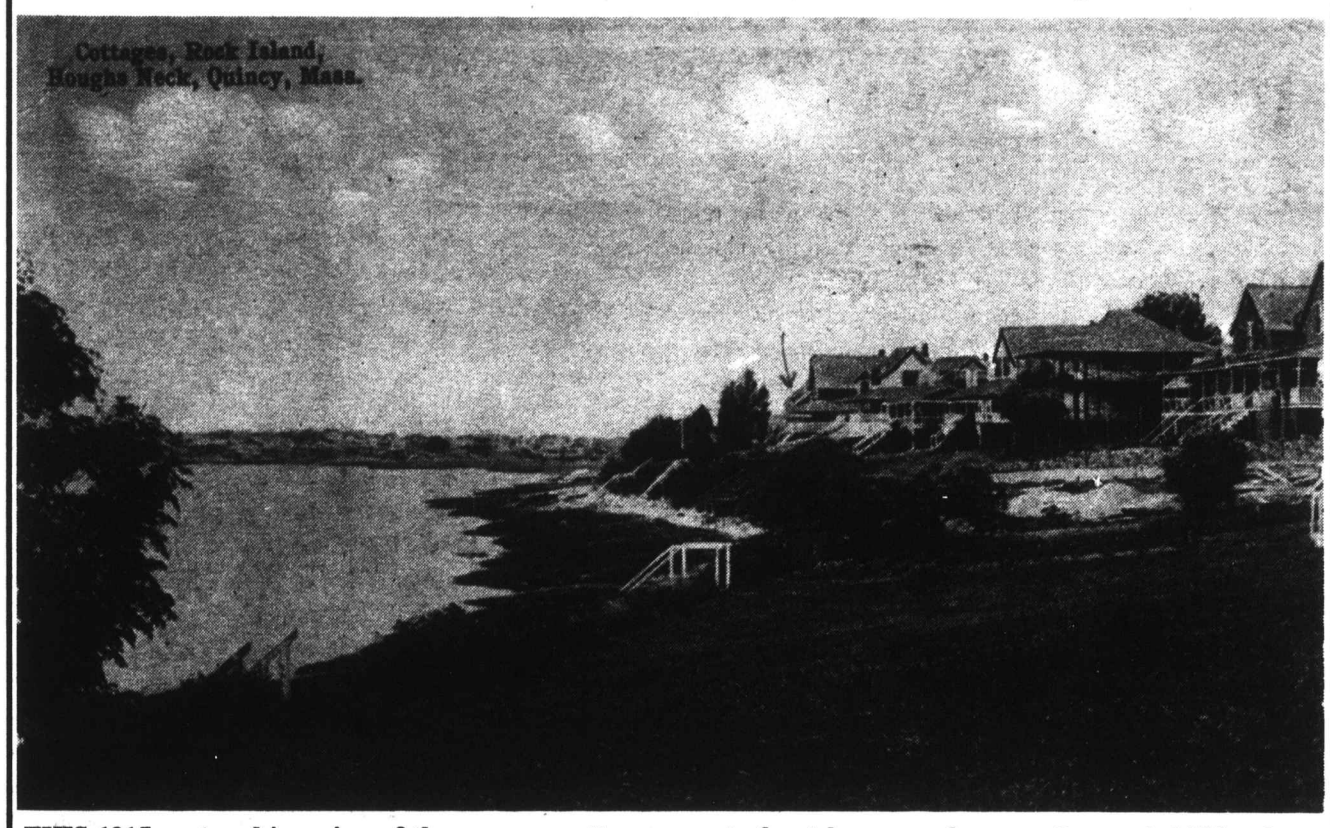
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS 1915 postcard is a view of the summer cottages built just over 100 years ago facing Rock Island Cove in Hough's Neck. This part of Rock Island was inaccessible by land until a bridge was built on Rock Island Road in 1904 to cross over a creek. The Manet Land Company then laid out these house lots separating every three or four with small public access roads to the water. Today, most of these cottages have been converted to year-round waterfront homes and are pretty much hidden from view by trees and bushes. Most all of them have private piers and floats for their boats and many have swimming pools. On the left the view is across Rock Island Cove towards the Crusher. 21 Appointments Beef Up Police, Fire Depts.

Appointments and promotions of 21 men will beef up and step up the efficiency of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments.

The 21 men representing the largest single change in personnel for the two protective branches in recent years were sworn in this week at City Hall.

It will give both departments more manpower and flexibility and bring into existence a Police Narcotics Division to fight the ominous rise in drug abuse especially among Quincy teenagers.

Mayor James R. McIntyre, who made the appointments and promotions said, "They are needed and will increase the efficiency of both departments, giving Quincy a first class line of defense against both fire and crime."

SECOND PARKING HEARING SET MONDAY

The City Council will set a date for a second public hearing on the proposed 140-car municipal parking lot on Mechanic Street at its May 5 regular meeting.

The second hearing is necessary, Council President J. Vincent Smyth noted, because of opposition registered at the first public hearing.

Proponents argued that the project is necessary for the "economic vitality of not only the downtown business district but the city in general."

Opponents countered that the problem is not one of a need for parking but one relieving traffic congestion.

NQHS Drama Club's 'The Sound Of Music' Friday, Saturday, Sunday

Performancs In Peter J. Chrisom, Sr. Auditorium

The North Quincy High School Drama Club will present the musical "The Sound of Music" Friday, May 1 at 7 p.m., Saturday, May 2 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m. in the Peter J. Chrisom Sr. Auditorium.

Tickets are $10.

The cast includes not only students from NQHS, but also students from Quincy middle, elementary, and pre-schools. Over the course of the weekend, the role of Gretl, the youngest von Trapp, will be shared by four daughters of NQHS teachers.

Luke Molloy, an eighth grade student at Central Middle School, will conduct the pit orchestra. Michael MacRae, a senior playing "Uncle" Max Detweiler, says, "The younger students' talent and professionalism is incredible. Working on numbers like 'The Lonely Goatherd' with them has been a blast."

To create the musical's settings, which include the mountainous Austrian landscape, the von Trapp villa, and the graveyard of the Nonnberg Abbey, the directors enlisted Mike Bowes and his carpentry students, along with a multitude of other student and staff volunteers. Many set pieces have been recycled and refurbished from previous Drama Club performances. Tom Ducette of Quincy High School helped install long-needed new stage lights, and other improvements to the auditorium will be made next year, thanks to Principal Rob Shaw, an enthusiastic supporter of the arts, and his administration.

The shared DIY method was also used in creating the costumes. "They were a true collaborative effort, with staff from several departments custom designing many outfits," explains School Psychologist–Turned–Costume Mistress, Peggy Farren.

Staff from several departments will also find themselves in the spotlight during the large party scene, which includes a dance number choreographed by Marisa Smith. "With such a classic show, you want to do it justice while at the same time bringing our own creative element to the dances," Smith tells us. "It's been a lot of fun choreographing this show with the cast, students from the dance class, and the faculty and staff. I think our sense of unity here at North Quincy High will really shine through this show."

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Mixed Berry Crumble

By MARIE

On Easter Sunday, each of us brought something to the table. And one of the several desserts was a mixed berry one that my daughter Rita made with raves from all of us.

MIXED BERRY CRUMBLE

4 cups mixed berries (including blueberries, raspberries, blackberries and strawberries)
1/3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon lemon zest
2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with 1 tablespoon orange juice
dash of salt

Mix all together in a bowl.

For the topping
1/2 cup flour
1 cup oats
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
6 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients with finger tips or hand mixer.

In a casserole dish, place the berries, and add the crumb topping on top. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes until bubbly. Some of us had whipped cream or ice cream. What a great treat.

Chocolate Banana Oat Cookies

By SUZIE

Sometimes we just have to eat some cookies. I always try to help people by teaching them how to upgrade their choices. Instead of baking with a lot of white flour and white sugar, how about using some healthy ingredients instead, so you can enjoy them without the guilt.

Here we have some cookies baked with raw cacao powder. Now this is a bit different than "cocoa" powder because the bean of the cacao plant contains a naturally rich supply of antioxidants and are a good source of fiber.

Raw cacao powder is milled in a way to protect all of these important nutrients and is completely unadulterated. It is known to be one of the highest sources of magnesium (very important and many are deficient) flavanols, and polyphenols. It is also a good source of iron and potassium as well.

Bananas are naturally sweet and add even more important potassium, some b vitamins, and vitamin C, and the oats also contain potassium, protein, iron, and some b vitamins. Adding a bit of real maple syrup will give you a good amount of iron and calcium and the brown rice flour, unlike white flour is easier to digest and contains a good amount of fiber, iron, magnesium and B6 (see a trend here?)

So if someone sees you eating these cookies, try to remember all the good nutrients to repeat back to them!

CHOCOLATE BANANA OAT COOKIES

2 cups oats
2 RIPE bananas
4 tablespoons maple syrup (the real stuff)
4 tablespoons cacao powder (different than cocoa powder, this is unadulterated and contains many more important nutrients!)
1/3 cup raisins
3/4 cup brown rice flour (you can also use almond meal)

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

2. Start by mashing the bananas well in a bowl, then add the syrup, oats, cacao powder and mix thoroughly. Then add the flour and raisins and mix again until smooth.

3. Spoon a heaped spoonful of the mixture into your hands, mold into a ball and push to form a thin circle on your baking tray. Make them very flat to make sure they get lovely and crisp all the way through.

5. Place in the oven and bake for around 15-20 minutes, until crisp.

Poached Chicken and Mushroom Cream Sauce

By MARIE

It seems that there is no end as to how to cook chicken. I recently came across a recipe for poached chicken that was different and delicious.

The difference between making chicken in soup and poaching it is you don't use as much water for poaching.

I used chicken thighs with the bones for today's recipe because the dark meat seems to have more flavor.

POACHED CHICKEN WITH MUSHROOM GRAVY

3-4 chicken thighs
Enough water to cover
salt and pepper to taste
A small amount of cut celery and onion

Cream sauce
4-5 ounces of fresh mushroom slices (cooked slightly)
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
Liquid from the poaching
1cup whole milk

Cook the chicken covered on low heat until done. Set aside.

In a sauce pan, saute the butter then the flour making a roux. Add a cup or so of the liquid from the poaching and stir until smooth. Add the mushrooms and the milk and cook until done,

Pour over the chicken. I served the chicken whole, but if you prefer, it can be cut up in pieces.

22 Quincy Girl Scouts Earn Cookie Club Distinction

Sell 500 Or More Packages Of Cookies

Twenty-two Quincy Girl Scouts earned recognition as members of Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts' (GSEM) 500 Club, a distinction for girls who sell 500 or more packages of cookies during the annual December – March cookie sale.

This year, 350 council girls achieved this level of cookie program success.

Collectively, Kylie Davis, Kelsey Rose, Kassandra Dineen, Brianna Cristiani, Amy Trillcott, Amanda Powers, Aisling Mannion, Jessamine Bearchell, Colleen McDonough, Alison Cahill, Isabelle Assaf, Sarah Patacchiola, Gabi Popa, Sabrina Soto, Molly Cronin, Paola Arguedas-McClay, Brianna Joyce, Isabella Carinci, Anna Adams, Katelyn Stirling, Paris Vestal and Ashley Little sold an impressive 17,561 to earn this honor. Despite a winter of below-freezing temperatures and record-setting snowfall, 500 Club membership in eastern Massachusetts increased by 54 percent from 2014.

All members of the 500 Club were honored at a first-time event in partnership with the Boston Celtics. At the March 29 Celtics game, the top sellers served as "Anthem Buddies" – standing with the players as the national anthem played – conducted a flag ceremony on the court, and participated in the High-Five Tunnel.

During the cookie program, girls work toward a common goal as part of a team. The money earned from cookie sales funds service projects, field trips, summer camp and more. Service contribution is emphasized through the Cookies for a Cause initiative – Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts donated nearly 50,000 packages of cookies through Care-Packs in South Weymouth, New England Center for Homeless Veterans in Boston, Helping our Troops in Stoneham, Operation Troop Support in Danvers, The Greater Boston Food Bank, Pierce's Pantry (gluten free cookies), as well as local food pantries.

"The Girl Scout Cookie Program teaches girls essential life skills, including goal setting, decision making, money management, people skills and business ethics," said Patricia Parcellin, CEO of Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts. "Along the way they earn money to support troop and program activities, attend camp and help fund community leadership projects, and the most successful also earn membership in the 500 Club. These incentives help motivate girls to achieve their goals and reach even higher."

American Cancer Society Seeks Teams For Relay For Life

The American Cancer Society is recruiting teams from businesses, schools, families, places of worship, and more to participate in the Relay For Life of Quincy event, which will be held June 26-27 at Pageant Field.

Relay For Life teams are committed to finishing the fight against cancer and raise funds to support the American Cancer Society's lifesaving mission. Teams and individuals can sign up for the Relay For Life event by visiting www.relayforlife.org/QuincyMA or by calling 1-800-227-2345.

The Relay For Life program is a community-based event where teams and individuals set up campsites at a school, park or fairground and take turns walking or running around a track or path. Each team has at least one participant on the track at all times. Cancer survivors and caregivers take a celebratory first lap to start each event. Four million people participated in more than 6,000 events worldwide in 2014. Last year, over 300 people participated in Quincy and raised over $104,000 all to support the Society's mission to finish the fight against cancer once and for all.

"The Relay For Life movement unites communities across the globe to celebrate people who have battled cancer, remember loved ones lost, and take action to finish the fight once and for all," said Charlotte McLaughlin, the Relay For Life event lead. "Many participants are our family, friends, and neighbors who have faced cancer themselves. Each new team that registers brings us one step closer to saving more lives."

$895,000 For Preservation Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council Monday night approved allocating $895,000 towards community preservation projects, including the restoration of two fire stations and improvements to several city parks.

Of the money approved during this week's meeting, $300,000 will go to the city's Public Buildings Department to restore the Quincy Point and Wollaston firehouses. Both are on the National Register of Historic Places.

The remaining amount – $595,000 – is for the Park Department for several projects. Those include $360,000 for installation of new lighting at Bishop Playground in Montclair, the Fenno Street Courts within Merrymount Park, Russell Park in Faxon Field, and Welcome Young Playground on Sagamore Street in North Quincy.

Also included is $75,000 to renovate Therrien Soccer Field on Quarry Street, $60,000 to renovate the field at Cleverly Court in Quincy Point, $50,000 to construct a loop trail at Faxon Park, and $50,000 to build a cricket pitch at General Palmer Field in Germantown.

Typically, the community preservation requests are approved in June. These projects were approved earlier to allow work to commence sooner, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who is also the vice chairman of the city's Community Preservation Committee.

"Given the exigency of the projects that are before you this evening and the timeframe for bidding and getting the projects underway, the committee has concluded its work for the year, made its recommendation and vetted each of these projects over the course of the last four months," Coughlin said.

Other community preservation projects will go before the council for a vote in June.

Quincy's voters adopted the state's Community Preservation Act by referendum in 2008. The community preservation fund is financed through a one percent surcharge on property taxes. The first $100,000 in assessed value for each residential property is exempt from the surcharge, as are residential properties owned by some seniors and those who qualify for low-income housing.

The state also matches a portion of CPA funds in each community that has adopted the act.

Voters in the 2013 municipal election approved the adoption of amendments made to the CPA. Under that amendment, additional city revenue sources – such as hotel/motel tax receipts – can be included in the CPA fund and made eligible for matching money from the state.

ABOUT TWO DOZEN Quincy residents attended a recent screening of "Dirt, The Movie" at the Thomas Crane Public Library. Sally Owens hosted the event in conjunction with the Department of Public Works as part of the Environmental Treasures Program. The film tells the story of "the glorious and unappreciated . . . history of the living organic matter. . ." that acts as the skin of our planet. The viewiong was followed by a tour of the DPW's composting operation.

$4M For Point Pump Station

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 44-year-old sewer pumping station in Quincy Point will receive $4 million in upgrades.

The City Council on Monday night approved a request to borrow the $4 million for the project. The pump station, located at the corner of Chubbuck Street and Des Moines Road, was built in 1971 and last renovated in 1985. A report presented to the council indicated the station is approaching the end of its useful life.

"In my opinion this is a story about the DPW being proactive in a situation and not standing by to wait for something to fail," Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall said. "The actual station is quite a bit old."

Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi said the project is being undertaken to prevent sewer backups in the surrounding area. Odor control has also been an issue; the pump station is located in a residential neighborhood.

"The objective of this project is to prevent potential sanitary sewer overflows in the area due to equipment failure or force main failure within the air release valve structures," Raymondi said. "Odor control at this particular pump station has been an issue, so a critical component of this renovation is to remove and replace the odor control unit."

The money for the project will be borrowed from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust, which allows communities to use low cost financing to complete water and wastewater infrastructure projects.

State Delegation Hears Concerns Over Student Testing

Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation recently met with School Committee Member Paul Bregoli and School Committee Vice Chairwoman Kathy Hubley, as well as Mayor Tom Koch, to listen to concerns over Federal and State requirements for teacher evaluation and student testing.

The committee members – who met with House Majority Leader Ron Mariano, state Rep. Tackey Chan, and state Sen. John Keenan – raised concerns that the evaluation criteria, and excessive test preparation for elementary age children, overburden teachers and reduce their ability to innovate and connect with their students. These concerns stretch back to the establishment of frequent MCAS testing, but Bregoli said he believes the adoption of new Common Core testing requirements would be even more burdensome and constricting than the current system.

Mariano, who noted he was one of only six House Democrats who voted against the 1996 reform that expanded MCAS testing, said that the concerns resonate with state officials, but that the focus of debate among education advocates, teachers, and other stakeholders, has shifted almost entirely to supporting or opposing the growth of charter schools. He urged the Quincy school committee members to take their message to other cities and towns and begin raising awareness and organizing reform goals. Mariano, Chan and Keenan pledged to continue this discussion and work with local leaders to keep up the City's high educational standards and results.

John McCone Candidate For Ward 1 Councillor

John McCone of 111 Darrow St. in the Houghs Neck section of Quincy will kick off his campaign for Ward 1 city councillor at a reception Thursday, May 7 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

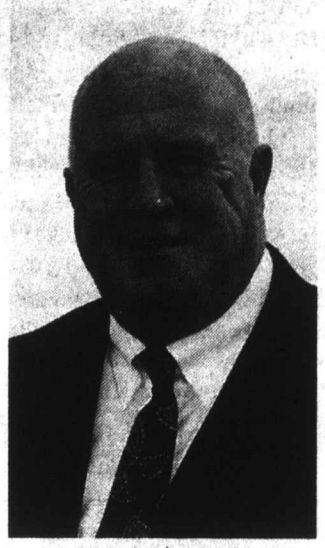
The event is open to the public and all are welcome to attend.

McCone will be challenging incumbent councillor Margaret Laforest who told The Sun she will seek re-election this fall.

In making his bid for the Ward 1 seat, McCone said:

"I have been a Quincy resident for 28 years. My wife Patricia and I have three beautiful daughters Brenda, Amy and Judy. We are blessed with seven grandchildren. I believe in being involved in the community in which I live and my passion is to help people in my community.

"As a city councillor I would be able to do more than give residents just the latest information or updates on an issue. Updating people is important but I would work with and help residents with issues that affect them directly, help resolve problems they may be having with city services, answer questions they may have.



JOHN McCONE
Sheryl's Photography

"The affordability of home ownership, flood insurance, the quality of roads, sidewalks, city services, the ongoing improvement of public facilities, public safety and insuring that the jobs created by economic development are jobs that go to local residents are all issues that affect us," McCone said.

McCone has served as a management professional in the telecommunications and technology field for 37 years. He attended Stonehill College and Northeastern University in the study of Management Information Systems.

As part of his job McCone said he gained training and experience in disaster and emergency recovery. He said he put his training and experience to good work in several national and regional disasters including the World Trade Center, Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Sandy.

McCone has been involved in the community for years volunteering in several programs at the Long Island Shelter, five years as the Event Coordinator for Quincy's First Night Family Celebration, and Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club Disabled Vet's Day. He has organized local beach clean-ups, substance abuse education programs and community food drives.

McCone said his extensive work experience, long-standing commitment to the community and to citizens qualifies him to seek election.

Mayor's Prayer Breakfast May 7 At Lodge Of Elks

Mayor Thomas P. Koch announces the city's annual Prayer Breakfast, coinciding with the National Day of Prayer, will take place on Thursday, May 7th at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Koch noted the importance of coming together as community, united in faith and prayer. "Each year, the Prayer Breakfast provides the opportunity for us to pause and appreciate the blessings bestowed upon our great City. We are fortunate to have the houses of worship unite in the spirit of praise and thanksgiving for the place we all call home."

The Quincy Prayer Breakfast is planned by various faith leaders and community members. "Helping to plan the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast offers me the opportunity to contribute to bringing people of different faith traditions together to build understanding and unity for our city and our world," said Rev. Felix Carrion of Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Kumu Gupta of VPS International recognized the diversity of faith throughout the city and the reward of being involved with the event. "Helping with the breakfast gives me a chance to bring the combined blessings to the city for the betterment of the community," she said.

Proceeds from the event will benefit The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion, Salvation Army and Interfaith Social Services. Captain Timothy Ross, Corps Commanding Officer of The Salvation Army said, "Quincy's Annual Prayer Breakfast is a magnificent occasion that not only brings together the citizens of Quincy from many different faith traditions to unite in prayer but also the opportunity to partner together so that a helping hand can be extended to our neighbors during their hour of need."

Rick Doane, executive director of Interfaith Social Services, emphasized the significance of starting the day with prayer as a community, adding, "Knowing that all of the funds raised at the breakfast go directly to helping Quincy residents who are struggling to provide the basic necessities for their families makes the event that much more meaningful."

Quincy's Tirrell Room located at 254 Quarry St. will host this year's event with a full breakfast including: eggs, French toast, bacon, sausage, home fries, fresh fruit, a vegetarian dish, an assortment of juices and more.

The program and breakfast run from 7 to 8:30 a.m. Tickets are $35 for an individual ticket and $250 for a table of ten. To order tickets online go to: www.InterfaithSocialServices.org For additional information, or to order tickets over the phone, call 617-847-6967.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Tours

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for its first public tour of the season this Saturday, May 2, between noon and 4 p.m.

Tours will start approximately on the hour and half hour beginning at noon. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution would be appreciated.

Dating from 1686, the house is 329 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617-742-3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org. The remaining public tours this season will be held on June 6, June 20, July 18, Aug. 1, Aug. 15, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3.

Diom O'Connell, the project architect from Holmes and Edwards, outlined several issues workers encountered while renovating the building. Graves and crypts at the Hancock Cemetery next to City Hall were closer to the building than expected, for example, so special equipment was needed to make sure they weren't damaged during excavation. The building's foundation was constructed with rubble – leaving holes the size of a fist in it – and had to be cut and covered in a waterproof membrane. Asbestos was found embedded in layers of drywall installed over the course of time.

"It's a painful thing for the city to go through. It's a painful project in many ways for us all to go through," O'Connell said. "But it's the pain we must go through in order to restructure, reposition a building that is 170 years old and has been neglected for many, many years."

Councillor Doug Gutro asked O'Connell and city officials present at the meeting if they had a breakdown of the additional costs incurred during the project.

Al Grazioso, the city's director of operations, said the City Hall work and the Coddington Building restoration originally financed under the same $18 million bond came in a combined $1.2 million over estimate when the city went out to bid on the projects. Additional work on the projects totaled $3.5 million.

"When the Coddington bid came in, it came in higher than the estimates. So right off the bat a million dollars was taken from this project and put over to Coddington. This job also came in higher than what was anticipated. We were starting with a shortfall of about $1.2 million," Grazioso said. "When you add on the additional costs – change orders, upgrades, contingencies, which is another $3.499 million – that is how we get to the $4.7 million."

Gutro said he was concerned about the projects coming in over estimate. He noted this had happened previously, such as when several school roof projects included in a 2011 capital improvement plan came in over estimate.

"We need to do a better job estimating the costs, because it feels like we just have an open checkbook for all these projects," Gutro said. "I feel in a sense like Pavlov's dog, where I'm conditioned to think every time we cast a vote on an appropriation, you're going to come back and ask for more money."

A breakdown of the added costs was not provided Monday night. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said officials need to provide a breakdown of the $3.5 million in added costs at the May 18 meeting when the bond for that amount is considered.

"I don't think I'm prepared to vote on a $3.5 million bond package without seeing a constituent detail – some line item detail," he said. "I'm not going to vote looking at a Monet impressionistic view of what the overages are. I want to look at Andrew Wyeth-type detail."

The $637,000 in unexpended funds from capital projects could only be reappropriated to pay for other capital projects, such as the City Hall work, according to Jim Powers, the city's outside auditor. Under state law, the city could not use those funds to pay back the initial bonds or other debt.

The money came from approximately 30 different capital improvement projects. They were the only finished capital projects with unspent money remaining on the city's books.

"I commend the city that they've caught up with this and they're going to appropriate it, get it off the books and have a clean slate," outside financial advisor Cinder McNerney said.

City Auditor Susan O'Connor said she reviewed each source of the unexpended funds to make sure the capital project had been completed.

"This is a novel approach to solving a budgetary issue," Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said. "I liken it to the municipal version of digging in the couch cushions – finding what is lying around so we don't have to borrow it in the future, easing the burden on the taxpayers."

Several councillors said the city needs to look for unexpended funds from completed capital projects on a more frequent basis moving forward. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin suggested the council receive notice each time a capital project is finished with money left in the bank.

"There ought to be a protocol that we can set up so when some of these projects…when they're completed, somebody that is managing that project signs off and closes it out," Coughlin said. "At that point, there could be something that is brought back before the council that says 'this bond is completed for this project, now we can repurpose this money,' rather than just let it sit there."

months.

The college has already had discussions about which departments could have four-year programs, according to Tsaffaras. The school's department of natural and health sciences has expressed interest in offering a four-year degree. The bachelor's degrees may also be available for the nursing, criminal justice, and business programs.

Some programs would continue to award certificates or two-year associate's degrees along with the four-year degree; others may switch to only offering four-year degrees or stay at just a two-year degree. Bachelor's programs would be offered at the college's Quincy and Plymouth campuses, though every program may not be available at both.

"Each program would be taken on a case-by-case basis," Tsaffaras said.

The cost for offering four-year degrees will be determined on a program-by-program basis, he added. Though the college is owned by the city, Tsaffaras said the new plan would not cost the city anything; Quincy College does not receive any funds from the city or state.

Quincy College leases 105,000 square feet of space at Presidents Place on Hancock Street – that space is leased until 2020 – and uses additional classroom space in nearby Saville Hall for science programs. Tsaffaras said that space wouldn't be sufficient to accommodate four-year programs. The college is looking at renting additional square footage at Presidents Place and in the future it may participate in plans for downtown revitalization.

"We are doing a couple things to accommodate additional demand. We're looking for additional space at Presidents Place," Tsaffaras said. "We're talking with the mayor and members of the administration regarding the possibility of participating in the downtown development project and having a new, single home for the college at some point in the future. We're continuing to expand in Plymouth as well at Cordage Park."

Twenty-one states allow community colleges to award four-year degrees to graduates, Quincy College administrators explained at Monday's meeting. California is the latest state to authorize community colleges to do so.

"Rather than detract from the mission of the state universities or the state colleges, it has actually enhanced their mission," Tsaffaras said, referring to California. "It has, along with other states, been a great success."

The college's students were surveyed on the idea of adding four-year programs; 85 percent expressed support for it. College administrators also noted that 50 percent of incoming students each year say they intend to seek a bachelor's degree.

"I think this only gives Quincy and other area residents a great alternative to the other options out there," Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said. "It looks like something students want and appears to be sustainable by tuition."

Quincycyles Community Bike Ride May 9

Quincycles will host a leisurely community bike ride Saturday, May 9 along a route proposed for bicycle lanes and "sharrows," or "shared lane markings," as part of this year's Bay State Bike Week.

The ride begins at 9 a.m. and departs Atlantic Middle School, 86 Hollis Ave. It is being co-sponsored by Mayor Koch's Bicycle Commission and the Planning Department and supported by the Community Police Unit of the Quincy Police Department.

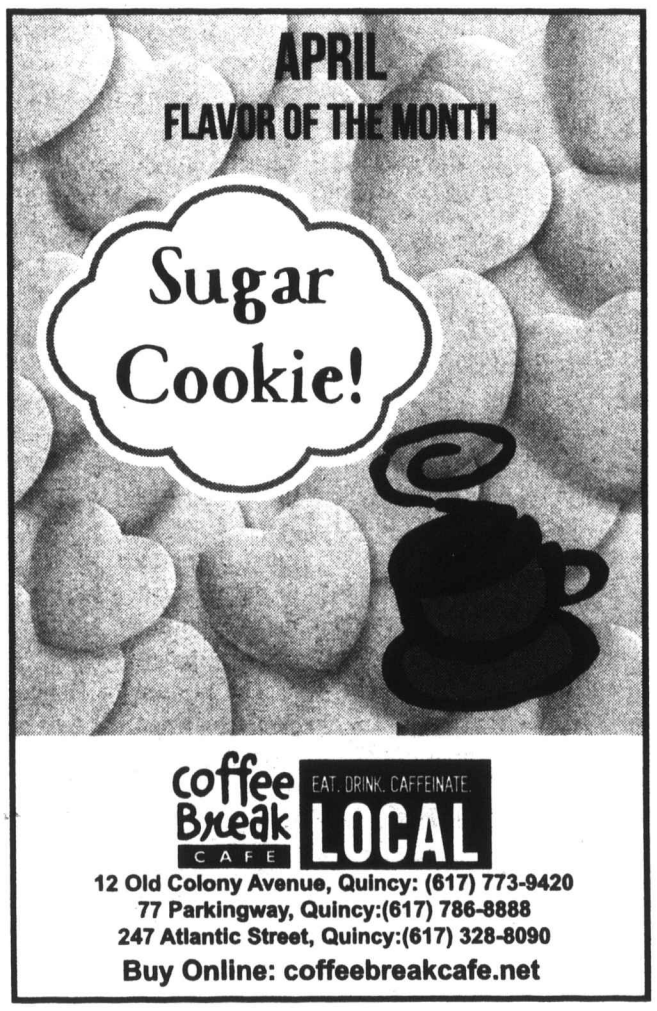
The route being ridden May 9th follows the Quincy Spine, a path prioritized for bicycle infrastructure in the City's Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan. The plan was adopted by the City Council in January 2015.

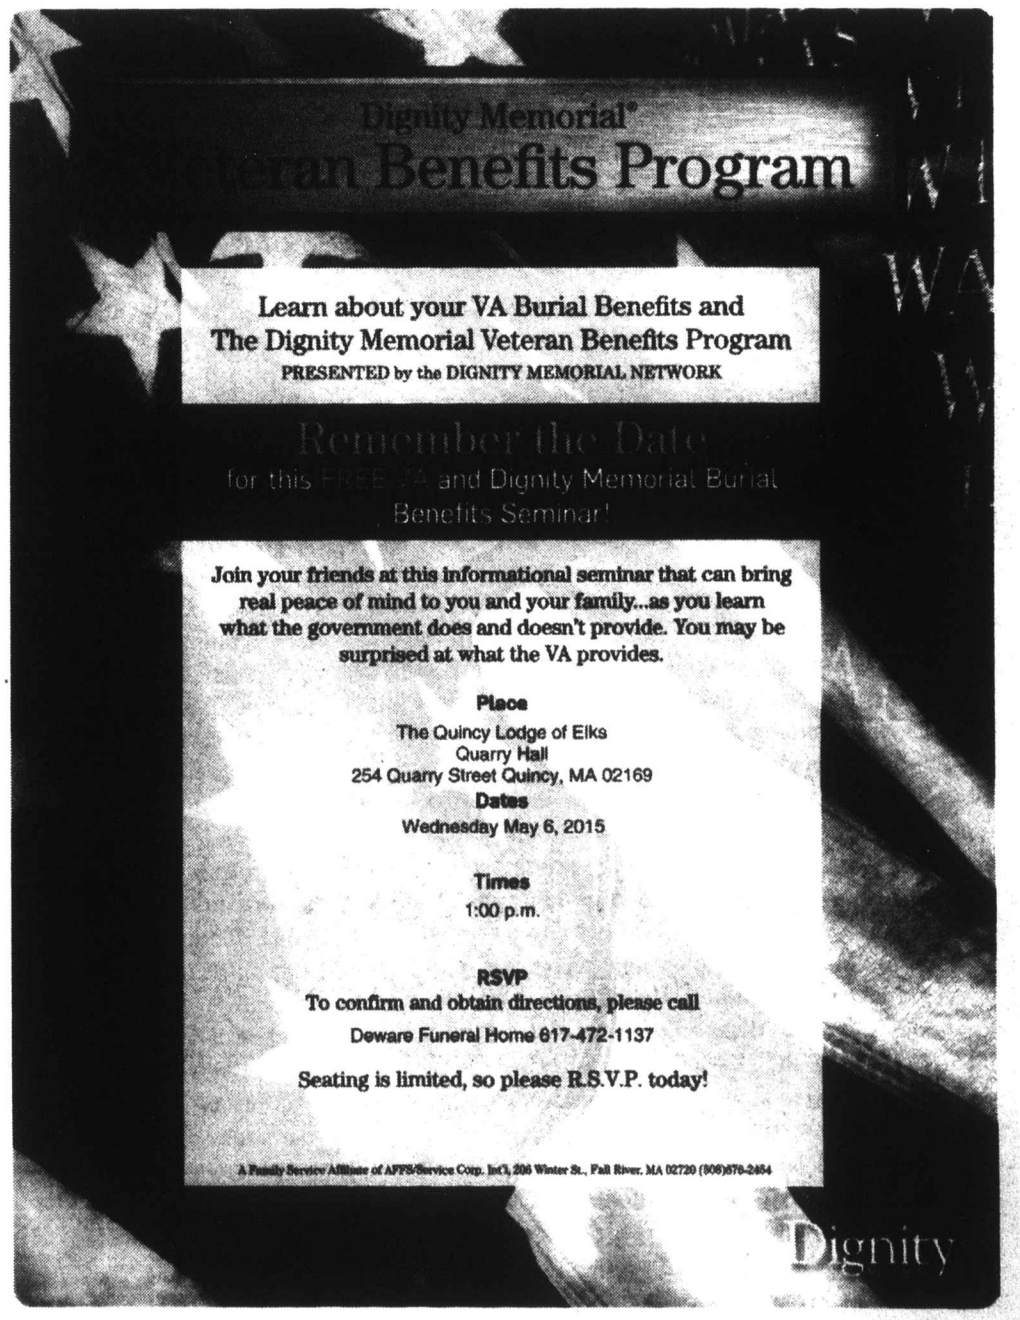
If implemented, the Spine would provide bicyclists a safer way to travel from Quincy to Boston, Braintree and Weymouth.

The Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan includes recommendations for improving bike facilities on several other streets as well, including Adams Street and Billings Road.

Organizers of the May 9th ride hope the event will increase awareness of the growing number of bicyclists on the road and garner support for implementing the recommendations laid out in the Plan.

For more information on the ride and other bicycle advocacy efforts visit Quincycles.org or the Bicycle Commission's webpage at quincyma.gov.





Hancock Lot On Development Block

Adams Green project and unveiled his plan to have a key member of his administration serve as the director of Quincy Center redevelopment.

The mayor also outlined his proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year, which he described as "lean," because of a confluence of factors including rising health care and pension costs and the deficit left by this winter's storms.

Two developers have already announced plans to undertake new projects on the 5.6-acre Hancock Lot. Peter O'Connell, who has developed Marina Bay, State Street South and Granite Links, is planning to construct a 15-story building with 122 apartments on the corner of the lot closest to Cottage Avenue and Dennis Ryan Parkway. LBC Boston plans to build a 116-room hotel on the 1500 block of Hancock Street, which could involve a portion of the lot.

City officials, Koch said, are now putting together a request for proposals, which would invite would-be developers to identify new plans for the rest of the lot, except for a portion where the city intends to build a new parking garage. Interest in the lot is high, the mayor explained.

"We're going to put an RFP out for other parts of the Hancock Lot. Depending on the interest we get back there could be another announcement this year. I think there is a lot of interest in it, so it wouldn't surprise me if we had a number of folks interested in participating in development down there," the mayor said. "It could be another party; it could be one of the existing ones for that matter."

The request for proposals has not yet been finalized, but Koch said it will be flexible enough to allow the lot to be broken up into several smaller parcels or one larger one. The market will determine whether the new developments will primarily be residential or office space remains.

"It's not fully written yet. The planners are working on that. It will have some language that is going to include division of the downtown of mixed use. Whether that's going to be a residential or office component depends on what the market bears. Right now residential is hot," Koch explained.

"I think it's going to be flexible whether we divide it into two or three parcels or if a developer comes in and says 'I want all three, this is what I want to do with it,' we'll be open to that. I don't want to restrict ourselves."

No matter which type of development takes place on the lot – residential or office – Koch expects it to have a major retail component. Those could include grocery stores, restaurants, pharmacies, or coffee shops, but it won't include big box stores.

"There is definitely interest in grocery stores to be down here. The thought of a big box retailer down here – one is I don't want it. Two, they're not building them anymore. The whole mindset is changing big time. They're reducing their size more and more. There is so much more online and they don't require the square footage," Koch said.

"Whether it is residential or commercial, we're still going to be looking at a heavy retail component on the first floor of everything. There is significant interest. There is interest in a number of restaurants to be down here. There is interest in the typical retail type when you bring in people – a grocery store, a pharmacy, cleaners – the basic services people need when they're living in an area. You'll see more coffee shops and restaurants. It will play out overtime, but there is a ton of interest."

Koch expects to send a land disposition agreement for the portion of the lot O'Connell is aiming to development to the City Council for review before the council takes its summer recess. Construction could then begin by the end of the year.

The mayor anticipates construction of the new city-owned parking garage that will sit on the Hancock Lot to follow a similar timeline as O'Connell's project. City officials are working with Joseph D. Shea, senior vice president for engineering firm Woodard & Curran, on a plan to replace parking while the garage is under construction.

"I think they'll probably go up in conjunction," Koch said, referring to O'Connell's project and the garage. "That will be part of the discussions with the City Council. I've got to make sure, and I like to remind the public every time I can, when we do these infrastructure investments in the downtown the new taxes are going to pay for it. We've got to make sure those numbers work.

"This is about implementing what we've been talking about. No matter the developers at the table, we knew at some point we were going to have to build parking structures because you can't leave surface lots like that. The value of the real estate is just too much.

"We have Joe Shea from Woodard & Curran along with our staff looking at all the options down there and how we come up with temporary, interim parking. For example, the Messina lot on the corner of Hancock and Hannon Parkway, do we go in and get an easement from them to put parking on it for now because they haven't come forward with any plans to build on the site yet? That could be a temporary parking site. Those are the kind of things we're looking at."

Elsewhere in the downtown, the $8 million Adams Green transportation improvement project is underway. The project, which is being overseen by the state, involves the infrastructure projects necessary before construction of Adams Green – a park linking City Hall and the United First Parish Church – can commence. Koch believes the road and utility will be done by the fall.

"I think in the next three months they're going to make a lot of hay," he said. "They've done a lot of the underground already. National Grid has repositioned lines. We've had to upgrade sewer lines. We've had to move drain lines. We've got to put new catch basins for the elevation of where the curb is going to be."

The portion of Hancock Street between the two historic buildings will close to traffic sometime this summer, according to the mayor. Design of the park itself is at the 90 percent stage and could go to bid this winter.

The city had planned to pay for the park using funds from the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program. Under the I-Cubed program, the state would provide funding for the project that would be paid off from new state revenue generated from commercial developments.

Koch said the city will update its I-Cubed application to reflect the new projects planned in Quincy Center and will also look at other outside funding sources.

"We'll be updating our I-Cubed application with the state. The plan was that the I-Cubed funding would pay for the park and that is tied to new development in the square. You don't get as many points for residential development as you do commercial, so we need some more commercial activity to happen. We'll be extending our application out and as this year goes forward and we see more activity, I think that will answer a lot of the questions," Koch said.

"There are other MassWorks grant monies we will be seeking. We'll be working it from every angle to get the appropriate funding we need."

In the coming weeks Koch plans to name Jim Fatseas as the administration's point person on the downtown.

Fatseas has served as Koch's chief of staff since the mayor came into office in 2008; in the new position, which the mayor referred to as being the director of Quincy Center redevelopment, Fatseas will be working solely on downtown matters. One of his first tasks will be to meet with business owners.

passes."

Koch said his administration has been pressing state officials to release the funds, but he could not say when the money will be available to the city.

"We have a lot of requests with the state," the mayor said. "That's one of them and we're dealing with a lot of other issues as well, so there is no timeline."

The Quincy Police Department's station on the corner of Southern Artery and Sea Street was built in 1925; the building most recently renovated in the 1980s. The central fire station, located on Quincy Avenue, was built in 1936.

"The reality is the police station is not only an unsightly building, but it's not a very functional building for today's police department to operate in," Koch said. "It's easy to look back, but doing a new building probably would have been better for us than rehabbing the old; it just hasn't worked that well to meet the needs of a modern police department.

"The central [fire] headquarters, we had to spend $60,000 just to shore up the floors because they weren't built for the type of apparatus we have today. There are other stations that have needs as well."

The study will determine whether both departments could be headquartered in the same building. Koch said it's too early to know if that will ultimately happen.

"We're kind of throwing it all in the mix. Are there possibilities where there is one combined or one together in the same footprint? There would certainly be some benefit in coordination in doing that. But until we get into a real study/design phase, it's really premature for me to suggest they'd be together. It's just something we're looking at as a possibility," the mayor explained.

"In some way, shape or form we've got to make upgrades to our firehouses and our police station, whether it's rehabs, whether it's replacement. It's all on the table."

If the city choses to go ahead with a unified public safety headquarters, Koch said it could possibly be placed in the same area where the police station is currently located, which is next to the Department of Public Works yard. The city could also acquire the Bryan Post at 24 Broad St. if needed. That would create access points on three different roads – Southern Artery, Sea Street and Broad Street.

"When you have frontage on three roads for public safety, that's a good thing," Koch said.

"In today's day and age when you build a firehouse, you build doors on both sides so you're not backing into a facility – you drive right back in. There is less chance of damaging the truck and you're not hanging out into the street trying to back in. There are all those issues we will look at to try and bring us up to a little more modern standard."

"I'm going to be shifting Jim Fatseas into directly handling the downtown. He'll stay funded out of the position he is in, but he is going to be working 100 percent of his time just on the downtown and that's going to be transitioning the next few weeks," Koch said.

"As part of that, one of the first things I'm going to have him do is have a meeting with all the businesses down here and talk about all the challenges down here, give them updates on where we think we are with development, updates on the infrastructure stuff, and create a regular meeting time people can weigh in on.

"He's been my captain, if you will, on the downtown anyway. But I'm going to shift assignments in the office to free him up completely from everything else just to focus on the downtown, period. Every aspect of it, from the DIF (district improvement financing) district, updating the URDP (urban revitalization district plan), dealing with the individual developers and doing the RFP – all of those things. He will have tools at his beck and call, but I need someone to be on it all the time."

The Planning Department, and Planning Director Dennis Harrington, will continue to perform what Koch called a "regulatory role."

"The Planning Department has a regulatory role. Dennis' role and the board's is more regulatory, as it is an economic development arm. I think we need someone other than the Planning Department driving this thing," Koch said. "The Planning Department will be part of everything as will other departments as we see fit, but I need somebody to drive this thing every day."

The mayor will introduce his budget for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1, during the May 4 City Council meeting.

"The areas of impact I'm going to be mindful of is the health insurance is going up. We're part of the state program, the GIC (Group Insurance Commission). We're finalizing that number but that's going up significantly. The pension costs, which goes up typically each year, is up a little more dramatically this year than what has been typical. They're looking at new formulas on getting us fully funded at some point – every city goes through this, it's not unique to Quincy," Koch said.

"We're looking at the snow and ice deficit we've got to deal with as part of our recap sheet in the fall when we set the tax rate, so I've got to be mindful of that number. The state is allowing us to amortize over three years and we're still not sure what we're going to get from FEMA. We know from that first storm we're going to get something. The governor is appealing the other part, which was denied, and we're providing information to the state from our perspective on that as well. That won't really shake itself out for several months on how it's going to impact what I have to work with in the fall.

"With the recognition of those issues, it's a pretty lean budget. You won't see too many changes other than the step increases – most city bargainers have step increases – that will be in there, both on the city side and the school side."

Koch estimated an increase of $3 million in health insurance costs and $1.5 million in pension costs. The city budgeted $43.4 million for health insurance in the current fiscal year and $22.7 million for pensions.

The mayor said the cost of snow and ice removal for this winter will top out around $13.2 million. The city had $1.76 in the FY15 budget for snow removal, leaving it with an $11.4 million deficit. That will be reduced further by aid from FEMA – Koch anticipates receiving $1 million from the agency for costs related to the Jan. 26-27 blizzard. That could increase if federal officials issue another disaster declaration for the February nor'easters.

The decision on how to make up the remaining deficit won't be made until this fall. The city could use free cash or apply it to the tax rate in December; if the latter option is used the deficit could be spread, or amortized, over three years.

"That decision won't be made until September," Koch said. "By that time of year we know where we are with our free cash – it's usually certified by that time of year. We should know by then from FEMA what they're doing; in any case, we wouldn't be getting the money until around that time anyway."

Koch does not expect his budget proposal to include enough money for adding more positions in the Police and Fire Departments or for hiring more teachers.

"I don't see us adding, at this point, any significant positions," Koch said. "I really don't. I think it's going to be a fairly lean budget we're trying to sustain."

He added however, that if more teachers than the eight or ten who retire in a typical year do so this summer, that would free up more money, because new teachers make less than the ones they replace.

"A new teacher comes in at a much lower step, so that creates breakage over there that can be used to augment existing programs," the mayor said.

While the City Council works to review the budget in May and June, city officials will begin negotiating with municipal employees' unions on new contracts. The city's contracts with those unions all expire this summer – city employees on June 30 and teachers at the end of August.

"I'm sure they'll recognize some of the challenges we're facing financially," Koch said in reference to the negotiations. "My human resources director, along with our outside labor attorney, is opening up the discussions to set the ground rules and the schedule of meetings coming up."

Koch: T Reform Won't Delay Quincy Center Station Replacement

By SCOTT JACKSON

Gov. Charlie Baker's proposal to overhaul the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority won't derail plans to replacing the aging Red Line station in Quincy Center, Mayor Thomas Koch said in a recent interview.

The current Quincy station, which also provides commuter rail and bus service, opened in September 1971. The station's 870-vehicle parking garage has remained closed since July 2012 after engineers found the structure to be unsafe because of water damage and concrete deterioration.

Koch's plan to replace the 44-year-old station calls for a mixed-use development and new parking facility over the air rights. The new station may also be able to accommodate a district courthouse. In 2014, lawmakers awarded the city $10 million to study the new proposal; the bill also included language that designated Quincy as the lead developer on the project.

Baker introduced a bill last week that would reform the embattled MBTA. Most notably, the bill would create a new finance and management board to oversee the agency for the next several years, transferring that power from the Massachusetts Department of Transportation board. The mayor said the governor's effort would not impact the city's plan moving forward.

"I don't see it being a conflict. In fact, I see it working together," Koch said. "The T condemned this garage two years ago. This isn't acceptable to let this sit for very long; it's something they have to deal with. I think the timing is probably a good thing."

The city is continuing to work with engineering firm Parsons Brinckerhoff on plans for the new station.

"We're continuing to work with Parsons Brinckerhoff. We've had several meetings with them. We've met with the MBTA on a couple of occasions. We've had meetings with the folks from the courts on a couple of occasions. We're all trying to come up with a concept that may work," Koch explained.

"Obviously we're interested in a new T station and replacing the parking that was lost by being condemned, but in addition a potential new development over the air rights there that could house some needs the state has. If not, we could open it up for private development perhaps."

The state will make the final decision on whether to move the courthouse from the Dennis Ryan Parkway to the new station. Koch hopes to put the courthouse at the station because it won't result in a loss of property taxes.

"It's no secret the courts aren't happy here. It's way undersized. But that's really for the state to determine more so than us," the mayor said. "We've guided them to this space. We think it makes sense. I don't want them to build a new courthouse in the middle of the new downtown where they don't pay taxes. I'd rather have them in the air rights over the T where we don't get any taxes from today anyway. We're still working through that."

The city will begin seeking Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) permits for the proposal later this year. A public meeting on the plan will be held prior to that.

"We want to be in with MEPA by the fall for all the permitting. That's just a cursory of what could go on there – we're not even entertaining designs at this point, because we don't know," Koch said.

"We're talking about square footage and we're talking about massing and what that means for traffic and things. We want to keep the ball moving down the field; part of the charge Parsons Brinckerhoff has it to get the MEPA permitting done in the course of this year.

"There will probably be a public meeting in the next month or two soliciting public input on the concept."

Koch, who is the chairman of the 175-member MBTA advisory board, said he supports Baker's plan to put the overhaul the agency. The new board would be directly accountable to the governor, Koch said.

"If we're going to hold the governor accountable, give him the tools he needs and give them control," the mayor stated.

The MBTA, Koch added, should focus prioritize improving its current service over expansion.

"I get into conversations with my colleagues from other cities and some of them are big into expansion," he said. "I've been saying there shouldn't be any expansion until we get our house in order, until we maintain what we have. You've got Wollaston Center – it's not handicapped accessible still in this day and age. It's going through a design phase, but it takes so long.

"We need to commit and maintain what we have, I think, before we talk about any crazy expansion plans."

Lisa Tang Delivers Groceries, More For Rosie's Place

Longtime Quincy resident Lisa Tang credits years of restaurant work with preparing her for her latest volunteer job at Rosie's Place, a Boston sanctuary for poor and homeless women.

"When you're in the restaurant business, you learn how to talk to everyone," she says. "Being curious and a good listener comes in handy in just about every situation."

For almost a year now, Tang has been making deliveries from the Rosie's Place Groceries pantry to poor women who are confined to their homes. But she doesn't just drop off the much-needed food; she makes time for a visit. According to Tang, getting to know each woman on her route through Boston and Dorchester enriches her life in ways she did not anticipate.

VOLUNTEER LISA TANG, a Quincy resident, helps serve lunch in the Rosie's Place dining room.

Reaching out to others was not something that came naturally to Tang when she arrived in the United States 30 years ago. She had learned some English in her home city of Hong Kong, but was determined to improve. She found working in Chinese restaurants was an effective way to increase her language proficiency. "I think I've held every job there is: waitress, cook, bartender, manager," she says. "My English improved gradually by interacting with the customers."

Tang found a field she loves and today she runs and is part-owner of the China Pilgrim restaurant in Plymouth. She eventually settled in Quincy with her husband and son, now 20. "When he went off to college, I wanted to do something meaningful that I wouldn't get paid for," she says. When she asked the restaurant accountant for suggestions, he pointed her towards Rosie's Place.

Her first commitment–and one she still continues–was to prepare and serve lunch on Wednesdays. Every day an average of 210 poor and homeless women and their children can count on having a healthy lunch and dinner in the Rosie's Place dining room. Another 60 women enjoy breakfast Monday through Friday. Unlike other places, guests are not required to line up and wait to receive their meals. Volunteers like Lisa and dining room staff act as waiters and waitresses to serve them at the table. For many diners, it well may be the only respite in their day.

"Lisa is an amazing volunteer who is always willing to jump in and help with whatever needs to be done," says Rosie's Place Director of Volunteer Services Marty Wengert. "She has been volunteering in our dining room for almost three years and has given over 150 hours of her time to help our guests."

When the home grocery delivery program was being developed, Wengert knew she could rely on Tang. Drivers were initially asked to stop by one home per month, but before long, Tang asked to take on four stops. "Lisa is a positive person with a can-do attitude," says Wengert. "She has been critical to the success of this new service. The women she delivers to truly appreciate her kindness."

And Tang looks forward each month to deepening the relationships she has made. "I just love this 'job,'" she admits. She spends about one to two hours filling shopping bags with meat, fresh produce and non-perishables for each woman and then visiting for about one half-hour per household.

One of the women she visits became blind not too long ago, and Tang marvels at her ability to be so self-sufficient. She cooks for herself and frequently rearranges her furniture, yet moves assuredly around the apartment. "I'm always changing my rooms around, too," says Tang, noting that while her background is not the same as the women she visits, she finds they share more commonalities than differences.

Another guest is an older woman who recently lost her leg. According to Tang, "She's an elegant and proud woman, very reserved. Getting her to open up is a gradual process. She's like a treasure chest: once you know the combination, there are riches inside."

Tang practices Buddhism and says she believes in destiny. "Things will come to you if you're open to them" are words she lives by. "I am always asking what these volunteer experiences are trying to tell me," she says. "I ask the universe to help me be a better person."

Tang feels her work at Rosie's Place is a gift for her rather than a sacrifice she makes for others. "I am very thankful for this opportunity. To me, giving is taking," she says.

Wengert appreciates the opportunity during April, National Volunteer Month, to recognize individuals like Tang. "Volunteers who we can count on, who stay with us for a while, become part of the fabric of Rosie's Place," she says. "Lisa's contributions allow us to make life a little better for women who come to us with nowhere else to go."

Quincy College Honoring Veterans

Quincy College is honoring its veterans for the upcoming Memorial Day.

College faculty, staff and students were encouraged to submit the names of their loved ones who have served in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Throughout May, Quincy College is posting banners throughout its campus buildings in honor of the living, deceased, and fallen soldiers who have dedicated their lives in service to our country. In addition, Quincy College will host a Memorial Day Commemoration at its Quincy campus, Monday, May 11 at noon at Presidents Place Lower Level Conference Room, 1250 Hancock St.

The service is free and open to the public and will include guest speakers.

Quincy College welcomes veterans of the U.S. Armed Forces, and their loved ones, to their college. They assist veterans in navigating their education benefits with the U.S. Department of Veteran Affairs, and develop a personalized mission based on the students educational needs.

Through the Quincy College Veterans Discount Program, veterans may enroll in either Liberal Arts or Professional Programs classes at a discounted rate. Veterans are eligible for this reduced rate regardless of the number of courses they take in a semester. The veteran discount program is not funded by the state or federal government; therefore, veterans who are eligible for education benefits through the VA may also receive the Quincy College discounted rate.

Quincy College is a member of the Service Members Opportunity Colleges Consortium (SOC); and reviews both military and college transcripts, as well as CLEP and DANTES exam scores, for transfer credit according to American Council of Education (ACE) recommendations.

Veterans, veteran dependents, and active duty service members are able to use their federal education benefits at Quincy College. Programs include:

south of Long Binh, South Vietnam. Levesque was 30 years old and left behind a wife and two stepchildren.

Levesque had served in Norfolk, Va.; Newport, R.I., and had returned from a three-year assignment in Bermuda before going to Vietnam in July 1968. During his service with the Navy, he had been awarded the Good Conduct Medal with two bronze stars, the Navy Expeditionary Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal with one bronze star, and the Vietnamese Combat Medal.

Schofield was a graduate of Quincy High School and was a captain of the school's soccer team. He attended Quincy Junior College for two years prior to joining Army and was a member of St. John the Baptist Parish, where he was active in the CYO. Schofield had been a weapons instructor at Fort Benning, Ga. He left for Vietnam on Aug. 14, 1968, three days before the birth of his daughter.

Schofield was killed on Sept. 16, 1968, at the age of 21. He was serving as a platoon leader and his unit was escorting a convoy on a road security mission when they came under heavy enemy fire. The lead vehicle was disabled, trapping Schofield's armored personnel carrier. Schofield was killed while carrying a comrade to safety; he was posthumously awarded the Silver Star for his actions.

"The initial burst of enemy fire killed or wounded several members of his platoon. Hearing a plea from one of the wounded men, Lt. Schofield, with complete disregard for his personal safety, braved the devastating enemy fire as he treated the ailing man. While carrying his comrades to the rear Lt. Schofield was fatally wounded by an enemy rocket," the Silver Star citation read. "His valorous actions were responsible for saving several lives and the successful completion of the mission."

Coughlin was a lifelong Quincy resident and attended Quincy High School before enlisting in the Marine Corps in November 1967. He was on patrol duty near Quang Nam on Oct. 13, 1968, when he was hit by an explosive device. Coughlin died the following day; he was 19 years old.

Coughlin and Schofield both attended Quincy Point Junior High School. They and two other former students killed during the Vietnam War were memorialized by the school, which planted four maple trees in their honor.

Family members of the servicemen will speak at the dedications, joined by local officials. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci and Rep. Bruce Ayers will speak at the first dedication; Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes and Rep. Tackey Chan at the second; and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Keenan at the final dedication.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

What is your opinion on installing motorized blinds in my beach house? Is the environment too moist? Mrs. C

Answer: Although there are lots of advantages in terms of convenience, comfort, and control with automated window coverings, I would not recommend them in your situation.

Motorization offers homeowners many benefits, especially if you are physically challenged or the windows (or skylights) are too high to control manually. Because some remote controls also offer timer functions, these coverings can enhance home security by raising or lowering blinds at certain times (but beware if you have an indoor motion detector!) Finally, if you need to have all the latest electronic gadgets, owning one more remote control will simply add to your glee.

However, there are disadvantages, especially in moist climates. Fabrics like cotton and linen, which are common in beachy décor, are very prone to wrinkle. Although the products typically have a five-year warranty on the motors, the salt air can wreak havoc on the steel parts. The motors can be repaired but automated window coverings – depending on the size and type - typically cost $300-500 more per window than other options, so you should consider the warranty and price into your decision as well.

Since the average person changes their windows coverings every 7-10 years, you'd be better off choosing shades made of reed, bamboo, or grass materials to stand up to the light and moisture while at the same time keeping with a nautical look. Check out the Cape Cod white or white-washed shades from 3-Day Blinds or invest in shutters that are virtually indestructible and cost considerably less per window than motorized options.

For those who do not live along the shore, motors on blinds from a reputable manufacturer can last 20-30 years and the fabrics have a limited lifetime warranty so don't let my advice to Mrs. C dissuade you.

(P.S. A warm shout out to all the Quincy Sun readers I met at a recent Friends of the Thomas Crane Library event. I enjoyed meeting you all and talking about my column.)

Register Announces Consumer Notification Service

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces the establishment of a free on-line Consumer Notification Service to protect Norfolk County property owners against potential property fraud.

"The F.B.I. has reported that property and mortgage fraud is one of the fastest growing white collar crimes in America. Many jurisdictions across the country have reported individuals recording fraudulent documents making it look like they own another person's home or property. While we have been fortunate that this problem has not manifested itself in Norfolk County, I want to make sure my office is out in front of this issue," O'Donnell said.

Any owner of real property in any of the twenty-eight communities comprising Norfolk County can sign-up for the Consumer Notification Service free of charge by doing the following:

From the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, click on the button Consumer Notification Alerts to complete initial registration. From there, follow the remaining sign-up instructions. Once you have signed up for the service, each subscriber will be able to input two names, individual or business, and the corresponding city or town in Norfolk County for monitoring. They could monitor their real estate for liens, deeds, homesteads that might be recorded against the property.

If a document is recorded against one of the names imputed for monitoring, the subscriber will be alerted via email.

If a subscriber believes a fraudulent land record has been recorded against their property, they should contact the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101.

Another option available to those who receive a notification is to consult the Registry's on-line land research records at www.norfolkresearch.org. The subscriber would also be given by the Registry a list of public safety referrals.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. For more information, call (781) 461-6101.

After Standing 60 Years, Old YMCA Coming Down

By SCOTT JACKSON

Demolition of the old YMCA building on Coddington Street is underway and will continue for up to six weeks.

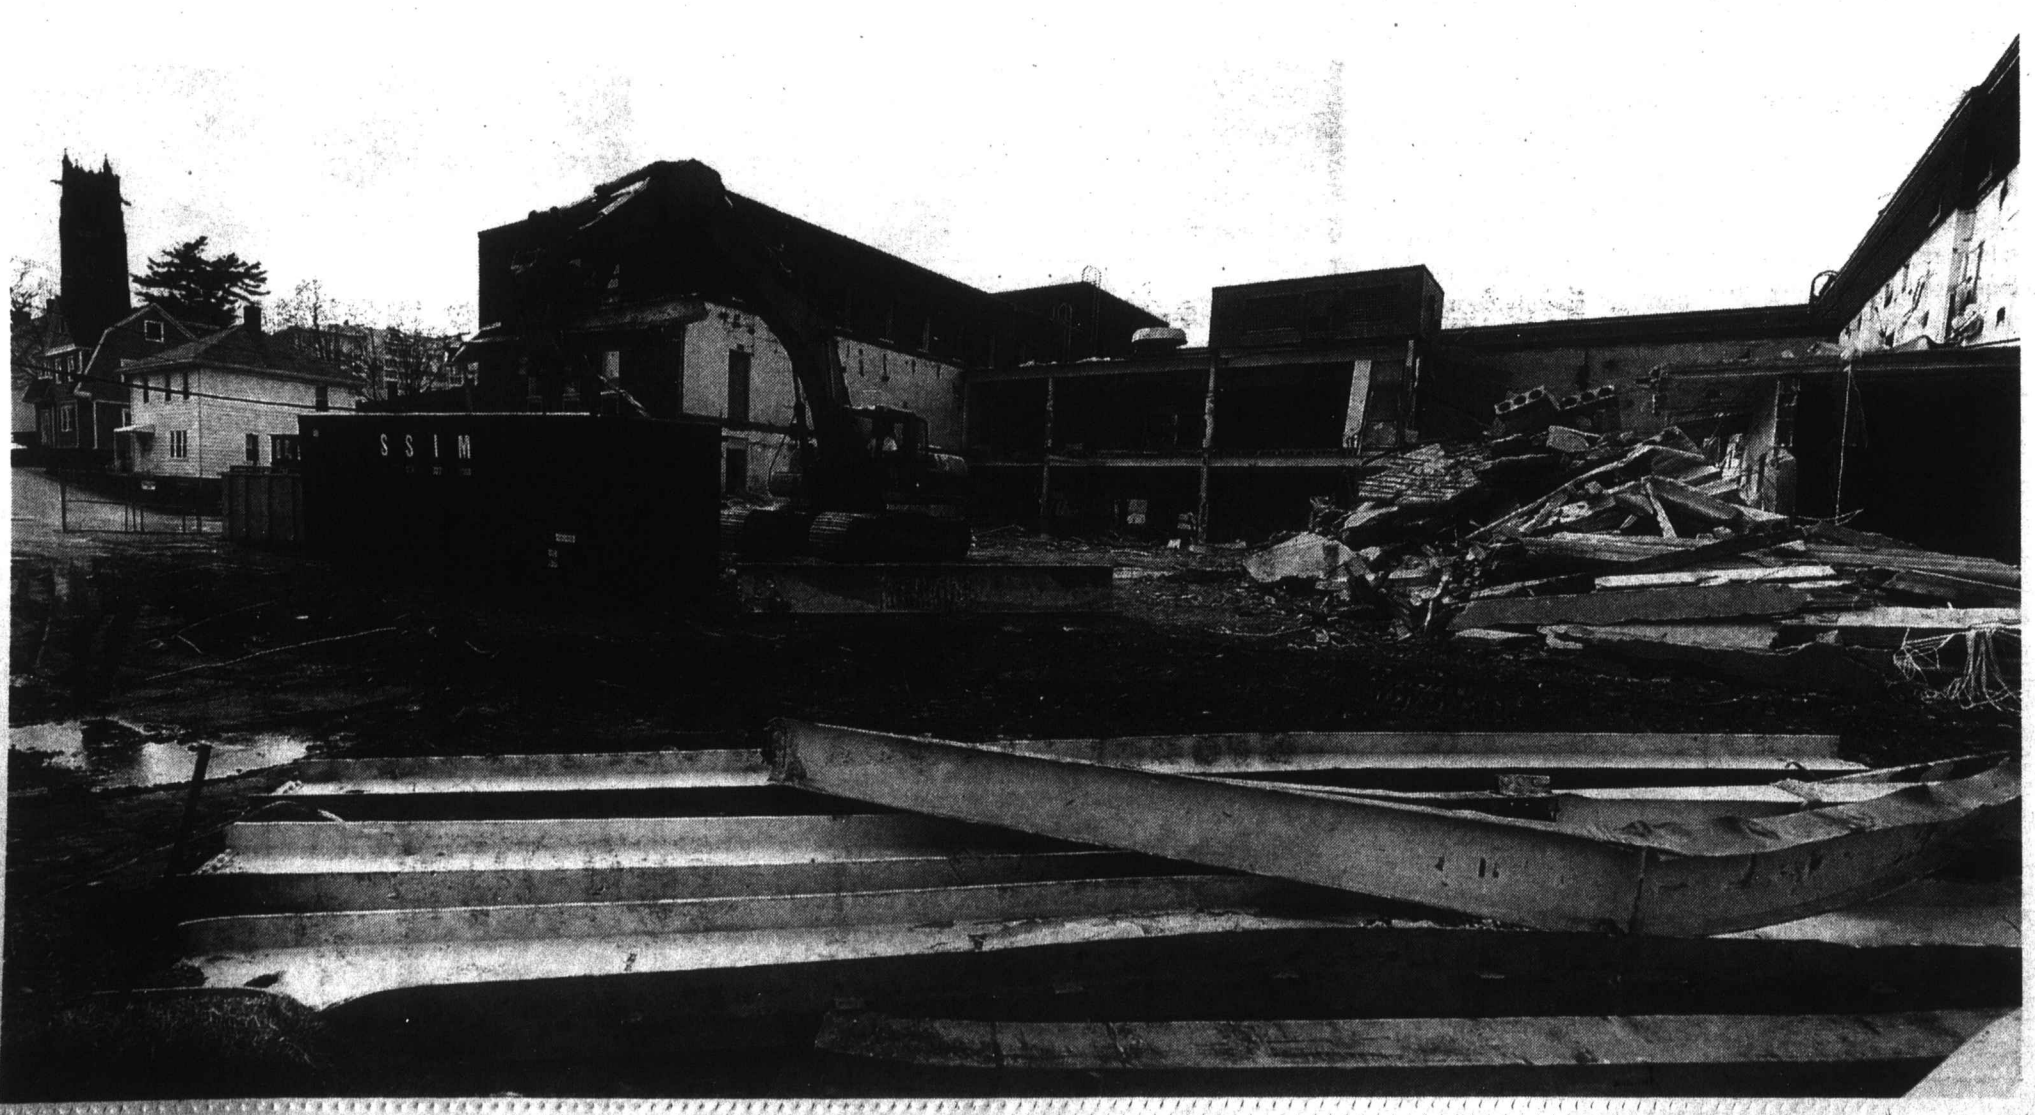
Crews began to raze the 60-year-old building last week. YMCA officials anticipate the demolition will take five or six weeks. After that, the site needs to be surcharged for four to five weeks to make the ground suitable for further work. Two to three weeks of landscaping and paving will follow.

Once done, the site will be used to provide additional parking for YMCA members, according to Sara Trubiano, the South Shore YMCA's marketing director. The project is expected to wrap up by the fall.

The old YMCA building opened in 1955 and closed in September 2013. The new, $30 million YMCA next door opened in December 2013.

Demolition of the old building had begun shortly after the new facility, but was delayed after asbestos was found. The demolition could not begin again until state environmental officials gave their approval, which they did two weeks ago.

Callahan Inc. is general contractor for the construction of the new facility, according to Trubiano, and they subcontracted the demolition out to J. Kerrissey.



SPECTATORS WATCH the demoliton of the old South Shore YMCA Bulding on Coddington Street. The structure had stood on the site for 60 years. The building opened in 1955 and closed in September 2013. A new, $30 million YMCA next door opened in December, 2013. A porton of the new YMCA building is visible at the upper right. Hancock Cemetery Recommended For $500,000 In Conservation Funds

The Hancock Cemetery, which began a complete restoration last year, recently received grant funding to complete the scope of work recommended in its 2012 Master Conservation Plan.

The work to be completed in this next phase of the conservation includes restoration of the historic iron fence along Hancock Street, replacing the chain link fence with a historically appropriate iron picket and granite pier fence, pruning selected trees that currently endanger burial sites, and replacing the asphalt pathways with concrete.

Money for this second phase of the project comes from a $190,000 grant award from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and a recommendation for $310,000 from Quincy Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds. (The CPA funding recommendation is reviewed by the Mayor for inclusion in the City budget for fiscal year 2016. The City budget is assessed by the City Council in June, after which point the CPA grants and their dollar values can be confirmed.)

The first phase of the cemetery restoration was completed in August 2014. It consisted of treatment and resetting of more than 260 grave markers.

For more information on the Hancock Cemetery conservation and restoration project contact Kara Chisholm, Assistant Planner, kchisholm@quincyma.gov or 617-376-1050, or see the Planning Department's YouTube channel, Quincy PCD.

Geoff Hennessy Selected Track Coach Of The Year

City Track Icon Has Coached Hundreds Of Athletes Of All Ages Over The Last 40 Years

By BILL GRIFFIN

Sometimes they get the award just right. Sometimes the fit is perfect. Sometimes the man and the honor are connected as if by fate.

Last week, the Massachusettes State Track Coaches Association named Quincy's Geoff Hennessy as its Coach of the Year. They got it right. For over 40 years, for 50 weeks a year, Hennessy has coached children from age five to age 18. He has coached seniors and special needs athletes. He has helped champions, and he has helped little kids who were afraid to run a lap around a track. The number of lives he has touched is difficult to grasp. For track in Quincy, he has been a man for all seasons.

"I couldn't be happier for Geoff. He has done so much for so many people in Quincy for 40 years. No one could be more deserving of the award," said Jim Bryson. Bryson's daughters, Emily and Julia, started running for Hennessy when they were five and are now elite distance runners for North Quincy on both the state and New England level.

"The kids posted some excellent times in the indoor season, and I think that got the board's attention," said Hennessy who also won the award in 2005. "I didn't do anything differently, it was the kids who performed well. It's a great honor, but I honestly don't even know who nominated me."

Most coaches teach their sport. Hennessy is his sport. He is track in Quincy. If there is a young child who hesitates and steps onto the track for the first time, Hennessy is there. If there is an elite runner who needs a plan for her training, Hennessy is there. If there are hurdles that need to be placed on the track before a meet, Hennessy is there. If there is a cross country runner struggling with the August heat, Hennessy is there. He is always there.

"I think I'm involved with track for 50 of 52 weeks every year. I take two weeks early in August and travel," said Hennessy. "I've always

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

TROUBLE SLEEPING?

Back pain that makes it difficult to sleep at night can be particularly troubling because it not only prevents you from entering the critical restorative stage of deep sleep, but it also has been shown to worsen back pain. As a result, back pain prevents you from sleeping, which leads to more back pain. To help break this vicious cycle, the chiropractor can diagnose the cause of chronic back pain and take steps to alleviate it. An ensuing discussion about your mattress and pillow may also identify if they are contributing to sleep loss. If so, a medium-firm mattress is more likely to improve the sleep quality of those suffering from chronic back pain than a firm mattress.

It has been estimated that nearly two-thirds of those with chronic pain suffer from a sleep disorder. At Family Practice of Chiropractic, there are many things we can recommend to alleviate your pain. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment for a comprehensive chiropractic evaluation. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. A mattress that is too hard will create gaps between it and your body, causing the areas of the body that contact the mattress to develop pressure points that restrict blood circulation, leading you to move around to restore circulation.

Phelan Scores 4 Goals But Presidents Fall To Plymouth N.

By BILL GRIFFIN

When coach Alisa Arakelian called timeout with less than eight minutes left in Quincy's lacrosse match with Plymouth North, the purpose was not to discuss strategy or pass out words of wisdom. The purpose was to give her team a rest.

The Presidents were gasping and fighting for an easy breath after playing almost an entire match without a break. Quincy began the match with one reserve, and ended it with two. After a minor injury, there were a few moments in the first half when there were no reserves. No bench. Just the players on the field. It was a demanding test, but Quincy played hard and well.

Plymouth broke open a tie match with six goals late in the first half and went on to drop the Presidents, 18-9 in a Patriot League match at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Friday morning. Senior forward Kerry Phelan continued her brilliant season with four goals and two assists and led a hardy band of players who played from the opening draw to the final whistle without relief.

"We were shorthanded a little because of vacations," said Arakelian. "We had to play iron-man lacrosse. I was proud of their heart and effort. We've worked a lot on fitness, not just running, but doing dynamic things to get in game shape. I think that helped us today."

Noreen Palbutong had two goals and an assist, and led a strong offensive push in the first half for Quincy which saw the Presidents grab leads of 3-1 and 4-2. Sophomore Riley McLaughlin did a good job on draws and had a pair of goals. Emily Hatfield added a goal in the final seconds for the Presidents.

Phelan was terrific in the offensive end despite being the main target of the Plymouth North defense. The Eagles consistently sent two and three defenders at her. Her shot was hard and true, and she set up cutting teammates with accurate passes. She also worked well in the midfield when Arakelian rotated her players trying to give them a break.

"Kerry has stepped up as a scorer because we need her to score," said Arakelian. "But she has a personality where she would rather get an assist and see a teammate score. She also did a good job in midfield. She's played everywhere I've asked."

Sophomore Maeve Hernon was solid on defense and moved the ball into the attack zone with strong rushes. Freshman Emily Butruccio had an excellent game defending against Plymouth North's runs and also created offensive chances. She was robbed on a pair of point-blank shots in the first half.

"Maeve is a player who is never satisfied. She wants to be perfect. She has learned and improved on defense," said Arakelian. "Emily doesn't usually see a lot of action, but today she put everything she learned in practice into the game. She made good defensive slides and also drove to the goal."

McLaughlin consistently gained possession for Quincy off draws. She also moved the ball through the middle with short, crisp passes and set up chances with runs along the wing. Sophomore keeper Emi Guarante made 10 saves and held up well against the Plymouth North pressure.

"Riley is a swing player for us. She is great on draws which I think is one of the most important parts of the game," said Arakelian. "She's a hockey player, and she brings that never-say-die attitude to lacrosse Emi has made a lot of progress in half a season. She plays keeper in soccer and she's making a good transition."

Hatfield, a senior captain, battled through the cold and windy morning and anchored the defense. She was steady in moving the ball out of the scoring area, passed and caught well, and set up offensive chances for her team. She found Phelan with a perfect pass in the first half for a chance which rattled off the post. In the final seconds, she made a wonderful rush which covered the whole field. She circled the Plymouth net, broke strong in front and finished with a hard, low drive for the game's final goal.

"Playing in the cold is hard for Emily because she has a bronchial issue, but she fought through it. " said Arakelian. "She is the anchor for us on defense, and she's taken a lot of the younger players under her wing and worked with them. She's a great kid to have on the team."

Phelan scored three times in the first half. She clicked off a fine pass from Palbutong, a rush along the left wing and a hard shot off a loose ball in front with 2:22 left in the half. Palbutong connected on a good feed from Phelan and on a rush up the middle after McLaughlin won a draw at midfield. McLaughlin scored on a drive in front set up by a strong move from behind the net.

Plymouth North led 10-6 at the half. Quincy scored three goals in the second half. Phelan clicked on a free shot. McLaughlin scored from in close after Phelan controlled the offensive zone and set up the chance. Hatfield scored in the final seconds on her rush up the field.

"I think the area where I've seen the most improvement is in transition," said Arakelian. "We're passing cutting and reversing the ball through midfield now Earlier in the year, we were just running. We're also much better on draws which gives us possession."

Quincy (1-10) meets North Quincy today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. at the stadium.

had that passion for track. I remember I told my father I wanted to play football. He told me to go out for track and build up some speed. He said I was so skinny I'd get killed. I was hooked on track right away."

Hennessy did the triple jump, hurdles, and javelin. He graduated from North in 1974. In the same year, Frank Kelly founded the Quincy Track Club. Hennessy was involved from the first meet. Four years later at age 21, Hennessy became and has remained director of the club.

He coached UMass to four appearances in the national championship meet. He took over at North in 1988. For 27 years has coached cross country, indoor and outdoor, and the track club. He works with middle school programs across the city. Cross country starts in late August. School meets last until May. The Quincy Track Club runs through May, June, and July. Consider for a moment the amount of time he has given to help kids. It is remarkable.

"I'm not the only one. I'm not out on some island by myself," said Hennessy. "The city is blessed with people who give as much time as I do. Look at what Mark Jaehnig does in basketball, what Dick Lombardi does in baseball, what Bob Foley does in softball. They put in as much as I do. The result is the kids get more opportunities. It's not that way in every city."

Hennessy has a range of skills which are difficult to duplicate. He is comfortable with the waves of young kids, 600 strong, and the wonderful chaos they bring to summer with track club.

He is also comfortable working with the best athletes. They can be runners like the Brysons. They can do the shot put like Maya Umoren who won the New England Championship last year. They can do the dash, throw the javelin, soar over the high jump, or run the hurdles. Hennessy can coach them all, and he can coach them at the highest level. The event is not important. Hennessy can coach all of them. That is most rare.

"Some people think that Geoff is great at getting kids into the track club, but they don't know how sophisticated and knowledgeable he is as a coach," said Jim Bryson. "He builds a passion for track. He also designs training plans which are excellent. He planned training for both my daughters throughout high school, and they have run personal bests in all their events every year."

The track club has doubled from 300 to nearly 600 kids since it began. Include high school and middle school, and he has worked with at least 500 kids a year for over 40 years. Do the math. Think of the number of lives he has touched. Think of the difference he has made for so many kids. Think not only of the champions, but troubled kids, kids who needed track, kids who looked to track for something fun and positive when their lives were just too hard.

"Everyone wants to coach the Brysons. They're a coach's dream. They're smart, dedicated and talented," said Hennessy. "But a coach has to be a salesman, a psychiatrist, and a social worker. You have kids who have big issues, family issues, serious family issues. You don't know what's inside their head when they come to practice. You have to find out, and you have to make track fun for them."

He thinks of names from the present and past. He talks of the Brysons and Umorens. He remembers Karen Cashman who ran the 800 and 1,000 for three years at North and went on to win a bronze medal in the Olympics for short-track speed skating, He remembers Michelle Millane Bell who threw the discus, won a scholarship to Northeastern and traveled the country with her college team. He remembers the 71 All Scholastics and 27 college All-Americans who started with the Quincy Track Club. It has been a fine run, and it is far from over.

"I'm thinking about what the Brysons can do this spring. I'm also thinking about Maya's sister, Melody Umoren, who is really throwing the shot well in practice," said Hennessy.

The athlete, the welfare and success of the athlete, is always the force that drives him. Jim Bryson has a story to tell about that.

"With the winter we had, it was hard for my daughters to get in their work," he said. "They were able to run around snow banks and get their distance work in, but they couldn't do their speed training. One day when we had one of the worst storms of the winters, Geoff showed up in front of my house.

"They're are 12-foot snow banks in my driveway. I'm not dug out yet. He's there because he knows someone at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston. He can get the girls in there so they can do their speed work He's there to drive them to Boston after a huge snowstorm. He didn't have to do that. He did it because the most important thing to him is always the athlete having a chance to do her best."

Hennessy will receive his award at an event Sunday June 7 at 2 p.m. at Lantana Randolph.

Jorgensen, Doherty (4 RBIs) Power Quincy Over North

By TREVOR WENNERS

Nicole Jorgensen and Clare Doherty each tallied four RBI for the Quincy High School softball team in a 15-0, five inning victory over North Quincy on Monday afternoon at Mitchell McCoy Field.

"It's great, it's always nice especially for the seniors to come in and win against North Quincy," said Presidents head coach Greg Sommers. "And they work hard and for a lot of them it's the last time they will ever play North Quincy so it's really nice that they were able to do that (and get the win)."

The Presidents (4-1) tallied seven runs in the top of the first. Senior center fielder Emma Kelly got things started with a leadoff single. Kelly showcased her speed by stealing second base. Senior Angela McDonald batted in Kelly. Senior pitcher Saxon Bresnahan tallied a hit that scored McDonald.

A hit by sophomore Madison Synan scored sophomore Kate McGahey. Senior Dana Varmahmoodi plated senior Annie Waterman to give the Presidents an early 4-0 advantage with no outs in the inning.

Doherty grounded out but picked up an RBI when Synan crossed home plate. A sacrifice fly from Jorgensen scored Varmahmoodi. The Presidents batted around as Kelly went to the plate for the second time in the inning. She batted in senior Samantha McMahon to make the score 7-0.

"If you're looking towards trying to get into the playoffs and stuff like that it adds another win," said Sommers of the importance of the victory. "Also the way that we (swung) the bat gives the girls a lot of confidence going forward."

Senior Madison Hally reached on an infield hit to begin the bottom of the first inning for the Red Raiders.

Then came nine straight strikeouts recorded by Bresnahan for the Presidents. McMahon pitched the fourth and fifth inning for the Presidents. She only allowed one person to reach base and struck out the first batter she faced.

"They pitched excellent," said Sommers. "They just went right at girls. They weren't intimidated about anything. They just kind of went in and did their thing and it worked out really well."

Doherty picked up a double in the second inning that scored McGahey and Waterman to extend the Presidents lead to 9-0. With runners at the corners and two outs in the second, Jorgensen slammed a three-run homer to extend the lead to 12-0.

"She's very comfortable down where she is in the order so I think I'll keep her there but it was one of the farthest balls I've seen hit here," said Sommers of Jorgensen's home run.

Varmahmoodi plated Waterman in the third to make the score 13-0. Doherty and McMahon each picked up an RBI in the fifth inning as McDonald and sophomore Lucia Buzzel crossed home plate to end the scoring.

The large number of contributors, which has been a characteristic so far for the Presidents, continued as eight people tallied at least one RBI and 10 people scored at least one run. Waterman crossed home plate three times.

Senior catcher Angelina Avitabile has gotten off to a superb start behind the plate for the Presidents. She will play softball at Roger Williams University next year.

"Angelina is great, she has been catching for the past three years," said Sommers. "She's really learned a lot, she's really come a long, long way and she's excellent."

Freshman pitcher Mia Sapienza retired the side in order in the fourth inning for the Red Raiders and also picked up a hit in the fifth inning.

"I think Quincy is an excellent team," said Red Raiders head coach Jim Connor. "They've got a real good tradition. They're going to make a run for the league, that's for sure and taking that into consideration, I think we looked head and shoulders better than we have in the past year for sure. Mia Sapienza pitched for us and did a great job and she is a freshman. We're playing a bunch of underclassmen so the majority of the team is back next year. I think that we did pretty well and we have a lot of room for improvement too."

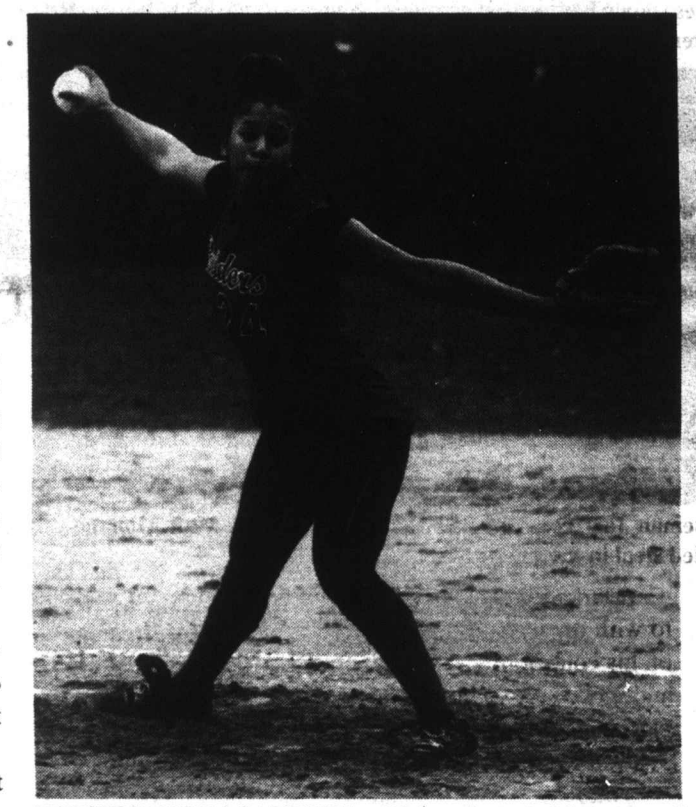
The Presidents were scheduled to play at Plymouth North High School Wednesday at 4 p.m. Their next three games will be at home at Mitchell McCoy Field with start times of 4 p.m. They take on Plymouth South tomorrow (Friday). On Monday they take on Duxbury and Wednesday they go up against Hanover.

The Red Raiders were scheduled to host Scituate at 4 p.m. Wednesday at Mitchell McCoy Field. They will travel to play Fontbonne Academy tomorrow (Friday) at 3:45 p.m. at Cunningham Field in Milton.

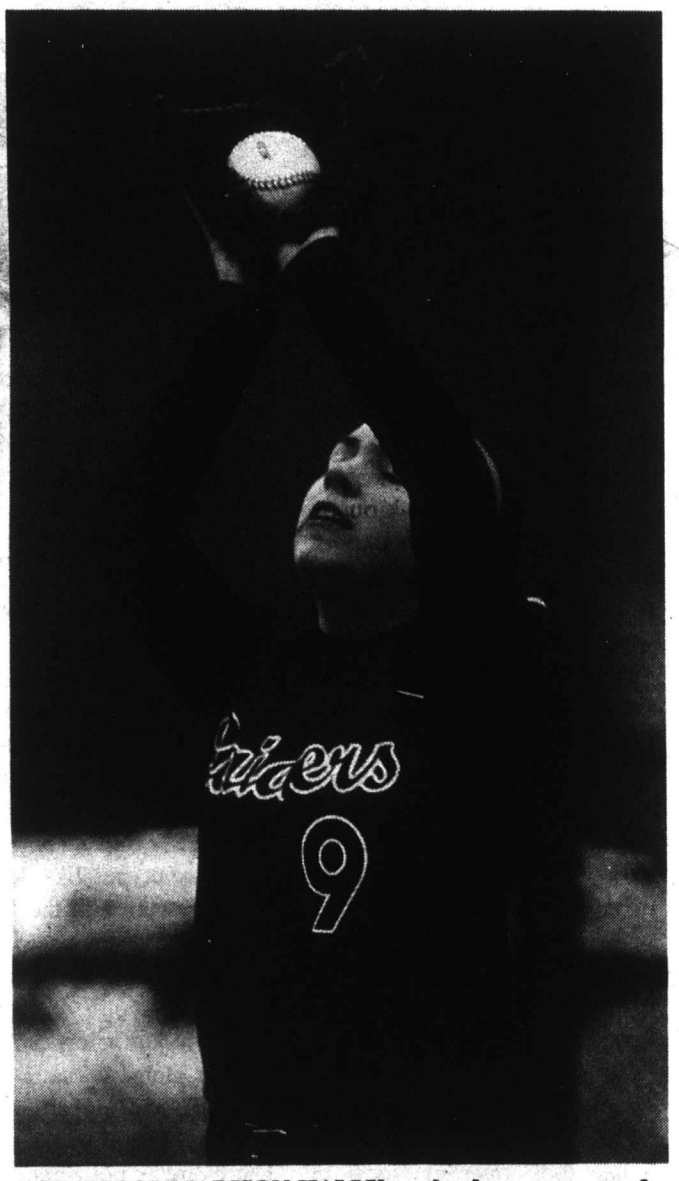
Saturday they will play at Middleboro High School at 11 a.m. and Monday they travel to play Plymouth South High School for a 4 p.m. start.

Connor talked about goals for his team this season.

"Staying positive, obviously getting some wins," he said. "Keeping the girls into the games and learning as we go through."



FRESHMAN MIA SAPIENZA with her first pitching start of her high school career for the North Quincy Red Raiders. She recorded a 1-2-3 inning in the fourth.



SHORTSTOP MADISON HALLY tracks down a pop up for the first out in the third inning. Hally recorded three putouts in the inning fielding all balls hit to her.

NQ Boys Volleyball Defeat Brockton

Captain Jackie Chen had 20 kills and Shiggy Zhang added 20 digs to lead North Quincy to an exciting five-game win over Brockton in a home match last Thursday.

North Quincy (7-2) won the thriller by scores of 25-27, 26-24, 25-23, 25-27, and 15-9.

Calvin Ma and Anxhelo Taho each had 17 kills in the win for the Red Raiders. Eric Huang set up the attack with excellent passing and earned 50 assists in the marathon match.

Kevin Huang and Devin Bragden played well for North who hosts Brookline Thursday and travels to meet Quincy Friday. Both matches are scheduled to start at 5:30 p.m.

Paulo, Ferracane Lead Presidents Past Red Raiders

Righty Tosses Four Perfect Innings • Catcher Drives In Two, Scores Three Runs, Three Hits

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy put together all the right pieces.

Senior righty Greg Paulo pitched four perfect innings, 12 up. 12 down. Catcher Joe Ferracane had three hits, two RBI and three runs scored to lead a balanced, timely attack which saw eight of nine starters hit safely. Shortstop Tyler Beach and second baseman Chris Mann highlighted an errorless defense with sharp and sure work around the bag.

Pitching, hitting, defense. That about covers it.

Quincy took control of the game with an an eight-run second inning and went on to post its first victory with an 11-0 decision over North Quincy in the only meeting of the season between the two city rivals at Adams Field Monday night.

"We played well. It should get us going. We can start from here and turn around our season," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan. "It means a lot to the seniors because it's their last game in the city rivalry. We did a lot of things well. We threw strikes, we strung together hits, and we played good defense."

It all started with Paulo who was dominating. He mixed in a bit of breaking ball, but mostly he threw hard. More importantly, he threw strikes. He struck out seven, didn't permit a baserunner, didn't allow a ball to be hit to the outfield and went to a three-ball count on only one of the 12 batters he faced. Perfect.

"It was a big improvement over the Milton game. The difference was he threw strikes," said Bryan. "I haven't seen a lot of hitting from anyone over the first seven games. The key is get it over and make them hit in it."

NORTH QUINCY second baseman Joe Dwyer applies that tag as catcher Matt Monahan throws out Quincy shortstop Tyler Beach at second on an attempted steal in the first inning.

Junior Mark Munroe finished with two innings of two-hit shutout relief. He kept the ball down, moved it around the strike zone, struck out two, and walked no one. He and Paulo combined to strike out nine and did not walk a batter.

"Mark did what he had to with the lead. He worked on his control in the bullpen and got the ball over the plate," said Bryan.

Ferracane drilled a two-run single in the second. He singled and scored in both the third and fourth. Mann, only a sophomore, looked good at the plate as well. He had two hits, drew a walk, drove in three runs and scored once.

"Joe was struggling a little, but he made good contact and put the ball in play," said Bryan. "Chris is just a good baseball player. He makes contact at the plate, and he gave us a big two-strike hit with the bases loaded in the second."

Beach had two hits, a run scored and a stolen base. Brendan Collins walked twice, scored twice, and drove in a run. David Cooper had a single, walk, an RBI and a run scored. Peter Saccoach had a single, walk and an RBI. Munroe, Alex Linskey and Cody Desmond each had a single and scored a run.

"I liked our balance. We hit the ball well right though the lineup," said Bryan.

Defensively, the Presidents were steady. Beach made the play of the night. going deep in the hole at short and making a strong throw to take a hit away from Timmy Glynn in the third. Mann handled a tough hop on a grounder Sean Egan in the second. Ben Regan made a good scoop on a low throw at first in the sixth to get an out.

"Saturday we gave up five unearned runs against Norwood," said Bryan. "All we worked on in practice was defense. We had a great practice and it showed tonight."

Shawn Kelly and Joe Dwyer drilled solid hits for North. Catcher Matt Monahan made a terrific throw and Dwyer applied a tough tag to nail a base-stealer in the first. Dom DiPalmo and lefty Joe Cochrane threw well in relief for the Red Raiders.

"The bright spots were Dom and Joe in relief. They each did a good job," said North coach Matt Edgerly. "Quincy was sharp. Paulo was very good. He had three pitches, and he threw them all for strikes."

The Presidents went up 8-0 with their big second inning. Quincy added a singleton in the third and two in the fourth to finish the scoring.

Quincy (1-6) is at Plymouth South Friday. North (1-6) visits Hull Thursday.

North advanced to the championship game of the Holiday Tournament last week at Adams Field with a 6-4 win over Weymouth.

Cochrane pitched six strong innings to earn the win. Josh Helfrich finished off the victory with a perfect seventh inning.

Monahan had two hits in the win for North. Monahan, Bryan Turner, and Nick Kelly had RBI singles in the sixth inning when North rallied to take the lead.

Milton defeated North, 15-0 in the title game.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PLAYING THE GUARD POSITION

Whether NBA players and their fans think that professional basketball players should serve as role models or not, one aspect of NBA players' behavior is making a big impression. While relatively few players wore mouth guards to protect their teeth from errant elbows a decade ago, the protective devices have currently become far more commonplace. Fans can hardly watch a game without seeing players inserting the safety devices into their mouths as they enter the game. Aside from helping ensure that a player's teeth will not be loosened or knocked out, mouth guards may also help the jaw loosen up. As a result, muscle tension may be reduced throughout the body, allowing players to play a more relaxed game.

This column on safety devices has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. We appreciate the opportunity to provide you with quality dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The most effective sports mouth guards are the custom-made models that the dentist fabricates from an impression of a patient's teeth and bite.

On Monday, April 20, 2015, at approximately 2:05 a.m., Officer Sean Crowley and Sergeant Matt Tobin were in marked Police cruisers monitoring traffic from the Fox and Hound restaurant parking lot located at the intersection of Sea Street and Overlook Road. A pedestrian walking eastbound on Sea Street directly across from the Officers looked over at them, stopped walking and then pulled his pants down to his knees, exposing his buttocks. He then began side-stepping his way down the sidewalk as to fully expose himself to the Officers. He walked about ten feet and then pulled his pants back up as he continued his way eastbound on Sea Street. He was about 100 feet away from the Officers in a well illuminated area.

The Officers believed that the male intentionally exposed himself to them with the intent to create shock and alarm. The Officers drove over to the male and as they exited their cruisers, the male said, "What? You've never been mooned before!" The Officers placed him under arrest. The male, a 28 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Open and Gross Lewdness." Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On Sunday, April 19, 2015, at approximately 3:45 a.m., Officers Mark Millane and Sean Crowley responded to a call at Quincy Shore Drive and Sea Street for a person passed out behind the wheel of a vehicle.

Upon arrival, the Officers found the male and started knocking on the windows and yelling to get him to wake up. After a few minutes, the driver opened his eyes, but looked dazed and confused. After numerous attempts to get the driver to open the door, he instead took his foot off the brake which caused the vehicle to roll forward from Quincy Shore Drive onto Sea Street.

The Officers, one on each side of the car, yelled at the driver as they banged on the windows to get his attention. The vehicle then crashed into a traffic light in front of 141 Sea Street, causing damage to the left front side of this vehicle. The Officers yelled at the driver to open his door and at this time he tried to open it but was unable to because it was locked.

A Job Well Done

LT. DAN MINTON

Still looking confused, the driver figured out how to pull up the lock and then stepped out of the car. The driver couldn't stand by himself, so the Officers held him up. There was a strong odor of alcoholic beverage coming from the driver. The Officers asked the driver how much he had to drink but the driver's response was mumbled and incoherent. The driver, a 23 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Operating Under the Influence of Alcohol."

Soon after, Officer Millane returned to the Police station to submit his arrest report and learned that the driver kicked Officer Connell in his left arm during the booking process, which was video recorded. He was additionally charged with, "Assault & Battery with a Dangerous Weapon" to wit shod foot for kicking Officer Connell. Nice Work!

AND YET ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On Sunday, April 19, 2015, at approximately 2:15 a.m., Officers Christopher Fish and Andrew Keenan were dispatched to Common Street for a report of a breaking and entering into a motor vehicle in progress. Prior to arrival, Quincy Communications described the vehicle involved and that the female suspect was attempting to leave the area on a moped or scooter wearing a "black hoodie".

Upon arrival Officer Keenan saw a female matching the description trying to ride away on a toddler's bicycle. The Officer immediately recognized her from multiple encounters. When asked what she was doing the female said, "I was standing by the car trying to get warm" which of course didn't make any sense. She then blurted out, "I didn't take anything," which was significant because the Officers did not say why they were there. The female told the Officers that she rode the bicycle from Dorchester and was on her way home when her phone died.

Officer Keenan then spoke with the caller, who said that he was asleep when he heard a car horn multiple times. He looked out the window and saw the female "going through my neighbor's car." Meanwhile, Officer Fish questioned the female about being in the car and she said, "I went into the car to charge my phone to call a cab." Since she was originally seen next to the victim's car riding off on a little child's bicycle, Officer Fish placed the female under arrest.

The female had numerous bags with her. Inside one bag was a handicapped placard belonging to the mother of the owner of the vehicle. When asked about the placard, the female responded, "Well, that isn't her (registered owner) handicapped card so she (registered owner) should be charged as well." Officer Fish told her that the placard didn't belong to her either and she had no right to be in the vehicle so she was under arrest! The owner confirmed that her car had been entered and most of the property in the female's bags came from her car.

A search of the female uncovered numerous Suboxone and Gabapentin pills. The female then said numerous times, "I know I messed up. I already admitted that I went into the car but if she (registered owner) says that I broke anything inside the car then she is lying. The inside of the car was already a mess before I got in it."

Once at the station, the female, a 31 year old Dorchester resident, was charged with, "Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle in the Nighttime and Receiving Stolen Property." Nice Work!

The First Church of Squantum, and Farmer Dave's, a sustainable farm in Dracut, have teamed up to bring locally-grown, fresh fruits and vegetables to Wilmington with a Community-Supported Agriculture (CSA) program.

In the CSA program, consumers become shareholders of the farm for the season by paying for their shares of the harvest upfront, and in return will receive shares of freshly-harvested produce for 20 weeks, from mid-June through late October. Shares will be freshly harvested by Farmer Dave's, and ready for pick-up on Friday afternoons from 3 to 6:30 p.m at the First Church of Squantum,164 Bellevue Rd., Quincy.

Every week, from mid-June through October, CSA members will receive a share of fresh vegetables grown exclusively at Farmer Dave's fields in Dracut and Tewksbury. Shares are available in small and regular sizes to suit the produce needs of individuals to large families, vegetarians and omnivores. Every share includes generous portions of the season's bounty, each in its due time, including summer favorites such as tomatoes and corn, cooking staples like onions, carrots and potatoes, and chefs' picks like chard, beets, and other novelties to experiment with throughout the season. Farmer Dave employs sustainable farming methods to ensure products that are healthy, nutritious, tasty and responsibly grown.

The CSA also offers a fruit share featuring raspberries, blueberries, melons, peaches, nectarines, and apples. The fruit is perfect for breakfast, a snack on-the-go, or a healthy dessert.

In an effort to serve the greater Quincy community, the First Church of Squantum and Farmer Dave's will donate surplus produce to Father Bill's each week. CSA members, businesses, religious organizations, non-profits and individuals may also make donations to the Groundwork Share-A-Share™ program. Share-A-Share™ program funds will be used to subsidize CSA shares for households interested in the CSA and who would otherwise be unable to afford participation.

This Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop introduces children ages 6-10 to the world of electricity. They will observe and learn the basic properties of static electricity in a series of demonstrations that lay the foundation for both an explanation and demonstration of lightning formation. Using our Van de Graaff generator and a few simple materials, the Mad Scientist will demonstrate the ability of an electric field to light up a fluorescent bulb, the process of grounding, and how to make gravity-defying streamers! Each child will take home a static stick to further their exploration of static electricity.

This 1-hour workshop for ages 6-10 will be held on Saturday, May 16th at 10:30 a.m. at the Main Library.

Tickets are required and must be picked up in the Children's Room beginning at 10 a.m. on the morning of the program. Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

Parents: If you have both preschool and school age Mad Scientists we suggest that you attend the school age Mad Science program at 10:30 a.m. as a family.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Manet Community Health Awarded $50,000 Grant From Cancer Society

The American Cancer Society has awarded a $50,000 grant to Manet Community Health Center, Inc. The grant will sustain Manet Community Health Center's efforts to provide cancer awareness, education, and screening for colorectal cancer to individuals in Quincy and surrounding South Shore communities for another year.

The grant is funded by the Walgreens Way To Well Commitment program, Walgreens customers and the American Cancer Society's Community Health Advocates implementing Nationwide Grants for Empowerment and Equity (CHANGE) program. Funding for the CHANGE grants comes from Walgreens customers nationwide, who choose to donate to the American Cancer Society as they pay for their purchases at checkout. The CHANGE grants help promote health equity and ensure that communities with a higher burden of cancer have equal access to education and screening resources.

"We are most appreciative to be recognized with a second year of funding from this life extending and lifesaving grant program, said Ayotomide Oyelakin, MBChB, MPH, CPHQ, Director of Performance Improvement for Manet.

"In our first year in partnership with the American Cancer Society, we have improved screening rates, improved health outcomes, raised the consciousness of our providers and the community. Colorectal cancer is the third leading cause of cancer deaths for men and women in the United States - and one of the most preventable cancers - so we believe, along with the Society, we can really make a difference," said John J. Holiver, Manet's Chief Executive Officer.

Manet's Colorectal Cancer Screening Improvement Project, over a two year project period, aimed to improve screening rates by 10 percent.

In the first year, Manet has successfully increased the colorectal cancer screening rate by 11 percent, due in part to the strong project leadership and staff buy-in and support. Manet anticipates with proper care, supports (including reduction of clients costs, and language sensitive patient navigation), the majority of these patients will have completed a colonoscopy or annual high-quality stool testing.

Colorectal cancer is one of the most preventable cancers. It is the third leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States.

According to the American Cancer Society, disparities predominantly arise from inequities in work, wealth, income, education, housing, and overall standard of living, as well as social barriers to high-quality cancer prevention, early detection and treatment services. Additionally, persons with lower socioeconomic status are more likely to experience increased cancer risks due to tobacco use, physical inactivity and poor diet due to environmental or community barriers that provide fewer opportunities for physical activity and less access to fruits and vegetables.

The Society collaborates with community health partners to reach individuals in communities with high burdens of cancer and limited access to cancer screening. Through the CHANGE program, the Society provides resources to increase cancer screening rates in those communities. Since 2011, CHANGE has awarded 300 grants to partners reaching underserved communities across the country; educating over 889,000 individuals about cancer risk and prevention, and providing over 357,000 cancer screenings.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A seemingly stalled romantic situation could benefit from your reassurance that you want this relationship to work. And if you do, use a tad more of that irresistible Aries charm.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Going to new places and meeting new people appeals to both the Taurean's romantic and practical sides. After all, you never can tell where those new contacts can take you. Right?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) That career-change opportunity that didn't work out when you first considered it could come up again. But this time, remember that you have more to offer and should act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) There could be some tensions in relationships -- domestic or workaday. But a calm approach that doesn't raise the anger levels and a frank discussion soon will resolve the problem.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good idea to begin preparing for that career change you've been thinking about for a while. Start to sharpen your skills and expand your background to be ready when it calls.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Bless that Virgo skepticism that has kept you from falling into traps others seem to rush into. But you might want to give a new possibility the benefit of the doubt, at least on a trial basis.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel and career are strong in your aspect. Perhaps your job will take you to someplace exotic. Or you might be setting up meetings with potential clients or employers. Whatever it is, good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Someone might use deception to try to push you into making a decision you're not fully comfortable with. But those keen Scorpio senses should keep you alert to any such attempt.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Romance dominates this week when Cupid spears the Archer, for a change. Positive things also are happening in the workplace. Expect important news to arrive by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Anyone trying to bully the Sea Goat -- whether it involves a personal or a professional matter -- will learn a painful lesson. Others also will benefit from the Goat's strong example.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. With things going the way they are, you should be able to spare some time and take a break from your hectic schedule for some well-earned fun and games.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) Your sharp Piscean intuition should be able to uncover the true agendas of those who might be trying to catch the Fish in one of their schemes.

ANSWER:

The demolition workers must be a big hit with onlookers. They're always bringing the house down.

END OF A LANDMARK – The final section of the Long Island Bridge was detonated by explosives April 23 marking the end of local landmark that had stood over Quincy Bay for 64 years. Visible in the background is part of the Boston skyline including the Custom House (third building from the right.) These photos were taken from the pier at Nut Island in Houghs Neck. Photo one shows the bridge before the detonation; the second and third show the explosion and the fourth shows what's left of the bridge after the detonation. It took about 20 seconds for the bridge section to fall. About 1,700 feet of the 3,450-foot bridge was detonated April 23. Previous planned explosions brought down two other sections totaling 750 feet and 1,000 feet. The bridge, built in 1951, connected Moon Island to Long Island. The demolition is being handled by Walsh Construction of Chicago at a cost of $20.6 million. The City of Boston, owner of the bridge, plans to build a new bridge at an estimated cost of $80 million over the next two to three years.

John Neal (LJ), EMT

John Neal, who goes by LJ, grew up in Quincy and most of his family still resides in the City. A long-term Fallon employee, LJ has been with the company since Fallon began operations in Quincy in 1997.

"I really can't say enough about what it's like working for Fallon. They are so family-focused and are there whenever and wherever you need them."

LJ remembers an especially difficult time when he felt Fallon's support. "When my parents passed away, the first person that came through the door was Tim Fallon. I will never forget that. That speaks volumes about how much they care about their employees."

The environment at Fallon is another aspect that LJ enjoys. "Everyone that works here is approachable. I had worked with several different companies prior to joining Fallon in 1997. Fallon still has a family feel and even though they are a large company, it doesn't feel 'corporate' like it does with other companies."

"The company's motto is 'For the patient's safety and comfort' and they really do mean that. It's why I'm proud to be a Fallon employee. I don't see myself going anywhere. I'll retire from here."

Peter Rupsys, Paramedic

Peter Rupsys is a long-time Fallon employee, having been with the company since it established roots in Quincy in 1997. According to Peter, one of the best aspects of working for Fallon is its management. "They let you do your job and take care of the patients, which is really what we are all here to do."

Peter loves working in Quincy because of its diverse population and the role that Fallon plays in the community, citing the education and training that they offer to the City's Police and Fire Departments as one example. "Fallon does a great job in Quincy. It's a large area to cover and they do it well. Sometimes the calls can be 11-12 deep, and each one has an immediate responder dispatched within minutes. That's a good thing for the residents of Quincy."

Employee continuing education, which is required for EMTs and Paramedics, is made easy. Fallon provides everything for its employees, which Peter says is another benefit of working there.

"Fallon is a large company with a small company feel. I've been at this for awhile now and Fallon is the company that I will be with when I retire a few years down the road."

Alicia Fabiano, EMT

Alicia Fabiano has been a Fallon employee for eight years and refers to the company as her Fallon Family. There's a reason why Alicia feels such fondness for the employees and management. Two years ago, at the age of 26, she was diagnosed with Stage 3 breast cancer. One of the first people she called was Tim Fallon, who immediately said, "Don't worry. We'll get through this." During the course of her treatment, which lasted almost two years, the company was by her side. Tim would call me 3-4 times a week, asking if I needed anything and asking how I was feeling. Sean Tyler, Fallon's EVP and COO, is just as amazing and understanding. They are a great team. From the owner to the bottom, everybody here is just amazing.

Alicia's colleagues rallied around her. They held a hockey fundraiser and sold bracelets to raise money. They also made shirts with the breast cancer symbol on them, which is now part of the Fallon uniform. The proceeds from the shirts go into an Employee Relief Fund that was started while Alicia was undergoing treatment and is now something that's ongoing for all of the employees.

When asked if she plans on staying at Fallon, Alicia doesn't hesitate.

"I am a free agent. I could do anything for this company. I wouldn't work for anybody else. I am lucky and blessed to work for such an awesome group of people."

Councillor Doug Gutro said he feels the city's latest push for downtown development is being driven by politics; Mayor Thomas Koch dismissed that concern, saying the market, and not politics, is driving the proposed timelines.

The mayor in early April introduced plans for three downtown projects – a 48-unit condo complex pitched by Galvcon Development, a 15-story high rise apartment building proposed by Peter O'Connell, and LBC Boston's plan to construct a hotel on Hancock Street. The latter two projects would be at least partially located on the Hancock Lot, meaning the

QHS Senior Strikes Out All 21 Duxbury Batters In 2-0 Victory

By BILL GRFFIN

There is no need to enlarge or dramatize what happened. A simple statement of the accomplishment is all that is needed.

Saxon Bresnahan struck out everybody. She faced 21 batters against Duxbury. She struck out all 21. 21 batters. 21 strikeouts. She pitched a shutout. That's good. She pitched a no-hitter. That's excellent. She pitched a perfect game. That's, well, perfect. She struck out every batter who came to the plate. That's history.

It gets better. Duxbury made contact three times in seven innings. The Dragons put a bat on the ball three times in an entire game. All three were foul balls, all three either died at home plate or went to the backstop. In seven innings, Bresnahan not only pitched a no-hitter, a perfect game and struck out 21 batters. She did not allow a ball to be hit in front of home plate. That is scary stuff.

Property At 375 Franklin St.
Once Slated For Demolition

QHA Property Renovated, Ready To Occupy

The Quincy Housing Authority announces the property at 375 Franklin St. that had been slated for demolition four years ago has been completely renovated and is ready to occupy.

The once four-bedroom home has gone extensive renovations funded through a grant provided by DHCD (Massachusetts Department of Community and Development) in order to restore vacant homes throughout the Commonwealth and provide affordable housing to residents in need.

The renovations include a new kitchen, bathroom, boiler, plumbing, electrical, flooring and paint. The house originally had four bedrooms and was converted to three, eliminating the smallest bedroom to create a first floor laundry area. The property has been an eyesore and vacant for over four years.

The modernization work was all performed utilizing the maintenance staff at the Quincy Housing Authority. The QHA employs 28 full time maintenance staff employees.

The QHA has completely restored and turned over 61 vacancy units since January 2015. The QHA manages over 1,500 units of public housing throughout Quincy funded by both, HUD and DHCD. The QHA manages 580 family units in Germantown and over 939 elderly units in four high rise buildings and developments; Pagnano Towers, O'Brien Towers, Sawyer Towers, Louis George Village, Crowley Court, Drohan Apartments and Tobin Towers.

Recently the QHA has undergone a major reorganization under Executive Director James Lydon by adding a new Director of Finance, Grace McAuliffe and a new Director of Facilities, James Marathas.

" I am very excited about the opportunity to continue integrating the Quincy Housing Authority into the City of Quincy and continue to improve the quality of life we provide to our tenants. We have accomplished a great deal in a short time period and we have a long way to go," Marathas said.

FRINGE ELEMENTS

Fringe earrings' enduring appeal can be traced to their Native American and bohemian influences. Fringe has been popular since Native Americans strung beaded pieces together and decorated leather bags and leggings with fringe that caught the breeze and captured Western attention. More recently, diamond fringe earrings have emerged as "must-haves" in jewelry fashion as celebrities take to red carpets in captivating pieces that sparkle and shimmer. Besides the fact that diamond fringe earrings reflect light in ways that resemble a fireworks display, the diamond strands also sway elegantly with the movement of the head. If there is any piece of jewelry that combines the refined look of diamonds with the fun feeling of drop earrings, it is fringe diamond earrings.

Hayley's Hockey Needs An Assist

Hayley Parrish is only 14 but she's about to embark on the experience of a lifetime.

The 8th grade honor roll student at Point Webster Middle School plays ice hockey at the highest level for her age.

Ranked as one of the top nine players in the state in her age group, she is conceivably on the path to someday suit up for the U.S. Olympic Women's Ice Hockey team.

The 5-foot, 1-inch blonde-haired youngster will begin her freshman year this fall at Quincy High School but about a month into classes she'll transfer to the North American Hockey Academy in Stowe, VT. NAHA is a top-notch hockey academy that has produced Olympians and many Division 1 college hockey players. Her school work will be coordinated between NAHA and QHS so that after sharing time at both institutions over four years she'll earn her high school diploma.

She'll attend the academy for six months per academic year and play an 80 to 90-game schedule throughout Canada and the U.S. from October through April.

Hockey, Hayley says, is her passion. "I've tried other sports like lacrosse, softball and soccer and I just don't have a connection with them.

"I like hockey because of the ice and I get to meet new people who enjoy it. I like the competition, too."

Her favorite players are Washington Capitals' sharpshooter Alex Ovechkin and Patrice Bergeron and Brad Marchand of the Boston Bruins.

Hayley's hockey life has been supported wholeheartedly by her parents, Scott and Laurie Parrish who live on Sixth Avenue in Quincy. Scott says Hayley has worked tremendously hard and has earned the opportunity to see where her hockey skills can lead her.

"A lot of Olympians and National team players come from the NAHA. One of Hayley's goals is to play on the U.S. Olympic team.

"Each year it gets harder and harder but for age 14 she has made the cut every year at U.S.A. development camp. It will get harder and harder but if she keeps working and through this school she will probably have the best opportunity to continue to work," he says.

"She is ranked in the top nine forwards in the state and if she wasn't ranked that high - if she wasn't working as hard - we wouldn't be doing this. She would be working at a more local level and if she wanted to get there, she would have to work harder. But she's already done all the work. She's proved it year after year."

She first learned to skate and play hockey on youth hockey teams when she was five. Her first pair of skates were hand-me-downs from her older brother, Scott, who plays hockey and does track for QHS.

But by the time she was 9 or 10 years old, Hayley's game was progressing. She savored ice time and practice. She listened intently to her coaches. She'd stay three hours at the rink at a time just working on her game. The family even put artificial ice in her backyard so that she could work on her skills under a summer sun.

Hayley wanted to play hockey. And get better and better.

And she has. To the point that she's become one of the best players on her teams and a standout in the leagues she plays in. And she's earned her own new skates along the way.

"She's motivated and she loves the game," Scott says. "You can't force that. You can be a hockey parent and drag your child to the rink but you can't make them want to play. And she'd stay on the ice. She'd go to multiple sessions. She'd had friends and she's played on a lot of teams and if we go to skills hour after hour and she'd just stay on the ice. It wouldn't be unheard of for her to skate for three hours in a row."

HAYLEY PARRISH, 14, of Quincy, is an elite hockey player and will attend the North Academy Hockey Academy in Stowe, VT, after beginning her freshman year at Quincy High School this fall. The family is appealing to the community to help contribute to her tuition at the academy that will cost about $130,000 over four years. Photo Courtesy Scott Parrish

This past season - as a 13-year-old - Hayley played for the Walpole Express - an Under 19 elite team. Hayley led the team in goals with 15 in 23 games.

"She averaged about a point a game which is very good for being 13 years old in a 19-year-old league," Scott notes.

Asked what makes her an elite player, Hayley says, "I think it's mostly my skating and speed. I can get around a lot of people because I used to do a lot of skills with my brother. I like to look for open people or I will shoot it if I have an open net."

Dad adds: "She's also not afraid to get banged up in front of the net. She gets a lot of what you might call 'dirty' goals."

Hayley will continue to work on her game this spring and summer. She leaves on May 8th to play hockey in Balzano, Italy as part of an elite tournament team in the 01 East Coast Selects Quebec team. She's also been selected by Mass. Hockey to attend a regional camp in New York in June.

Hayley's success on the ice also has a price. The cost to attend four years at NAHA in Stowe will run the family about $130,000. The school operates as a non-profit 501(c)3 charity but offers no financial aid. Tuition is $31,500 per year.

The Parrish family is appealing to the community to help assist Hayley's immediate hockey future. They have set up a website for individuals and businesses who wish to contribute to Hayley's tuition at NAHA.

The website is www.Hayley.Rocks. People can make tax deductible donations directly through her website and print out their receipt for tax purposes. There is

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1929 postcard reproduction showing the Old Colony Launderers & Cleansers Company that was at 100 Quincy Ave. near Quincy Center for 50 years. Founded in Braintree in 1896, the company moved to Quincy a few years later and was bought by Frederick W. Tirrell, a young Quincy businessman, who is remembered today as the founder of the Quincy Lodge of Elks. Their widely-known and popular function facility is named for him. When Tirrell died unexpectedly in 1908, his partner Forrest I. Neal became president of the laundry. Over the next 20 years, Neal steadily grew the business and in 1929 he built the large state-of-the-art laundry building shown here. An opening ceremony attracted over 13,000 visitors to the plant that was hailed as a showplace and model for laundry operations across the U.S. At its peak the laundry employed over 250 people, and with its truck fleet serviced homes and institutions throughout eastern Massachusetts. In 1951, Neal was succeeded as president by his son, Forrest I. Neal, Jr. who also became president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and was an influential MBTA director for many years. Then in September 1974, after 78 years in business, Neal was forced to close the laundry due to rising fuel and labor costs and a shrinking market. The plant site later became home to a Shaw's Market that is now the Quincy Municipal Credit Union building. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Letter Carriers Annual Food Drive Saturday

The National Association of Letter Carriers will sponsor its annual food drive Saturday, May 9. Residents are requested to leave all non-perishable donations by their mailbox for pick up by their letter carrier.

For many years the City of Quincy has provided a building to sort and package food for the pantries. This year volunteers are needed from 3 to 8 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., to sort and box food.

Drivers are also needed to pick up and transport food from the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy Post Offices to the Kennedy Center for sorting.

This is an opportunity to help the community and for children, of all ages, to accumulate volunteer hours for school and other activities. For more information, contact Rev. David Wooster at the Quincy Crisis Center at 617-847-6967.

He's Voting For Mayor Thomas Koch

As a lifelong resident of Quincy and a partner in a small business in Quincy center, I would like to express my reasons for voting for the current Mayor.

Having seen the downtown area dying a slow death since the early 1980s, after Sears moved to Braintree, it was a breath of fresh air to have a Mayor actually say and do something to breathe life back into the retail district which has become virtually nothing but a food court gasping for its final breath.

When Mayor Koch put together the revitalization proposal with Street-Works, most of the city's politicians and residents were on board with this unique idea. Yes, it failed, and the anti-Koch people saw blood in the water. These were even some of the people who endorsed this project.

So what has the Mayor done about this setback?

He has picked himself up and dusted himself off and instead of bailing out on the city and finding a nice cushy job in either the private or public sectors, he is moving forward to see this project become a reality as he had promised.

If the Mayor is to be criticized for anything, it's his over exuberance to see this city become an example for all cities both State wide and nationally.

There have been mistakes and there probably will be others, but Mayor Koch has shown me he doesn't run from them and is quick to correct them. A rare thing in today's politicians.

Thinks City Can Learn From Somerville's Management

The city of Somerville recently announced a new initiative to improve the level of customer service city employees provide to residents.

Similar to "secret shoppers" in retail stores, volunteers will pose as Somerville residents calling or visiting city hall with questions on permits, traffic guidelines, voting, and so forth. The goal of the initiative is to evaluate how knowledgeable, friendly, and helpful city workers are in dealing with issues raised by residents.

I think this would be a great initiative to bring to Quincy. I was at the DPW offices a few weeks ago and went through several people before finding someone who was friendly and helpful.

Somerville has done some great things in recent years. They leveraged the MBTA to open a new T station at Assembly Square. They revitalized Union Square with stylish new restaurants and businesses that have attracted young professionals, similar to the way Cambridge and Boston has always done.

In addition, Somerville provides its residents a rare property tax exemption that only a handful of other Massachusetts communities currently offer. The exemption is designed to help lower the city's cost of living and encourage more home ownership. In 2014, the city got approval from the state to increase this exemption from 30 to 35 percent, meaning qualified residents would only pay taxes on 65 percent of their home's assessed value. Quincy does not currently have this exemption.

I think Quincy city officials could learn a thing or two from Somerville's city management.

Fire Sirens Sounded On V-E Day

President Harry Truman proclaimed victory in Europe but told the nation its fighting job would be finished only "when the last Japanese division has surrendered unconditionally."

The City of Quincy, with a global war half won and Quincy boys still fighting in the vast reaches of the Pacific, observed V-E Day quietly, a bit grimly but with reverend thanks.

Mayor Charles A. Ross, upon hearing that the war in Europe was over, called fire headquarters and ordered sirens to be sounded.

Quincy 14,000 school children observed the victory with appropriate exercises in various schools and then dismissed for the day.

Practically all liquor establishments in the city locked their doors and a large number of stores closed for the day. City Hall was ordered closed from noon to three in the afternoon.

Students Abigail Little, Mackenzie Maguire Receive JFK Volunteer Award

Middle school students from across Massachusetts were honored with the John F. Kennedy Make a Difference Award on April 9, 2015 at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum in recognition of volunteer work the students have performed in their communities.

Among the recipients were two Broad Meadows Middle School students, Abigail Little and Mackenzie Maguire both of whom are 8th graders. Abigail Little was awarded the Make a Difference Award for her dedication to Operation Day's Work (ODW), a community service program at Broad Meadows. This year, Abigail and the students of ODW have partnered with the American Foundations for Children with AIDS (AFCA) and are currently raising money to support the vital work being done by AFCA in Zimbabwe. Mackenzie Maguire is receiving the Make a Difference Award for her involvement in many community service initiatives but in particular her instrumental role to recognize a sacred site, Passanegest Knoll, of the Massachusett Indian tribe. As a result of her work, a park is being built for this very reason.

The John F. Kennedy Make a Difference Award is given to students who are nominated by a teacher or principal for their outstanding contributions they have made to their school, neighborhood, town or the global community.

"President Kennedy believed that every person can make a difference and each of us should try" said Library Director Tom Putnam. "These students are an inspiring example of JFK's timeless call to service."

Apple Pecan Cake

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for a delicious apple cake. When we were all growing up, my mother always baked either an apple cake or an apple sauce cake.

I've made her wonderful recipe many times but recently found a different way to make the cake by adding a couple of other ingredients.

APPLE PECAN CAKE

4 cups apples (diced) I used both green and red
2 beaten eggs
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 cup chopped pecans
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt

Mix the apples, pecans, eggs, sugar, oil, cinnamon and vanilla in a large bowl. Add the flour, baking soda and salt and mix well.

Put into a 13x9x2 inch greased and floured pan. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 50-55 minutes. Delicious served with ice-cream.

Navy Bean Soup

By SUZIE

It is really easy to make a quick navy bean soup or any other type of white bean (such as Cannellini.)

I recommend if you are not soaking your dried beans to purchase Eden brand canned beans since they are easy to digest (because they contain a piece of Kombu, which is a sea vegetable and helps in digestion so you won't have the usual problem with eating beans) organic, and do not contain a BPA liner. These beans contain loads of fiber, calcium and magnesium as well as other important nutrients.

NAVY BEAN SOUP

2 cans of navy beans, drained
5 cups of organic broth of choice (I like IMAGINE brand)
•2 bay leaves
•1 tsp. sea salt
•2 pieces naturally cured pastured bacon
•1 leek, peeled and diced
•2 new or red potatoes, diced
•3 celery stalk, diced
•2 carrots, diced
•1/4 tsp. dried rosemary
•1/4 tsp. dried thyme
•1 tsp. Sea salt or to taste
•Black pepper (to taste)

Bring beans to a boil in broth and add bay leaves, cover and lower heat to simmer. Fry the bacon and chop into small pieces. In the bacon fat, saute the leeks, celery and carrots. Add vegetables to the soup. Add 1 tsp. sea salt and potatoes and continue cooking about 30 minutes.

Season with sea salt and black pepper to taste if needed.

Avocado Egg Salad

By SUZIE

Here is a delicious and healthy recipe utilizing hard boiled eggs and avocados. Avocados are loaded with healthy fats, fiber, and important vitamins and minerals. Eggs are a terrific source of protein and important nutrients as well.

Many people think avoiding the yolks is the way to go, but all of the actual science out there shows that is not true. Yolks are there for a reason, to be eaten along with the whites. They contain 100 percent of the fat soluble vitamins A, D, E and K as well as all the carotenoids, lutein and zeaxanthin. They also contain more than 90 percent of the calcium, iron, phosphorus, zinc, thiamin, folate, vitamin B6 and vitamin B12.

Compared to the yolk, the white doesn't bring much to the table in terms of nutrients. An egg white contains more protein than the yolk, but it's only because the yolk is smaller.

AVOCADO EGG SALAD

8 whole organic Hard Boiled Eggs, Peeled
2 whole Avocados, Pitted
4 Tablespoons Mayonnaise (Sir Kennington's to me is the absolute best!)
3 teaspoons apple cider Vinegar
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
Black pepper to taste
1 teaspoon Chives, Chopped

Preparation Instructions

Combine all ingredients (scrape avocado from skin) except for chopped chives in the bowl of a food processor. Pulse a few times, scraping the bowl once or twice if necessary. Continue pulsing until salad reaches the consistency you want: chunky or more smooth!

Remove blade from bowl and stir in chives. OR just mash the old school way with a fork! Check seasoning and adjust as necessary.

Serve on a sandwich (spread bread with a mix of Dijon and mayonnaise) or serve on a thick slice of tomato as a cool salad. Sprinkle on extra chives to make it look nice.

Sees Interesting Election Season

This ought to be an interesting election season this year in the City of Quincy. I'm sure we're going to be reminded many times about Mayor Koch buying the homes in North Quincy to make a park, the downtown project, the flood issue, and the rehabbing of Old City Hall and the overcost. Let's take a really good look at these issues:

1. Gee, do you think maybe that the people of North Quincy wanted the park, and it was not just a "pet project" of the Mayor's?

2. I haven't heard much lately about Quincy's " Filene's hole", but I guess maybe that's because the Mayor paid attention to what was going on, didn't listen to the whiners, and regrouped with new investors.

3. I haven't heard lately from all the whiners, such as Doug Gutru, who, in the Quincy Sun Dec. 31st, 2014, bashed Mayor Koch for not appealing the flood maps prior to the deadline. Maybe that's because Mr. Gutru knew he himself would be running for Mayor? Oh Doug--we DID win the appeal! "Silence is Golden."

4. On April 29th, I watched the QATV broadcast of the Finance Committee discuss the overcost on the Old City Hall project. According to the gentleman who made the presentation, the project manager had appeared before the Finance Committee and the City Council, and they all seemed to be shocked to hear of the overcost.

Has this project cost a lot of money? Absolutely! But the way City Hall had been originally constructed, and then, over the years, the way repairs had been done, contributed to the discovery of a lot of construction issues that the project manager did not anticipate, which happens on almost every project. It's called "Surprise!"

As I said, this ought to be an interesting election season. Everybody will blame Mayor Koch for all the problems, and the City Council who approves all the projects will be re-elected - maybe. All you voters out there: maybe the change should be in the City Council, not the Mayor's office.

Unions Press For Role In Downtown Redevelopment

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than 200 union workers recently held a rally in Quincy Center, pressing for jobs for organized labor during the construction of the first downtown project.

The developer of that project countered that it was "ridiculous" for those workers to blame the company, because labor leaders couldn't encourage union subcontractors to bid on the project.

The protest began shortly before 4 p.m. on April 29 in front of City Hall. Workers also gathered in front of the United First Parish Church and on Washington Street on the lawn of the Crane Library. Carrying signs declaring "Mayor Koch Giving Local Jobs Away" and "Quincy Mutual Unfair for Quincy Residents," among others, the workers began marching down Hancock Street around 5 p.m. A smaller contigent also marched back and forth from the Crane Library to Quincy Mutual's headquarters nearby.

The workers want the developers of West of Chestnut – Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential – to hire union labor. The city's now-terminated agreement with Street-Works, the former downtown master developer, included agreements to hire union members for downtown work.

"We were promised this job. We lobbied for this job. We went to our legislators to support this project. We supported it at the city level. Now, just because some bad business decisions were made, it shouldn't come out of our members' wages," said Bob Rizzi, president of the Quincy & South Shore Building Trades Council.

"We're being told they can't afford to pay community standards. It is not our fault. We didn't even bid the project, but yet we find ourselves behind the eight ball scrambling to find jobs. It's easy to exploit any workers – go someplace where there is no work and you get them cheap. You get what you pay for.

"Quality is quality. The buildings in front of us we're all built with union pension funds. We put our money where our mouth is. Union pension funds built them. We supported all local projects and local people worked here. We provide careers for the youth in the city of Quincy, not one job and see you later."

"The city of Quincy has not allowed city residents to work here in the city," added Thomas McGrath, a Quincy resident and organizer for Pipefitters Local 537. "We we're promised that and we're no longer being promised."

Union leaders also sent a letter to members earlier that day, urging them to boycott Quincy Mutual and cancel any policies they may have with the company.

In response to the protest, Quincy Mutual Executive Vice President James J. Moran said his company met with union leaders on several occasions beginning late last year. Quincy Mutual, he explained, encouraged unions to bid on the work but there was little response.

"We have met a number of times since December with leaders of the South Shore Building Trades Council. We've encouraged all the local trades to bid on the project and unfortunately have seen little response," Moran said in a statement.

"We want union workers on this job and have asked them to put in competitive bids, and told them that even if the union bids are a little higher we would find a way to work with them. Unions can't get the work, though, if they can't get union subcontractors to submit bids that are in the competitive ballpark.

"It is ridiculous for union leaders to blame Quincy Mutual because they failed to get union subcontractors to compete for work on West of Chestnut."

Koch, in a statement on Monday, said unions would continue to be part of the process.

"Organized labor has al-

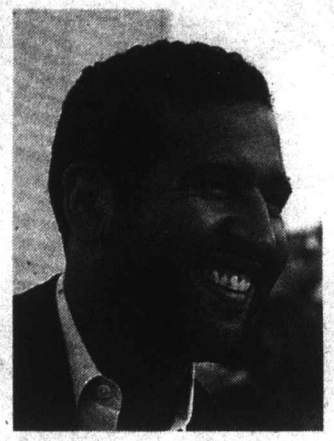
Ian Cain Candidate For Ward 3 Councillor

Ian Cain, a Quincy native with a decade of professional experience in commercial real estate, energy and technology, announces his candidacy for Ward 3 city councillor.

The seat is being vacated by seven-term incumbent Kevin Coughlin who announced earlier this spring that he would not seek an eighth term on the City Council.



IAN CAIN

"I'm thrilled by the opportunity to represent my family, my friends and my neighbors in the neighborhood where I grew up, and where my family has lived for four generations," Cain said. "It would be an honor to have the chance to work for and with my community on creating the Quincy of the future."

A resident of Quincy for the majority of his life, Cain said that he has been seeking ways to become more involved in and give back to the community that has given him so much. A product of the Quincy Public Schools, he graduated from Wollaston Elementary and Central Middle School before graduating from BC High School. He also graduated from Boston College and earned an MBA from Duke University.

"I have been supremely blessed with experiences near and far, and I care deeply about making Quincy an even better city than it already is," he said. "While we will always be the City of Presidents, Quincy needs to embrace the future of the innovation economy. I am uniquely positioned to provide that perspective and experience.

"The most important thing for me is maintaining the level of constituent service that Ward 3 constituents expect and deserve. I have heard from so many people in the Ward about the wonderful job that Kevin Coughlin has done over the last 14 years. I can only seek to meet that bar and exceed it."

Cain, 33, is on the business development team at Luminoso, a technology company in Cambridge. His team will be holding a campaign kickoff on Tuesday, May 12, at 6 p.m. at the Common Market Restaurant. Cain can be contacted by calling (617) 657-4204 or e-mail him at cainforquincy@gmail.com.

Quincycyles Community Bike Ride May 9

Quincycles will host a leisurely community bike ride Saturday, May 9 along a route proposed for bicycle lanes and "sharrows," or "shared lane markings," as part of this year's Bay State Bike Week.

The ride begins at 9 a.m. and departs Atlantic Middle School, 86 Hollis Ave. It is being co-sponsored by Mayor Koch's Bicycle Commission and the Planning Department and supported by the Community Police Unit of the Quincy Police Department.

The route being ridden May 9th follows the Quincy Spine, a path prioritized for bicycle infrastructure in the City's Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan. The plan was adopted by the City Council in January 2015.

If implemented, the Spine would provide bicyclists a safer way to travel from Quincy to Boston, Braintree and Weymouth.

The Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan includes recommendations for improving bike facilities on several other streets as well, including Adams Street and Billings Road.

For more information on the ride and other bicycle advocacy efforts visit Quincycles.org or the Bicycle Commission's webpage at quincyma.gov.

Quincy Salvation Army To Honor Two Leaders At Civic Dinner

Michael Bellotti, Isobel Bertman Award Recipients May 13 At Neighborhood Club

The Quincy Salvation Army will honor two community leaders at its second annual Civic Dinner Wednesday, May 13 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti will receive the Salvation Army's "Others Award" and Isobel Bertman of Rogers Jewelry in Quincy will receive the "Community Partner's Award." Both recipients are members of the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board.

The evening begins at 6 p.m. with a social hour followed by dinner at 7 p.m. The program that evening will highlight the human service programs offered by the Salvation Army of Quincy with the theme "The Bell for Help Rings All Year Round."

There will also be a silent auction featuring tickets to sporting events, gift certificates to local restaurants and other items. All proceeds will benefit the Salvation Army's mission of serving the needy and underprivileged.

Bellotti will be presented the "Others Award" for his longtime commitment to lending a helping hand to individuals in need throughout the community. This award is traditionally given to an individual or organization that exemplifies an extraordinary spirit of service to others; efforts that in turn benefit the Salvation Army and/or the community.

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

ISOBEL BERTMAN

In his third term as the sheriff of Norfolk County, Bellotti runs the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham and is a recognized leader in the area of inmate reentry. "By addressing the issues that contribute to offenders committing crimes in the first place, we can greatly reduce the chance of them reoffending after they finish serving their sentences and reenter our communities," Bellotti said.

Bellotti is a past President of the Massachusetts Sheriff's Association. He is a strong advocate of continual professional training for correctional staff. The Norfolk Sheriff's Office has more correction officers certified by the American Jail Association than any other correctional institution in the nation.

Sheriff Bellotti also runs a number of important community initiatives such as the Youth Leadership Academy, Triad, "Are You OK?" and the Yellow Dot program. He has been a key figure in battling the opioid crisis in the region and served on the Governor's Anti-Bullying Task Force.

He is a graduate of Boston College and New England School of Law. He and his wife, Gayle, have three children and live in Quincy.

Bertman will be presented the Community Partner's Award that recognizes an individual who has long served and who has given during his/her years of service identifiable valuable service to Quincy Corps. She has served on the Salvation Army Advisory Board in Quincy for 20 years – the longest tenure of any current member.

Isobel has helped raise thousands of dollars for the Christmas Kettle campaign. Each year, Rogers Jewelry donates money from new watchbands and batteries during the Christmas season.

She was born in Boston and raised in Brookline, the oldest of two children. Bertman attended Brookline schools and graduated from Brimmer and May in 1953 and then attended Hood College in Maryland.

In 1956, she married Mark Bertman and then first lived in Newton before moving to Chicago and later Omaha, NE before relocating to Westwood. They now live in Marina Bay, Quincy.

Besides the Salvation Army, Isobel has been an active member of the YMCA Board and St. Coletta's in Braintree.

She and Mark are the parents of two grown sons, Bruce and Jeff, and have two grandsons – Wade and Jason.

For more information about this event and for tickets or reservations call the Quincy Corps office at 617-472-2345 or go online at www.salvationarmyma.org/Quincy.

Gutro, Koch Clash Over Downtown Timeline

City Council would have to approve land disposition agreements for them; Koch said April 7 that he wanted the council to do so this spring, allowing the projects to break ground as early as this fall.

Gutro, who is running against Koch in this year's municipal election, said Monday he feels that timeline is politically driven. Quincy, he explained, has a once in a generation chance to redevelop the downtown and should focus on doing it right, not fast.

"The timing and the rush to act this spring feels politically driven to me. Given some of the serious missteps around Street-Works, I think that it's more important than ever to get it right this time. I think it is a once-in-a-generation opportunity that we have with our downtown, and it's better to do it right than to do it fast and I don't think we should lead with the city's checkbook," said Gutro, who is also the chairman of the downtown committee.

"The final point I would like to make, and the council agreed to this several weeks back, there was a fairly robust public outreach effort the first time around with Street-Works. We ask nothing less this time around."

Koch responded that there was no misstep with Street-Works, pointing to the completion of downtown infrastructure projects. The timing, he added, is being driven by the market and not politics.

"There was no misstep made at all. The work that we did as a city was amazing. When Street-Works left town, Street-Works lost millions of dollars. Unfortunately so did Quincy Mutual and so did others. We didn't lose a dime. Because of the work of this body and the administration, we protected the city," Koch said.

"We talked about downtown revitalization for 40 years. We talked about the roadway being done for four decades – it's done. The Town Brook has been moved – that was a large impetus as part of the project. If those things didn't happen we wouldn't be talking about expansion. I think we've made tremendous strides.

"You have to stick your neck out politically – no risk, no reward...the timing isn't political here. The timing is based on the market. The market wasn't there a few years ago. The market is here now. That doesn't mean you should rush it. But that means we should take advantage of the market that is here for us. The market drives this thing and the city of Quincy is extremely hot right now."

Gutro and Koch made their comments during an update on the plans for Quincy Center at Monday night's City Council meeting. Later on during the meeting, Koch said he does not believe the community meetings Gutro had sought in a resolution earlier this spring would be necessary, since the plan for the downtown remains the same.

"Going back to those community meetings, we did more than 30 of them citywide and I don't think it's necessary for us to go down that road again because the vision isn't changing," Koch said. "I think you should spend the time necessary on the documents we put before you – take the time you need – but we have a great window of opportunity here in the market place and we want to take full advantage of that."

OUT WITH THE OLD – workers demolished the one-story building at 1446 Hancock Street recently to make way for the West of Chestnut development. Work on the West of Chestnut project began in early April and is expected to continue through July 2016. Two buildings with 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of ground level retail will be built as a result of the new project, which is being undertaken by the Quincy Mutual Group and Gate Residential.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked about the ability of new developers – those introduced in April and others who will build in Quincy Center – to finance their projects. Street-Works had been unable to do so.

"What do you foresee as being the financial stress test? What can we do now that we didn't so much accomplish with Street-Works that they couldn't meet as far as financial viability of the projects?" Palmucci inquired.

Koch responded that Street-Works had been unable to find financing for the whole $1.6 billion project they planned for the entirety of the downtown. The new developers will be dealing with smaller projects.

"Street-Works couldn't execute because they couldn't raise the dollars necessary to do the whole project. That was the entire project as master developer. It was a huge, huge project," Koch said,

"There is a lot of interest in these parcels," he added later. "We want to make sure they are all within we all talked about across the city. We want to make sure it meets all the design guidelines, the financial test as you suggested, and it meets the requirments that all those new developments and new growth taxes are enough to pay down the debt of the new infrastructure of the downtown. If it meets all those things, we're going to move full steam ahead."

Koch also highlighted growth in the downtown. In recent years, Presidents Place sold for $44.5 million and the Monroe Building for $35 million. Just over two weeks ago, 10 Faxon sold for $65 million.

Ward 1 Margaret Laforest gave examples of new growth in her ward on the periphery of the downtown. Those projects include the construction of a new $30 million YMCA on Coddington Street, South Cove Manor on Washington Street and planned projects at the former Temple Beth El and the old Central Middle School on Hancock Street, among others.

"I don't know that people realize the dollar value we've seen in new growth, and a lot of it is on the periphery of the downtown,"

Responders Drill For A 'Miracle On The Hudson' Here

The City of Quincy hosted a training workshop and an On Water Training Opportunity for federal, state, and municipal Maritime Response Agencies last Saturday morning. The exercise named ALERT THREE MARITIME was designed to prepare the Metro-Boston Region for responding to Aircraft Emergencies.

The On Water portion of the training took place in Quincy Bay, and at Pier 10 in the Boston Inner Harbor, between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. The exercise simulated an emergency landing of a jet airliner that experienced engine failure after take off from nearby Logan International Airport in East Boston. Several dozen spectators along with first responders from Quincy and other communities looked on from the seawall along Wollaston Beach.

Saturday's emergency exercise resembled the "Miracle on the Hudson" when a U.S. Airways Airbus A320 made an unpowered emergency landing in the Hudson River. Multiple bird strikes caused both engines to fail. All 155 occupants, the passengers and crew including pilot Captain Chesley B. "Sully" Sullenberger and First Officer Jeffrey Skiles, were successfully evacuated from the partially submerged airframe as it sank into the river. All aboard were rescued by nearby watercraft.

The scenario of last Saturday's emergency exercise:

An Airbus Model A330-300 with 237 persons onboard departs Logan runway 22L on a Trans-Atlantic Flight and suffers multiple engine failure and has to execute an emergency landing into the adjacent waters of Massachusetts Bay.

The aircraft has approximately 180,000 pounds of jet fuel onboard. There are multiple fatalities, injuries and a person(s) of interest to U.S. Customs and Border Protection that was being exported from the U.S. for known ties to terrorists groups. There is a very significant amount of pollution impacting the water and later the shoreliness, as the tide and wind changes.

The overarching goal of the exercise is to provide a multi-layered training opportunity to enhance the skills and abilities of the Metro-Boston's Maritime First Responders, as well as to train Incident Command Staffs for coordinating and managing a large mass casualty incident (such as an Aircraft Emergency) that could occur anywhere in the Commonwealth.

The City of Quincy's designated Staging and Support Area for Maritime Emergencies is the Hough's Neck Maritime Center. As with an actual emergency, the Maritime Center served as a logistics and support area to load exercise participants, stage emergency equipment, and support participating response vessels.

The City of Boston has designated Pier 10 near the Black Falcon Terminal in South Boston as the designated Casualty Collection Area for Maritime Emergencies occurring within the Port of Boston. The Boston Fire Department and the Boston Emergency Medical Service simulated treating and decontaminating airplane crash victims rescued from the Quincy Bay Training Site and transported to Pier 10 by participating agency response vessels.

AGENCIES PARTICIPATING in last Saturday's rescue and preparedness exercise included Massport Fire Rescue Department and Marine Unit, Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Mass. Enviromental Police Department, the U.S. Coast Guard and area fire and police departments including Quincy, Braintree and Hingham.

Members of the U.S. Army Reserve 655 RSG and 719 MCB Units have volunteered to serve as simulated aircraft passengers and crewmembers for the training evolution.

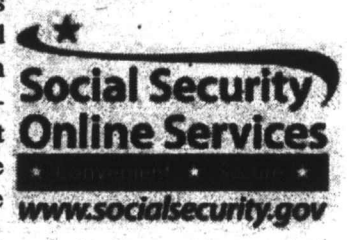
Give The Gift Of Time, Love This Mother's Day

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

What do you plan to get for Mom this Mother's Day? If she's like most Americans, she probably feels time-constrained and the hours she spends with family and friends are precious. So, in addition to giving her flowers or a card, give her a gift she'll really appreciate: the chance to spend more time with the ones she loves!



While spending time with your mom on Sunday, May 10, you can help her quickly and easily sign up for a free, online my Social Security account. You can do it from home, which means less time waiting in line, and more time doing the things you want to do together.

Signing up for a my Social Security account will give Mom the tools she needs to stay on top of her future Social Security benefits. When she signs up at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount, she can do a number of things. First and foremost, she can plan for her retirement.

Mom can never start planning for retirement too early. If she isn't already retired, she can view her Social Security Statement, verify her earnings records, and find out what benefits she can expect to receive at age 62, her full retirement age, or at age 70.

Is Mom thinking of retiring at a different age? It's easy to get instant, personalized benefit estimates, too. Just escort Mom to the Retirement Estimator, where she can plug in different scenarios to find out how much she can expect in Social Security benefits. She can also plug in different future wage amounts to see how her future benefits can be affected by when she retires and how much she contributes. Visit the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

As she continues to work and earn wages, she can use her my Social Security account to keep track of and verify her annual earnings. If Mom has already retired and receives Social Security benefits, she can use her account to:

- Get an instant letter with proof of her benefits;
- Change her address and phone number; and
- Start or change direct deposit of her benefit payment.

The time saved by using our convenient and secure online services is priceless. Helping Mom sign up for a my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount is a great, personalized gift that shows you really care!

Volunteer Sighting Of Smelt In Town Brook

By PAT ARTIS

For the past two months volunteers of the Town Brook Stream Team have been monitoring daily four to five different locations along the Town Brook in search of smelt. On Thursday, April 30 at 2 p.m. a volunteer viewed 7 to 10 live smelt at Miller Stile Road and observed two dead smelt in the water further downstream.

On Monday, April 27th, Brad Chase of the MA Department of Marine Fisheries had observed smelt eggs in great numbers along the stream bottom in the Miller Stile area of the brook. Later on in his observation, Chase climbed into the brook from the backyard of Arline Goodman's house and checked out the whole section from Goodman's garages up through the lower pocket park, to under Mechanic Street towards the upper pocket park. Chase found absolutely no eggs in this whole section of the brook. He did comment about runoff from the old brook coming from under Revere Road and the Hancock Parking Lot; the runoff water entering the new route may be a reason for no smelt eggs in the pocket parks. Chase will be writing up a report on his findings from this observation.

According to members of the Stream Team Steering Committee made up of Quincy Environmental Network and Wollaston Garden Club Conservation Committee members, the smelt seem to prefer spawning in the downstream sections of the Town Brook where little has changed to affect successful spawning. As is stands now, it does not seem like the smelt have gotten accustomed to the "enhanced" spawning environment created three years ago by the relocation of the Town Brook and the construction of the two pocket parks and new smelt environs.

The Town Brook Stream Team and its volunteers look forward to reading Chase's report of the results of this year's smelt spawning season. They are also concerned with continued low water flow issues, the health of the stream itself, and the need for maintenance and oversight by the city for removing trash from the brook, particularly in the pocket park sections. It is hoped that the City will find a way to continue monitoring the quality of water in the brook after the three year MA Department of Environmental Protection mandated condition ends on May 31. (Detailed information can be found on the city's web site at http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PLANNING/townbrookproject.cfm)

The goal of Town Brook Stream Team organizers is to educate its volunteer members and the greater community regarding the life cycle of the smelt and the brook's fragile ecosystem; to develop community advocacy for the smelt and its ecosystem; and to conduct an accurate, methodical fish count for each spring.

Laforest said.

The city-owned Hancock Lot and Ross Parking Garage are both being targeted for development; plans to build a new garage on the Hancock Lot could be unveiled later this year. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall said the city needs to provide adequate parking for the new downtown in the new garage or elsewhere.

"I would assume when you're building a downtown you want activity, you want to bring people into the city, you need somewhere to put the cars," Croall said.

"There is a saying out there that sometimes less is more, but when we're talking about parking, in my opinion, for a downtown more is more. We just supported an initiative for Quincy College to go from two to four years. We hope that brings more people to the city. We hope to set up more retail and residential. We hope that brings more people to the city."

"We need to have ample capacity if not excess capacity," Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee added, "especially to accommodate special events. If you have a hotel there will be functions and so forth. I think it's going to be a critical amenity to the success of the development of the downtown."

Koch replied that the city has retained consulting firm DESMAN to assist with plans for the new garage on the Hancock Lot.

"We are talking about a several hundred car parking garage. Whether it's going to be 550, 650 or 700 on the Hancock Lot, I'm not sure at this point. We'll probably see something equally as large on the Ross Parking Garage at some point," Koch said, before hinting that the Stop & Shop garage may also factor into the plans.

Council President Joseph Finn finished by saying the council would take as long as needed to review downtown matters to ensure residents are protected.

"We will take all the time necessary to vet those to ensure from our perspective that we are protecting the citizens and the taxpayers of Quincy," Finn said.

MORE THAN 200 union workers from Quincy and surrounding communities rallied April 29 in Quincy Center urging downtown developers to hire organized labor for center projects.

ways been part of the process and always will be, so I think there's a little misinformation being spread by Mr. Rizzi, which is unfortunate, but nothing that cannot be addressed," he said.

Both candidates who have declared their intention to challenge Koch in November – Councillor Doug Gutro and School Committee member Anne Mahoney – attended the April 29 rally.

While both said unions need to play a role in construction projects in the downtown, they differed on how they would accomplish that if elected.

Gutro said he would advocate for more union involvement.

"You're an advocate," he said. "All you have to do is go to Boston; you'll see $3 billion of construction that's happening on the Fan Pier that's already permitted and $3 billion that's in the queue. Union employers are participating in the continued rebirth of Boston. The same thing is happening at Assembly Row in Somerville."

"So not only can it be done, it is being done in other communities. They live here. They want to work here. They deserve the chance to do it."

Mahoney said the city should hold developers to the original agreement.

"I think the city needs to do more to actually hold their obligation and the promises they make to people," she said. "If you're going to make promises and business agreements, you actually have to hold true to what you're doing and make sure you can do those and do everything you possibly can do to actually bring all the teams together to make sure you can be successful in the projects you say you're going to go out and do.

"They made a promise and a commitment to the laborers. This project downtown didn't fall apart because of union labor."

Quincy Credit Union Supports One Fund Center At MGH

With the help of its generous Members and dedicated staff, Quincy Credit Union raised over $1,000 for The One Fund Center at Massachusetts General Hospital.

The Center offers ongoing care to those affected by the often invisible, yet persistent injuries sustained during the Boston Marathon bombings. It brings together resources and medical expertise from the MGH, MEEI and Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital to coordinate personalized care and support for the injured and their families.

Quincy Credit Union's contribution was raised through Boston Strong t-shirt sales, member cash donations and awareness pin sales throughout the month of April which marked the second anniversary of the Boston Marathon bombing.

The t-shirt, designed by QCU's graphic designer Eric Sawler, features many famous Boston landmarks including a Red Line train, Fenway Park, the Zakim Bridge, the Hancock Building, the Massachusetts State House and the U. S. S. Constitution.

Registry Of Deeds Reaches 100,000th Electronic Recording

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announced Monday the Registry recently recorded its 100,000th document submitted electronically.

Since 2010, the Registry has partnered with electronic recording vendor Simplifile to provide qualified institutional users, such as real estate professionals, banks and mortgage companies, law firms, and title research companies the ability to file original documents electronically without having to leave their offices.

Commenting on the success of the electronic recording program, O'Donnell said. "The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is continually on the lookout to leverage cutting edge technologies to improve the customer experience at the Registry both for our institutional customers and members of the public. Norfolk County was one of the first Registries in the Commonwealth to provide electronic recording capability to its institutional customers. Today, approximately 25-30 percent of our weekly intakes of land documents (deeds, homesteads, mortgages, etc) are recorded via electronic filing."

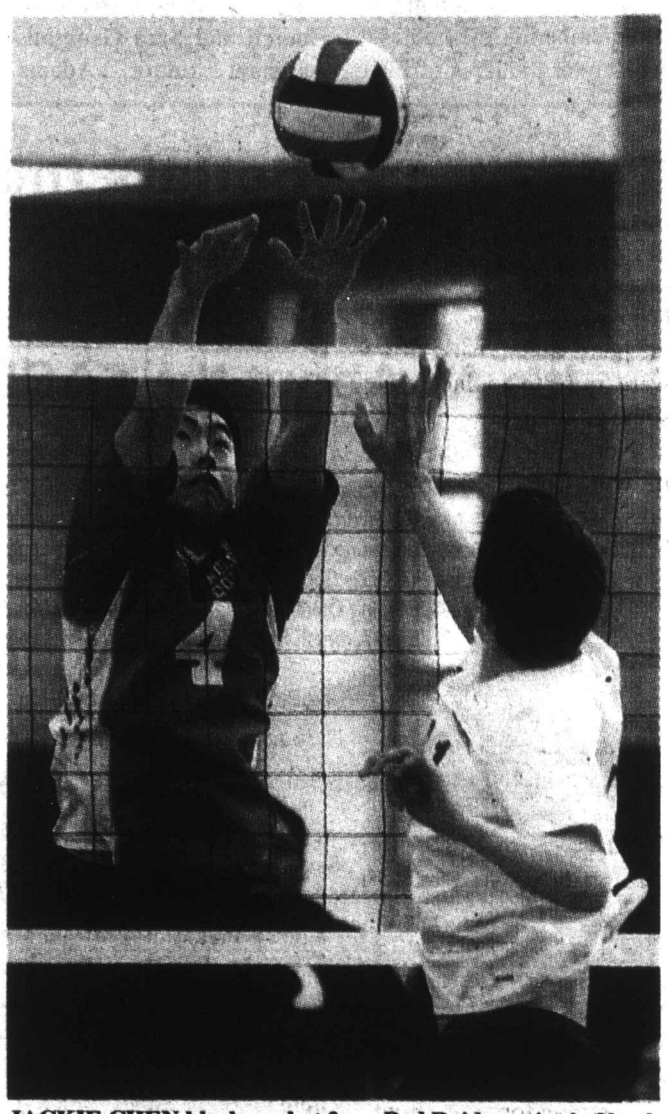
Chen Difference In NQ Thriller Over Quincy

By BILL GRIFFIN

After 2 ½ hours, after 216 points, after five sets of volleyball packed with high emotion and high skill, the difference between these two great rivals – Quincy and North Quincy – was two points.

In the end, it was decided by the best player on the court. When North's Jackie Chen took the serve late in the fifth set, his team trailed 13-9 and was two points away from defeat. It was a moment of truth.

Chen served accurate, spinning bullets, saved four points with with tumbling digs, and willed the Red Raiders to an exhausting 19-25, 25-17, 24-26, 27-25, 15-13 victory over a gallant Quincy band who came within the slimmest of margins of a huge upset at the Quincy High gym Friday afternoon.



JACKIE CHEN blocks a shot for a Red Raider point in North Quincy's thrilling 3-2 match win over the Presidents on Quincy's home court May 1. North Quincy won the second and fourth sets to force a fifth set that the Red Raiders won 15-13 after trailing 13-9. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

"It hurts now because we came so close, but I told the kids after the match to be proud, that they had played their best match of the year," said Quincy coach Jacqui Niosi after her club partnered with North to stamp the day as one of the best in the history of the fine rivalry.

When Chen stepped to the service line, North was in trouble. The Red Raiders had barely survived a match point in the fourth game, and Quincy had controlled the fifth behind the hitting and blocking of its front line led by Chris Pham and Xhuljo Zyba. Pham and Zyba rifled winners and Quincy was not only up by four on the scoreboard (13-9), but the Presidents also had the force of powerful momentum with them.

But North had Chen. He started by saving three straight points with flying gets. All three were well hit and well placed by Quincy. His plays were born of poise and reaction and quickness and years of bounding to the floor returning volleyballs. He took a point on a service winner. He saved a fourth point with a dig. He would not let North lose.

Anxhelo Taho put away three at the net with two smashes and a touch shot to draw North even at 13-13. Eric Huang volleyed a winner off a fourth Chen save and North was up, 14-13. Chen placed another bullseye serve which forced a soft return. Taho and Chen finished it at the net and North had its memorable win.

When it was over, North had won 110 points. Quincy had won 106. It was that close and it was that good.

"It was a great match. It was one where it was special just to be a part of it," said North coach Jason Cai. "Jackie was clutch, no doubt about it. It was so close at the end. All we wanted to to do was keep the ball up, keep it off the floor and keep the point alive. That's all we were trying to do. Jackie had some great digs."

North richly deserved its win. Chen (13 kills, 12 digs) was brilliant despite being the target of Quincy's blockers all afternoon. Taho (27 kills, seven blocks, five digs) turned back Quincy's match point in the fourth game with a block and was a tower in the middle of North's front line.

Eric Huang (46 assists, 124 in his last three matches) set up Chen and Taho with timing and touch. Shiggy Zheng (25 digs) played terrific defense and anchored North's back line. Calvin Ma (four kills, 10 digs) and Kevin Huang (eight kills) were strong forces up front.

"Shiggy played great. We're lucky to have him. When things aren't going well, he plays excellent defense. He keeps us alive," said Cai.

However, if the win belonged to North (9-2), the story belonged to Quincy (4-9). When the two met just over a month ago, North won in three straight games by a total of 75-41. Last Friday, they played a classic. Quincy's improvement in barely four weeks was striking. The Presidents matched North in every phase of the game from the net to serve to sets to defense. They were just as good. It is a tribute to the players and their coach.

"We're so much better, I can't believe we're the same team," said Niosi before the match.

"I guess we confirmed that," said Niosi after the match.

"I knew they would be tougher the second time around. I saw their talent and I know they have a good coach. Give Quincy credit. They played a great match," said Cai.

Pham, only a freshman, had a breakout out game swatting the ball with power from the backline for 10 kills and 19 digs. The front line of Zyba (15 kills), Vince Cristiani (six kills, seven blocks) and Stiven Cyfeku not only put away points, but moved smartly and as a unit to deny Chen clear alleys for his blasts. Sophomore setter Chris Situ (31 assists) set up the hitters with the right pace and height.

Jackson Le (30 digs), Jerod Lin (24 digs) and Henry Yip (10 digs) simply would not allow the ball to hit the floor.

"Jerod did a great job reading and covering all over the floor, and Jackson played his best match of the season. It's hard to get the ball by him," said Niosi. "Chris (Situ) did a good job mixing it up and moving the ball around. Our front line read their hits and blocked very well."

One number reveals how well and how hard the two teams played. Quincy had four players who combined for 83 digs. North had four players who combined for 52. That adds to 135 points the two teams kept alive because they had the skill and will to stop the ball from hitting the floor.

"The defense was so good that it was very hard to find a way to get the ball to the floor," said Niosi.

The final point of the match showed that well. After Chen and Taho had given North firm control of the point, Zyba skidded, dove and crashed into bleachers in chase of the ball. He kept it alive with his foot, and sent one last hope for Quincy back onto the clourt. However the Presidents' final volley was high and short. The match, which truly had no losers, was finished.

North faces Boston Latin on the road Friday. Quincy will visit Durfee Monday.

Palbutong, Phelan Power Presidents To 13-10 Win

By TREVOR WENNERS

Senior captains and attacks Noreen Palbutong and Kerry Phelan made their presence felt on Senior Night for the Quincy High School girls lacrosse team as they combined for nine goals in a 13-10 victory over North Quincy on Thursday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"Kerry is always an instrumental player for us," said Presidents second-year head coach Alisa Arakelian. "She usually puts in a few goals for us and she is usually our leading scorer although last year it's funny she was our leader in assists) So, this year her role has changed a little bit but it's nice to see her back into that quarterback position – taking control (and) moving the ball well.

"She and Noreen work really well together. Last year Noreen was a little (shyer) so she didn't go to goal as much and this year we've been really working hard on it. She has been shooting with her left hard. She has been driving to goal a lot more so it's nice to have her have this game at this time in her career."

The game was sitting at 12-10 in favor of Quincy (2-11) late and North Quincy (2-5) was putting a lot of pressure on net. The Red Raiders have people who can put up goals in a hurry which includes senior Ciara Forde (two goals in the game) and junior Marissa McGue (two goals in the game). Forde scored seven goals earlier this season against Whitman-Hanson and McGue scored six goals the last time Quincy and North Quincy met.

Quincy sophomore goalie Emi Guarente (102 saves going into the game) made several strong saves during the course of the game but it was the signature ones down the stretch when the game was on the line that helped Quincy hold on to even the season series at 1-1 in the city rivalry.

"It's funny Emi comes up big when the pressure is on," said Arakelian. "It is impressive to see a young player like that come up big even in pressure situations. She never wavered and I can't thank her enough, she kept us in this game."

The Presidents jumped out to an early 2-0 lead 4:26 into the game behind goals from junior midfielder Gabriela Jerahian and Phelan.

"Gabby is a true midfielder player, you don't see them very often where they're literally (capable of going) end-to-end and do everything," said Arakelian. "She is a true craftsman at the sport. She makes catches that I don't think anyone could ever make so she's an amazing player, an amazing edition. She'll be with us next year and I can't wait."

QUINCY'S NOREEN PALBUTONG scores one of her five goals to help power the Presidents to a 13-10 victory over North Quincy April 30 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy's win avenged an 18-6 loss to the Red Raiders April 16. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

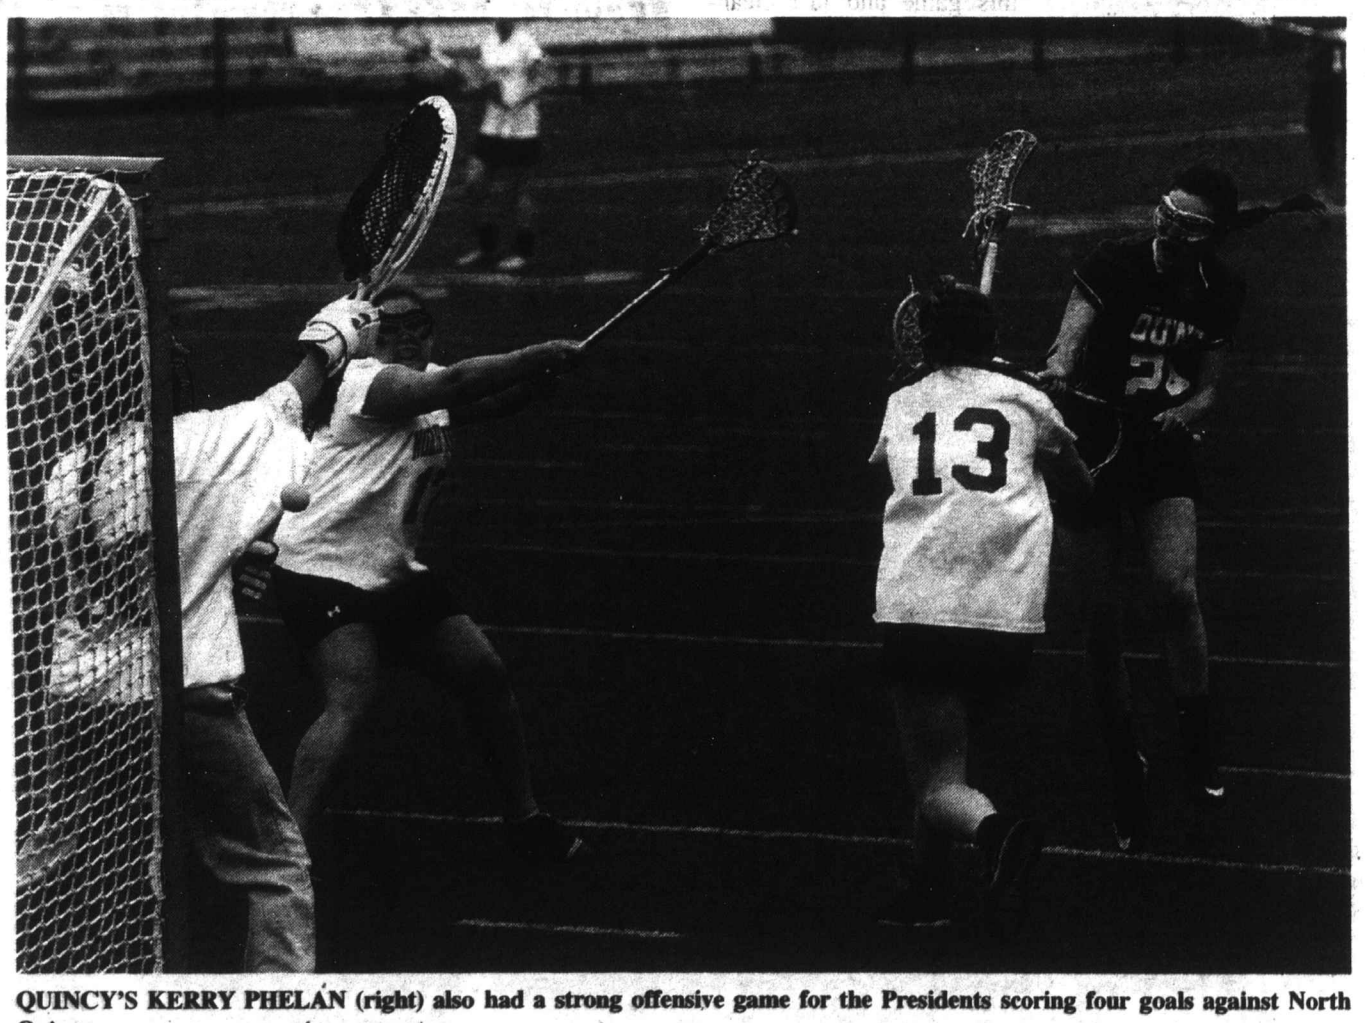
McGue found the back of the net to bring the Red Raiders to within 2-1 with 20:16 left in the opening half. Palbutong (15 goals on the season) scored to extend Quincy's lead to 3-1.

Junior attack Savannah Flynn and junior midfielder Charlotte Chretien scored for the Red Raiders to even the game at 3-3 with 18:07 left in the half.

Junior attack Sarah Tsan scored to give the Red Raiders their first lead at 4-3. Palbutong responded to even the game at 4-4. Tsan fired it past the goalie again to make the score 5-4 North Quincy with 11:56 left in the half.

Quincy responded with the next four goals. Two of them came from Palbutong, one from Phelan and one from Jerahian (14th goal of the season) which gave the Presidents' an 8-5 lead with 5:44 left in the half.

Forde and McGue found the back of the net and all of a sudden the Red Raiders were within one at 8-7.



QUINCY'S KERRY PHELAN (right) also had a strong offensive game for the Presidents scoring four goals against North Quincy.

Phelan scored with three seconds remaining in the first half to send Quincy into the break with a two goal advantage at 9-7.

Arakelian spoke about how her team felt going into intermission with a two goal advantage.

"We did (feel good about ourselves) but I told them that it wouldn't be easy," she said. "You got to play two halves of a game and North is going to come out fighting hard. (Megan Therrien) is a good coach, she has some good coaches that stand behind her and she has a goalie coach that has stepped up this year. She has a lot of good talent that stands behind her and she has some good players on her bench and on the field. They were going to come out hard and try to do everything they could so we just needed to hold them at bay."

Quincy scored 1:16 into the second half and then Tsan completed her hat trick for the Red Raiders to bring them to within 10-8 with 19:15 remaining.

"Sarah's been working very hard," said Therrien. "She was frustrated early on (in) the week so we worked specifically on shooting with her and she tried to figure out how not to get in her head. She was getting in her head way too much when she shot and she even came up to me (and) she's like, 'I just let it go.' She was so happy that she didn't think about it, she just so shot so we were just working on her being more comfortable with her shot and just shooting as hard as she can. I know she has a good shot so she just has to have the confidence and you can see that growing with her."

Phelan tallied her 29th goal of the season with 12:27 remaining to give Quincy a three goal lead again at 11-8. Senior captain Kiera Clifford scored assisted by sophomore Karyn McEvoy to bring the Red Raiders to within 11-9 with 11:31 left. Quincy scored again and Forde found the back of the net assisted by McGue with 9:44 left to trim Quincy's lead to 12-10.

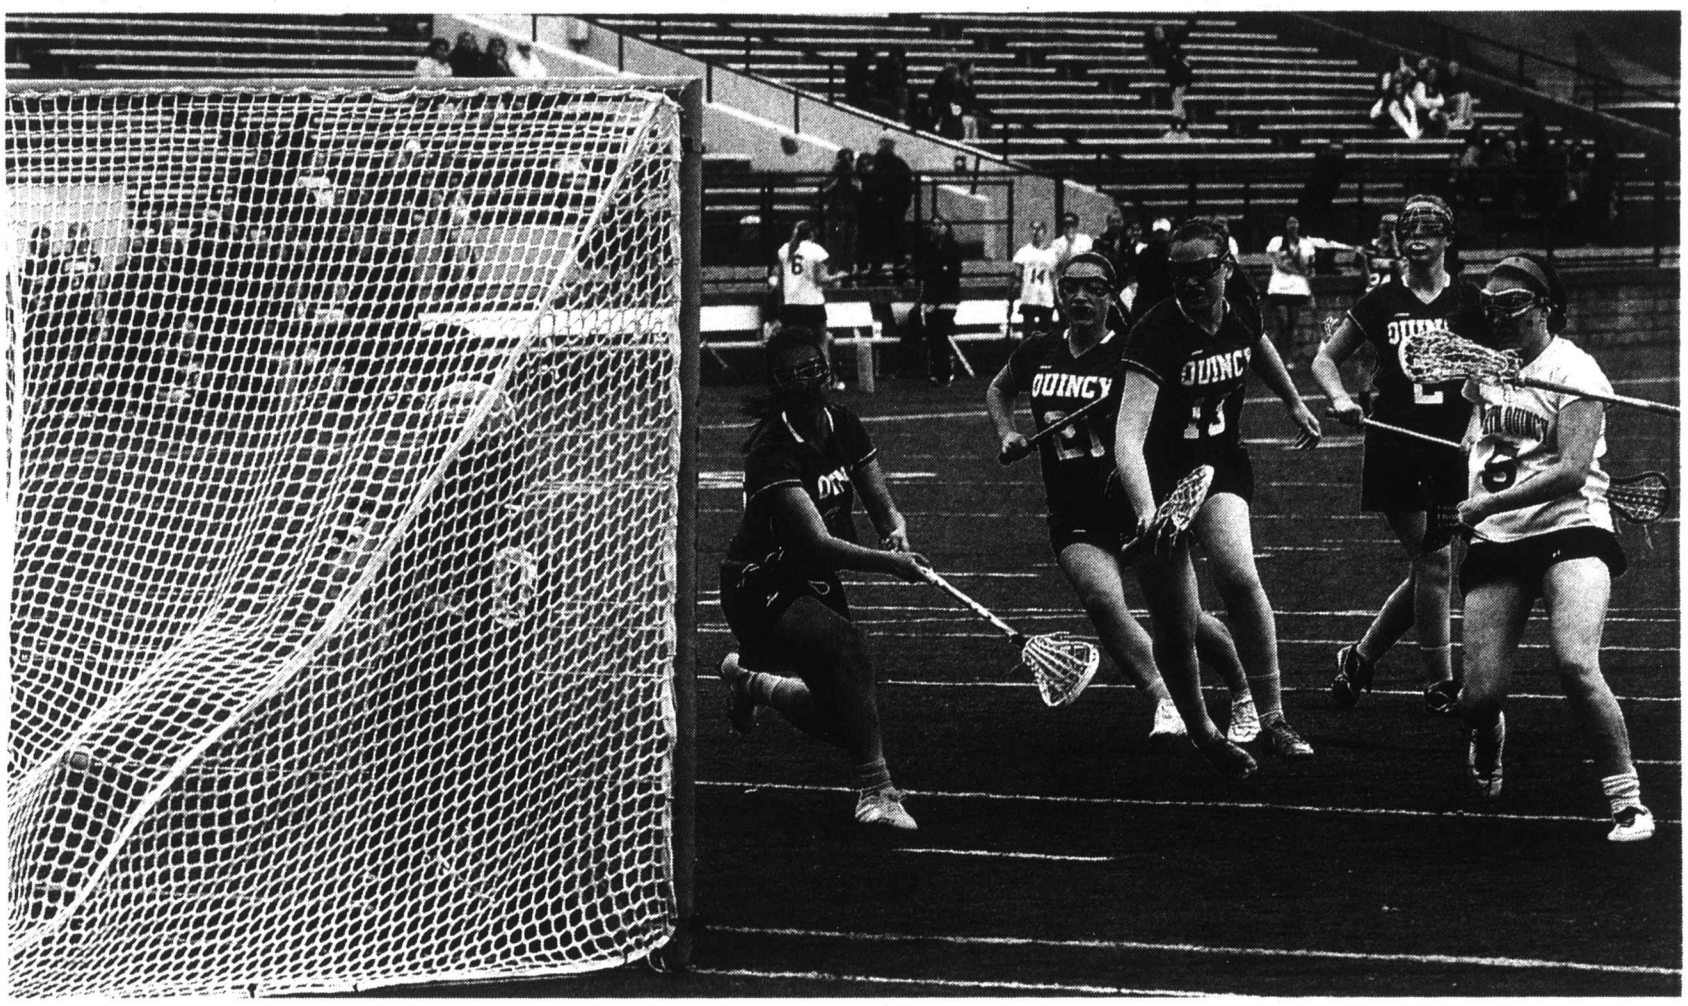
North Quincy defeated Quincy 18-6 on April 17.

"Our team started off slow," said Therrien. "Kind of got frustrated with each other but then slowly the communication came back. Definitely didn't play to our potential but Quincy's goalie played (a great) game. She definitely did very well with the shots saved. We're hopefully just moving past this game and just cleaning up the small things that we did fundamentally. We still scored but I know that everything can look much better."

The Presidents honored their seniors during halftime on Thursday. The five of them are Phelan, Palbutong, defender Emily Hatfield, attack Nicole Lee (seven goals on the season) and attack Haley Elwood.

"They were juniors when I met them last year and that was my first season so I've only had two seasons with them," said Arakelian. "It feels like I've had four with them. Some of the greatest players I've ever coached. I've been coaching for 15 years. They are an amazing group of five people, they're an amazing group of kids, they come from great families and they bleed blue."



NORTH QUINCY'S CIARA FORDE finds the back of the net for one of her two goals against Quincy. The Red Raiders bowed to the Presidents, 13-10, at Veterans' Memorial Stadium in the first game of a lacrosse doubleheader between the two high schools April 30.

NORTH QUINCY'S MARISSA McGue also scored two goals for the Red Raiders against the Quincy Presidents, including thi shot.

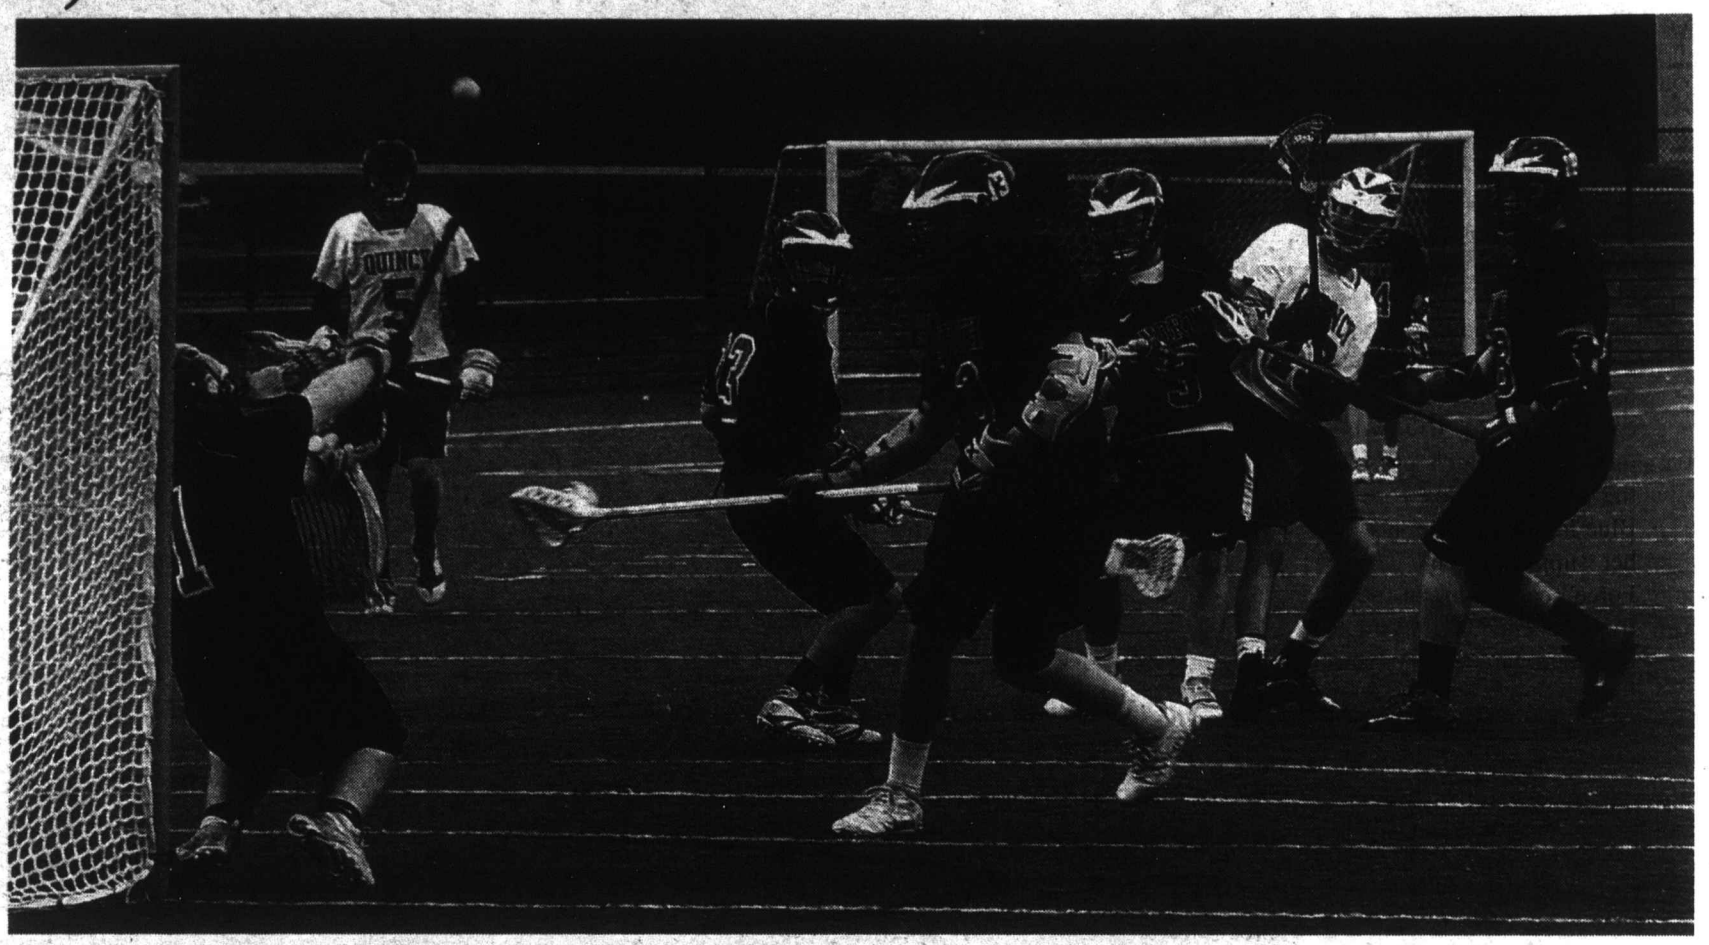
Brennick, Ross Pace Presidents Over Red Raiders



NORTH QUINCY GOALIE Kevin Finn makes a superb save on a shot by Quincy's Jake Hallisey. The Presidents swept the season series over the Red Raiders posting a 20-6 win over North Quincy in the second half of a lacrosse doubleheader April 30 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

By TREVOR WENNERS

Seniors Sean Brennick and Steve Ross combined for 11 goals for the Quincy High School boys lacrosse team in a 20-6 victory over North Quincy April 30 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"Obviously a competitive game as far as the intensity goes," said Presidents head coach Martin Bowes. "I think a little bit lopsided as far as time of possession and obviously the scoreboard but I'm proud of my guys."

The Presidents (4-7) took a 6-1 lead into halftime behind four different goal scorers. Ross began the scoring 3:21 into the game. Brennick scored 2:17 into the second quarter and senior Gavin O'Hare scored 1:13 later to make the score 3-1 in favor of Quincy. Senior Brian O'Callaghan tallied a goal with 6:59 left in the second to extend Quincy's lead to 4-1.

"He's our best player, all-around," said Bowes of O'Callaghan. "He's a long stick that plays on my man-up unit so that says it right there."

Brennick (six goals) tallied two more goals in the second quarter 14 seconds apart.

This win was important for Quincy in terms of the standings. Quincy has a goal of making the playoffs and this win will certainly help them but the Presidents still have some work to do down the stretch of their season. Quincy qualified for the Division 2 South Sectional tournament last season.

"It's important, it's a necessity," said Bowes of the win in the city rivalry. "We don't have any more room for error. We've dug ourselves in a little bit of a hole. We need to beat the teams that we can beat and we also need to upset a few teams. That is just kind of the position we've put ourselves."

Ross put together his typical effort for the Presidents which consisted of putting up five goals on the scoreboard. Quincy showed its depth by also getting strong contributions from O'Callaghan (2 goals), senior Aidan Pugsley (2 goals). O'Hare, junior Jake Hallisey, junior Mike Calnan and senior Chris Doyle all scored.

The seniors on the Presidents roster were able to go 2-0 against North Quincy in their senior season as they completed the sweep of their city rival. Quincy defeated North Quincy 15-2 on April 17. The seniors include Brennick, O'Hare, Pugsley, Ross, Ryan Higgins, goalie Andy Johnson, Andrew Cook, O'Callaghan, Ryan Harty and Doyle.

Jillian Flaherty Throws Out First Pitch At Fenway Park

Framingham State Senior Supports Lung Force Campaign

Quincy resident Jillian Flaherty threw out the first pitch at Fenway Park before the Boston Red Sox game April 29.

Flaherty, a senior at Framingham State University, lost her 52-year-old mother Brenda Villa to lung cancer in 2012. By throwing out the first pitch prior to the Boston Red Sox/Toronto Blue Jays game, she showed her support for the "Lung Force" campaign, an initiative that encourages people to stand together against lung cancer.

Lung cancer is the #1 cancer killer of women and men. As part of the campaign, CVS is teaming up with the American Lung Association and is encouraging customers to donate $1 or $3 at CVS/pharmacy locations nationwide now through May 23.

Flaherty, who has described her mother as "my best friend and my everything" – is an advocate against smoking and a "Lung Force Hero." Nearly a year after her mother passed away, Flaherty's aunt – her mother's sister and a guidance counselor at Chariho High School in R.I. – asked if she would speak at a town meeting focused on banning smoking at the town's public parks and beaches.

Initially terrified to speak in public, Flaherty soon discovered "the power of my voice – a voice of reason" and was heartened to learn that the story she shared about her mother impacted the audience. This experience inspired her to film her story with the aim of sharing it with schools, health centers and community members, and to conduct research, which led her to the Lung Force website. Flaherty soon joined the Lung Force campaign as part of her lifelong mission to advocate in the fight against lung cancer.

"We are so appreciative of Jillian for sharing such a personal story and are thrilled to support Lung Force for the second consecutive year with our in-store fundraising campaign," said Eileen Howard Boone, senior vice president of corporate social responsibility and philanthropy at CVS Health, joined Flaherty on the pitcher's mound.

QUINCY'S Jillian Flaherty throws out the ceremonial first pitch prior to the April 29 Boston Red Sox/Toronto Blue Jays game at Fenway Park. Jillian, a college senior at Framingham State University, lost her beloved mother to lung cancer and has committed to sharing her story as a "LUNG FORCE Hero" and advocating against smoking. Joining Jillian on the mound is Eileen Howard Boone, senior vice president of corporate social responsibility and philanthropy at CVS Health. Donations to the LUNG FORCE campaign can be made through May 23 at CVS/pharmacy stores nationwide and online at www.cvs.com/lung.

AFTER THROWING OUT the ceremonial first pitch at Fenway Park before the April 29 Boston Red Sox/Toronto Blue Jays game, Eileen Howard Boone, senior vice president of corporate social responsibility and philanthropy at CVS Health and Quincy resident and Framingham State University senior Jillian Flaherty get a hug from Boston Red Sox mascot Wally the Green Monster.

"Education and awareness will help raise much-needed dollars for research to improve treatment options for so many people living with lung cancer. Advocates like Jillian are crucial in the fight to beat lung cancer, and their support will help save the lives of thousands of people," Boone said.

The campaign aligns with CVS Health's purpose of helping people on their path to better health and its commitment to help people lead tobacco-free lives. Last year, the pharmacy innovation company stopped selling tobacco products in its more than 7,800 retail stores, making CVS/pharmacy the first national retail pharmacy chain to take this step. As the national presenting sponsor of Lung Force, CVS Health will help support Lung Force's mission to drive policy change and increase funding.

"Anyone can get lung cancer," said Audrey Sylvia, national assistant vice president of the American Lung Association. "The success of last year's campaign made great impact on our mission to empower more people to join the fight to defeat lung cancer and change the perception of this terrible disease. To be able to partner with CVS Health again this year is a wonderful opportunity, and we can't thank them enough for their continued support."

Some of Flaherty's family members – sister Erin Flaherty, stepsister Cassie Villa and stepfather Robert Villa – joined her at the game, also showing their support for Lung Force. Additionally, Sylvia was there to cheer for Flaherty, as well as Director of Corporate Partnerships for the American Lung Association of the Northeast Marianne Gibson.

According to the American Lung Association's inaugural Women's Lung Health Barometer, a survey of more than 1,000 American women that measures women's knowledge and perceptions about lung cancer, awareness of lung cancer's impact is extremely low. Lung cancer is the #1 cancer killer of women, yet only one percent of women cite it as a cancer that is top-of-mind. The Barometer also revealed 78 percent of women are not aware that lung cancer has killed more women than breast cancer since 1987.

on the defensive end as the Presidents did not allow the Red Raiders to get into a rhythm in the offensive zone.

"My seniors I am very proud of them," said Bowes. "It is starting to click to them that this is their senior year. Teams that they're playing for the second time (this season) or teams that we only see once, that's the last time they'll see them ever and that's kind of starting to click and they're coming out (playing hard) and I appreciate it."

Senior attack Mike Finn, junior midfielder Corey Hernandez and senior Cornelius Koch all found the back of the net for the Red Raiders.

Red Raiders head coach James Finn spoke about the game and his team.

"I think they kind of psych themselves out for this game (against Quincy) a little bit," he said. "We took Hanover to overtime the other (day) and Hanover was a much better team than us and we took them to overtime. If we could have just played within ourselves like we did that game it wouldn't be the same result (against Quincy)."

Bowes talked about what he thinks his team needs to work on moving forward.

"I think a lot," said Bowes about if there is things his team needs to work on going forward. "Our stick work can still improve but defensively I think we need to do a better job of recognizing situations. I think we attack the ball, we just see the ball sometimes whereas we need to see the play developing but that comes with experience."

The Presidents will be playing at Hull at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, May 11.

The Red Raiders are playing at Plymouth North today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and will travel to Whitman-Hanson tomorrow (Friday) for a 4 p.m. start. They host Scituate on Tuesday, May 12 at 4:30 p.m.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

COMPUTER BODY

As office workers and hobbyists spend countless hours sitting at their desks in front of computer screens, their risk of developing "computer body" increases. The typical poses adopted by these desk workers shows them with shoulders rounded forward, chins stuck out, and upper backs hunched over. By spending hours frozen in this position, desk dwellers with poor posture develop elongated back muscles that become locked in a lengthened position; meanwhile their pectoral muscles, abdominals, and the front of their hips actually shorten. In addition, the composition of their muscle tissue changes in ways that make their muscles stiffer. To avoid the consequent back and neck pain, desk workers should consult with a chiropractor, who can break the poor-posture cycle.

If you have a spine condition, try to be aware of your posture, and make good posture part of your normal routine. At Family Practice of Chiropractic, we are committed to teaching a way of life that focuses on preventing health problems. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans, and we are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Once the chiropractor has brought the body back into proper alignment, desk workers are advised to take frequent breaks from their work in order to stretch.

Saxon Bresnahan Hurls Perfect Game

Bresnahan's gem and timely hitting by Madison Synan and Alicia Walker carried Quincy to a 2-0 decision over the Dragons at Mitchell-McCoy Field Monday afternoon before a stunned, appreciative crowd who will always remember what they witnessed.

"I've been umpiring for over 30 years and I've never seen anyone strike out all 21 batters," said home plate umpire Bill Clifford.

"I've been umpiring for 16 years and I've never seen it," said base umpire Stephanie Petlock

"I've never seen it or anything like it," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "It has to rank with one of the most special pitching performances in high-school softball. How can you do better?"

It would be easy to write that this was something that Bresnahan dreamed about or played around with in her imagination. Not true. Pitchers don't dream about striking out every batter. That's beyond dreams. They may imagine what's over the rainbow or no-hitters or perfect games. Not this. Not ever.

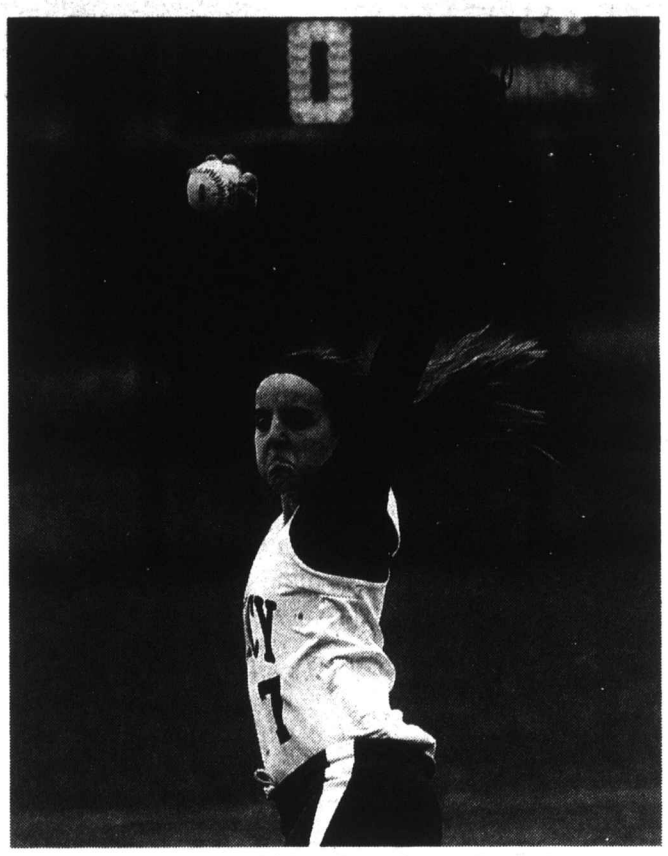
"I've thought about no-hitters, but not something like this. This is breathtaking," said Bresnahan who pitched a no-hitter last year against Pembroke.

She realized around the third or fourth inning that something was happening. What tipped her off was the lack of batted balls. Usually a ground ball or a popup will move on by to keep her company, but against Duxbury, there was nothing.

She was in a zone, in her own world. She was playing her own game with her own rules. She was playing catch with Angelina Avitabile. The batter was almost unimportant. She featured a high riser and that low, un-hittable fastball. She mixed in a few drops and screwballs. The effect was almost hypnotic. The batter came up. The batter swung and missed. The batter sat down.

"I knew something was happening because there wasn't any action around me," said Bresnahan. "I do get in my own world. I just focus on the catcher and batter and block everything else out. Nothing else is important. I was able to do that today."

As the innings went by, murmurs and whispers went through the crowd. People rose, moved forward and stood close to the fence. Something was happening here. Bresnahan kept firing, moving the ball around the strike zone, and changing the eye level from high to low for the batters. Batters kept swinging. Batters kept missing.



MASTERFUL PERFORMANCE – Saxon Bresnahan struck out all 21 batters she faced tossing a perfect game in Quincy's 2-0 win over Duxbury Monday.

"I thought the thing she did well today was move the ball around in the zone," said Avitabile.

The seventh inning brought high drama. The crowd cheered every pitch. Bresnahan struck out Lil Foote on three straight pitches. She got Michelle Meir on a 2-2 riser. She threw a 2-2 bullet past Samantha Chaisson and it was over. 21 strikeouts. No-hitter. Perfect game. History.

"I was so nervous in the final inning that I thought I was going to be sick," said Bresnahan. "Angelina helped keep me calm and I just said to myself: If it happens, it happens."

Many of these classics come against a poor opponent. That was not true of Bresnahan. The Dragons make the tournament nearly every year. They entered with a 6-4 record and had scored 56 runs in 10 games. They scored in double digits twice. They can play and they can hit. That made what she did more remarkable.

"That's one of the things that makes it more impressive. Duxbury is a tournament team most years. They are a good team. To do what Saxon did against a good team is amazing," said Sommers

The only danger was that Bresnahan's teammates would grow comatose watching her. There was nothing to do. Duxbury did not hit the ball. There were no grounders, fly balls, assists or putouts. The Presidents could have brought lawn chairs, grilled burgers, played video games, planted crops, or knitted a cap. They had the time.

"That was one thing that worried me," said Sommers. "Between innings, I kept telling them to stay alert, stay in the game. I think the fact that we hit the ball well (nine hits) and put runners on base helped us stay in the game."

Avitabile called and caught a great game. She has caught Bresnahan for three years. They are best friends. Avitabile saw in warm-ups that Bresnahan had the hard riser, so she stayed with it. She framed pitches well. She called every pitch. Bresnahan never shook her off. Avitabile called the pitch. Bresnahan threw it. Avitabile also knew what to do when the tension grew late in the game.

"I know when she's stressed, and I can calm her down," said Avitabile. "I'll say something funny in the huddle or do something silly like make a face at her from behind the plate and it cracks her up."

Avitabile is a terrific catcher, but she does not notice every little thing. Last year against Pembroke, she didn't know Bresnahan had pitched a no-hitter until after the game. When did she realize Bresnahan had a perfect game and 21 strikeouts Monday afternoon?

"After the game," she said with a large laugh. "I did know she had a no-hitter, so I'm improving. I had a lot of things on my mind."

Bresnahan had three hits to also lead the offense. Synan cracked two doubles, drove in a run and was a smoking line-out to third away from a 3-3 day. Walker had a triple and scored a run. Kate McGahey and Dana Varmamhoodi also had hits for Quincy. Pinch runner Ally McPherson scored a run.

The Presidents took a 1-0 in the fourth on a single by Bresnahan and a double by Synan. In the fifth, Walker tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly by Nicole Jorgensen.

Quincy (7-1) is at Whitman-Hanson Friday.

also a tab on her website with a link to a GoFundMe page. That money too goes directly to NAHA.

There's additional costs besides the tuition including camps, skills, gear, travel, tournaments and showcases.

There is also an option to purchase fundraising tickets on the website. Tickets are $25 and the winner will receive a 65-inch 4K curved Ultra 3D TV.

Folks can also mail donations (check payable to North American Hockey Academy) to Hayley Parrish, 25 Sixth Ave., Quincy MA 02169.

Donations of any amount are greatly appreciated.

Those who would like to contribute can also meet Hayley and give her the donation. They can call 617-594-3053 and leave a message so that the donation drop-off can be arranged.

Scott says the family is doing everything it can to help realize Hayley's dream but they have to resort to fundraising.

"It's the only way she'll be able to stay and play where she belongs," he says.

There's also an opportunity for businesses to sponsor Hayley. There's a tab on the website and businesses that contribute $100 will be able to include their company logo which will be displayed on the website. Those funds would be used for tournament fees, travel and gear.

Hayley will be one of five new girls attending NAHA. They'll join 35 returning players to round out the 40-player academy. There are two teams separated by age. Hayley will see a majority of her time on the Under 16 squad but she could also skate with the U19 team.

The team utilizes four small buses for travel within six hours of the school and large buses are chartered out for further travel playing in the U.S. and Canada. The girls start their day with breakfast followed by one and off-ice workouts followed by lunch then up to seven courses can be taken per day.

Scott says he'll make as many games as he can. There's also the likelihood that Hayley and her team will play some games in the Boston area. One of the teams in the league is the Boston Shamrocks that play their home games at Risticia Arena, the practice rink for the Boston Bruins in Wilmington.

After the hockey academy and high school, Hayley says she would like go to college and play Division 1 hockey, perhaps at Boston University. As for a career, she says she might want to become a nurse or a vet some day.

But those studies are a few years off.

For now, her life is centered around hockey and transitioning to a high school student.

And she's looking forward to getting to Vermont and experiencing the academy.

"I can't wait. I get to live up in Vermont and I get a roommate. You wake up, go to hockey, work out, have lunch, school and chores and then you go to a lot of different places like you take a plane a few times, you go to Canada. There's travel."

Her father adds: "I don't think she'll be lonely at NAHA. She gets along with all the girls and its a close-knit organization. I think the academy will help her with her confidence and help prepare her for college."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, April 26, 2015, at approximately 1:30 a.m., Officers William Griffin and Mark Connolly were dispatched to the Wendy's restaurant on Newport Avenue on a report that a Uber driver had been assaulted.

As the Officers approached the area, the Dispatcher informed them that the suspect and his two friends were walking north on Newport Avenue by the Ocean State store. Officer Griffin met with the male victim in the Wendy's parking lot, who immediately pointed off in a distance at the three males as being involved in the assault. Officer Griffin radioed Officer Connolly to detain the males while he interviewed the victim to determine what happened.

The victim, after declining medical attention, stated that he is an Uber driver and picked up the three men in front of the Clash of the Ash bar in Quincy Center. The three men told him that they wanted to go to a bar in Boston. The victim said that he found it odd that the address that originally popped up on his phone was for the fare to be driven to Hanover, not to Boston. As the victim was driving the three men on Newport Avenue, he received a phone call from an individual in Quincy Center asking him about his ride to Hanover. The victim asked the three men if they had requested him through the Uber cell phone App to which they replied they did not.

The victim then pulled into the Wendy's parking lot and told the three men to get out of his car. One of the three men became belligerent towards him, challenging him to a fight. This male/suspect was "offering me out." The victim, still sitting in the driver's seat, was suddenly punched by the suspect as he exited the back seat of the Ford Explorer. The victim said he was punched with a closed fist just above his ear. The suspect then emerged from the vehicle and started kicking the back passenger door several times before walking away. After Officer Griffin examined the victim but could not see any marks or redness on his head, he told this to the victim. The victim said that the suspect "punches like a @#$$%" as the reason there was no mark. The Officer then examined the passenger door but could not see any dents, only scratches and smudges in the unwashed area.

The Officer noted that there are surveillance cameras at Wendy's which would help support the victim's account. Officer Griffin drove the victim to Officer Connolly's location to identify the suspect.

Upon arrival, the victim immediately pointed out the suspect and cleared the other two of being involved. Officer Griffin then questioned the suspect about what occurred. The suspect said that he and his friends had been drinking earlier at the Clash of the Ash bar and decided to go to a bar in Boston for "last call." He said that as they started to wave down a cab, the Uber driver pulled up to them and invited them in his vehicle. The suspect said he quickly figured out it was a mix up with the UBER driver picking up the wrong party but he and his friends kept quiet hoping for a free ride to Boston. He stated that the driver soon realized that he had the wrong party in his vehicle (the phone call from the actual client) and pulled into the Wendy's lot where he ordered the men out. The suspect said that derogatory words were exchanged and the men exited his vehicle without incident. He denied that there was any assault or kicking of the car and requested that the Officers look at the Wendy's restaurant cameras to back up his story. The two other men confirmed what the suspect said.

Officer Connolly told Officer Griffin that the suspect said that he was going to "punch" the victim if he showed up in the Marshall's parking lot. (before QPD arrival) This statement helped Officer Griffin's investigation circumstantially because the suspect was referring to planning on punching the suspect and there were marks on the door.

At this time, Officer Griffin placed the suspect, a 23-year-old Dorchester resident, under arrest for "Assault and Battery on an Elder (victim 63 years old) and Defacing or Vandalizing real or Personal Property (rear passenger door). The victim told the Officer that he is disabled with the "Polio" disease that attacks him from time to time confining him to a wheelchair when it flare's up. He added that he also has four ruptured disks in his lower back and uses a walking cane daily. Surveillance video was not available at the time but will be used for court purposes. Nice Work!

TAX SEASON SCAMS: Even though the tax filing date has passed, many citizens are still receiving calls from people claiming to be from the Internal Revenue Service, telling you either from a recorded message or live, stating that you owe money to the federal government. The telephone number may show a Washington D.C. area code but don't be fooled by this. These scammers are trying to get you to make a "late payment" to them by wire transferring money from a local store. They may also be trying to gather your personal information as part of identity theft. IRS imposters work year-round — posing as the IRS when they call and say you owe taxes. They have made threats to have you arrested, often by the local Police, if you don't put money on a prepaid debit card and tell them the card number. They might know all or part of your Social Security number, and can fake caller ID information to make it look like it really is the IRS calling. Remember, the IRS does not make an initial telephone call to you – the first step is by mail with a telephone number to call.

immediately before the first budget meeting. The council has the ability to make cuts to the proposed budget, but cannot add funds.

The 3.15 percent increase in the budget for FY16 is smaller than the increases in recent years. The budget increased 4.4 percent from FY13 to FY14 and 4.1 percent from FY14 to FY15.

"[It's] a smaller increase over previous years and really it's conservative budgeting," Koch told the council.

"We're trying to deal with some of the challenges we face...healthcare costs have gone up and as you know we've had a record winter that we're still recuperating from in many ways and we'll have to deal with the deficit of that over the next couple fiscal years.

"We felt it was prudent to be conservative this year and keep spending within a responsible growth, if you will."

The city's health insurance line item will increase in the new fiscal year to $46.08 million, up $2.68 million (6.18 percent) from $43.4 million in FY15.

The pension line item will increase by $1.17 million (5.16 percent) from $22.67 million in the current fiscal year to $23.84 million in fiscal 2016.

Medicare costs will rise in the new fiscal year as well, going from $1.85 million to $2.14 million, an increase of $290,000 or 15.68 percent.

The budget does include two new positions.

The first is a compliance officer in the Inspectional Services Department. That position would be budgeted for $68,019 in the new fiscal year.

"The primary job will be for that person to make sure that all of the contractors working on public projects are in compliance with all of the requirements, including prevailing wage," Koch said.

The second position is a roofer within the Public Buildings Department. The department's proposed budget would increase $69,699 from $5.12 million to $5.19 million; the increase would pay for the new roofer as well as existing salary obligations.

"We felt it was time to add a roofer with that specific expertise to assist with some of the roof challenges so we don't have to have everything go out on contract," Koch explained. "I think in the end this will be a savings for the city."

School spending in the new budget would increase by $1.48 million (1.6 percent), from $94.1 million to $95.59 million. The School Committee is responsible for determining the Quincy Public School budget; the council only sets the bottom line for the school budget.

The budget for the Police Department would increase to $25.99 million from $25.26 million. The $732,000 (2.9 percent) increase is to cover existing salary obligations and as well as necessary upgrades to communication systems.

The Fire Department budget would increase $223,095 (1 percent) from $21.41 million to $21.64 million. The added money is for existing salary obligations.

The budget also includes a full year of raises for the mayor and city councillors.

Last spring, councillors approved raising the mayor's salary to $151,000 and their own pay to $22,500 each. Under state law, those raises couldn't come into effect until Jan. 1 of this year, so Koch is being paid $136,000 in the current fiscal year and each councillor $20,000. Koch's proposed budget raises both those figures to the full amount the council approved.

At Monday's meeting, Councillor Doug Gutro asked Koch if he had an estimate on how much the proposed budget would impact homeowners on their property tax bill. Koch had done so during previous budget cycles, but not last year, as all properties in the city we're being re-assessed.

Koch replied that it would too early to estimate how much the property taxes would increase. He noted the city does not know how much it will need to pay for snow and ice removal for the past winter. The mayor previously told The Sun the city spent $13.2 million on those costs this winter, well over the $1.76 million budgeted. The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is expected to reimburse the city $1 million for costs incurred during a January blizzard, but that figure hasn't been finalized and may increase.

"We're looking for a low increase," Koch said, referring to the tax bills. "We're not looking to have a modest or high increase at all. We're working extremely hard to get to that point. But it would be premature, really, at this point to throw a number out there because of those moving parts.

"The snow and ice deficit is significant; if we don't get the reimbursement we would like to have from FEMA we're probably going to be amortizing more than $3 million per year the next three years."

Gutro, who is running against Koch in this year's municipal election, then challenged the mayor on the $13.2 million price tag for snow and ice removal. Gutro cited media reports, which put Worcester's costs at $6 million, Cambridge at $5.5 million, Brockton at $4.2 million, Lowell at $3.7 and Fall River at $3 million.

"What I don't understand, and maybe you can explain it, is how we came to spend more than Worcester and Cambridge, combined, and more than Brockton, Lowell, and Lawrence and Medford combined," Gutro said.

Koch responded that Quincy's cost per road mile was on par with Boston's and less than Somerville. Quincy, Koch added, is a dense city with narrow streets.

"I can't worry about what Worcester spends or Cambridge spends. I've got to make sure that each and every one of our residents is safe in their home," Koch said. "We have very narrow streets. We are a very dense city. There was nowhere to put the snow. We made the decision to get it out – to move the snow out of the neighborhoods.

"I'd further suggest we had some incredible corporate citizens once again. Where other communities were paying a tipping fee to dump their snow, Dan Quirk provided the shipyard for a snow dump, the Flatley family provided a section of Crown Colony for a snow dump, we worked with DCR to provide the Squantum Point Park as another snow dump. That saved us significant dollars.

"When you go through the streets – many of the streets in our neighborhoods – they're narrow streets in good weather, never mind in the snow conditions we had, which were incredible. I was bragging around city hall mid to late January 'we're going to escape this winter, we haven't had a flurry yet,' and boom it hit and never gave up.

"I lived through the Blizzard of '78. I was a teenager. I shoveled and shoveled and shoveled for days. But after the Blizzard of '78 the sun came out and that was it for a long time. We had storm after storm after storm and we had challenges to make sure our public safety could get up and down each street.

"There is only so much you can push the snow so there was an incredible effort to remove the snow and place it in the snow dumps to keep the city safe. That's my job. I really don't care what Cambridge spends or Worcester spends. I'm going to make the right decision, what I think is in the best interest of the safety of the people of the city."

Previously in the meeting, Koch noted the city has 330 miles of sidewalk, 247 miles of roads and hundreds of miles of underground pipes. The mayor said he plans to introduce a capital improvement for that infrastructure before the council breaks for its summer recess in late June.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be a bit shaken by a friend's request. But before the Lamb leaps to conclusions, insist on a full explanation. You still might say no, but at least you'll know what you're saying no to.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Seeing red over those nasty remarks by someone with an ax to grind? Of course you are. So get out there and give your supporters the facts they need to get the truth out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A changing situation should get you to reassess your vacation plans and make any adjustments as soon as possible. And don't fret -- the change most likely will turn out for the better.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't put off dealing with any negative feelings that might be left over from a recent confrontation. The sooner all is resolved, the sooner you can move forward with fewer complications.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leos and Leonas might feel the urge to redecorate their dens, and that can turn into a good opportunity to strengthen family ties by putting the whole pride to work to make it happen.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Look for the most efficient way to get a job done quickly and well. Taking more time than you need to make it look more challenging is a short-sighted move you might regret later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel remains strong in your aspect. And this time, it could involve someone traveling a great distance to come to see you. Meanwhile, an important matter suddenly could need your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A workplace situation becomes a lot more bothersome than you'd expected. Be careful not to be pulled into all that anger. Look for support among others who also want to avoid trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Cheer up, lonely lovers, wherever you are. Just when you thought you'd been deleted from Cupid's database, the chubby cherub proves that's just not so. Congratulations.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A casual relationship could take a more serious turn. Are you ready for it? Your stars say you are. Paired Sea Goats also will find a renewed richness in their relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Meeting a collaborator with new ideas seems to be a dream come true. But for both your sakes, be sure all your legal i's are dotted and t's are crossed before you start working together.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) A romantic overture flatters the usually unflappable Fish. But since it's a sincere from-the-heart gesture, go ahead and enjoy it. A minor health problem responds well to treatment.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the warm heart of a Taurean and the sensitivity of a Gemini. You would make a wonderful leader. So go ahead: Run for office.

Song concerning a seventeen-year-old dressed warmly in wintertime:
"A Teenager in Gloves"

THE CALENDAR reads spring and the recent weather feels more like summer but if you want a reminder of the recent historic winter, just take a look at these photos from Marina Bay in Squantum. These dirty mounds are actually snow - the remnants of one of the city's snow farms where tens of thousands of tons of snow were transported as part of the city's cleanup efforts. The photo above shows the snow about 15 feet high at the Squantum Point Park parking area. Visible in the background is the landmark Boston Gas tank in Dorchester. The photo below shows it wasn't just snow that was plowed away. Some debris and trash were also collected during the cleanup operations. This winter set a new mark for total snowfall with 110 inches - nearly 10 feet.

THIS BEAUTIFUL little bird, a Belted Kingfisher, with the shaggy crest, can be difficult to spot because it seldom sits still. But it is often at the edge of waterways seeking small prey, such as fish and crayfish, which it will dive under to catch. Local wildlife photographer Karen Walker spotted this one in Houghs Neck last week.

KOCH
FOR QUINCY

Dear Friend:

It is with tremendous humility and excitement that I write today to let you know I am a candidate for re-election as Mayor in this year's City election.

We will formally kick off the campaign at a special event at 6 p.m. on May 14 in the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry Street. It will be a great night of fun, friends, and community, so please accept this letter as my personal invitation. As always, if the cost is a burden, please come as my guest.

I am deeply mindful of the trust you have placed in me, and please know that it has been the honor of my life to serve this great City that we all love so much. I intend this year to work tirelessly to once again earn that trust as we continue to work together to build a future for Quincy that will make our children and grandchildren proud.

Together, we emerged from one of the worst economic crises in a generation to a period of remarkable growth. We're investing in education – lowering class sizes, building new schools and restoring existing ones. We're protecting our seniors with expanded programs and the City's first senior center. And we're earning national recognition for creating financial stability; rebuilding our infrastructure, fostering economic development and fighting the epidemic of substance abuse that affects communities across the Commonwealth.

None of this is to say we don't have our challenges as a community. I don't like to make blanket promises, but I can promise that you can count on me to continue to work hard to meet those challenges.

Thank you again for the privilege of serving as Mayor, and I respectfully ask you to stand together with me this year. I hope to see you on the 14th.

Sincerely,

Tom

Quincy District Court Law Day

In Wards 1, 2, 3, 5 And School Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

Former Mayor William Phelan on Monday announced he would join an already crowded field of candidates vying for the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history; five more contested races are shaping up just one week after residents began taking out nomination papers.

Five other candidates had already pulled papers to run for mayor before Phelan announced his candidacy late Monday afternoon; Phelan had not taken out nomination papers as of the end of the business day Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. (Phelan's announcement appears on Page 9.)

Three officials who announced their intention to run earlier this spring pulled nomination papers on May 5, the first day they became available: Incumbent Thom-

Council OKs 19 Dept. Budgets

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved 19 departmental budgets totaling more than $79 million Monday night.

Monday night's committee meeting was the first of three scheduled to discuss Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed $277 million for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1. Residents had a chance to weigh in on the budget proposal at a public hearing prior to the committee session, but no one did so.

The council can cut money from the budget, but not add money to any items. No cuts were made at Monday's committee meeting.

The largest item approved Monday night was health insurance. The city's health insurance costs for FY16 is $46.08 million, up $2.68 million (6.18 percent) from $43.4 million in FY15. Quincy participates in the state's Group Insurance Commission (GIC), which approved the increase in charges to municipalities for health insurance. Helen Murphy, Quincy's human resources director, said the city will look at leaving the GIC if better options are available.

"Right now we are in this GIC package until 2018. As we're going into the next fiscal year we will start to look at those types of things – see what, if anything, out there

Memorial Squares Dedicated To Three Vietnam Veterans

CPO George R. Levesque, 1st Lt. Alfred V. Schofield And PFC John P. Coughlin Honored

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city of Quincy has now dedicated memorial squares to each of the 48 residents lost during the Vietnam War.

The final three squares were dedicated on April 30 – the 40th anniversary of the Fall of Saigon – to Chief Petty Officer George R. Levesque, U.S Navy; First Lieutenant Alfred V. Schofield, U.S. Army; and Private First Class John P. Coughlin, U.S. Marine Corps.

Levesque joined the Navy in 1955, shortly after he graduated from Quincy High School. He was killed on March 13, 1969, when the jeep he was riding in collided with a truck six miles south of Long Binh, South Vietnam. Levesque was 30 years old.

The square at the corner of Willard Street and Bunker Hill Lane was dedicated in memory of Levesque. John Joyce, who served 22 years in the Navy as a corpsman and is a past commander of both the Quincy Veterans Council and the Morrisette American Legion Post, told the gathered crowd about Levesque's life – he joined the Navy because he wanted to travel the world and he requested to serve in Vietnam following the capture of the USS Pueblo.

"Inscribed on his headstone are the words 'My Country, Right or Wrong,'" Joyce concluded. "From one chief to another, I salute you. Chief Levesque, rest in peace."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci reflected on Levesque's two decisions to serve his country – when he joined the Navy and later when he requested a tour of duty in Vietnam. Palmucci noted the memorial plaque sits close to a school bus stop and generations of children will be reminded of Levesque's sacrifice.

"It's fitting that we honor him here in this location. It's fitting because there is a

Two memorial granite benches will be dedicated at the Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Memorial Day Observance Sunday, May 17 at 1 p.m. at Flags for Veterans Island, Fort Square located at the intersection of School and Pleasant Streets, Quincy.

One bench is in memory of the late Joseph W. Koch who died unexpectedly last August. Koch, a longtime City of Quincy worker in the Department of Public Works and Park and Forestry Departments, also served in the U.S. Army.

The other bench is being dedicated in memory of five deceased brothers who all served in the military during World War II. James, Matthew and John Dunn served in the Army and Paul and Robert Dunn served in the Navy.

The benches are being donated by Manet Contracting, LLC. of Quincy.

Guest speaker at the SAL Memorial Day observance will be Quincy's Bob Noble. A World War II Army veteran, Noble was a member of the 87th Infantry Division. He trained in England and arrived in France in early December 1944. After some early success, they were swept up in the German surge that later became known as the "Battle of the Bulge."

Noble and others were taken captive and were held for 122 days. They were freed on April 16, 1945 and when he returned home, he and his longtime companion, Gloria, were married and raised their family in Quincy.

Bob Noble served two terms as Commander of the American Ex-POWS, Massachusetts Department. Last

Superintendent Presents $95.5M School Budget

FY 2016 Spending Plan Up $1.3M

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro presented a preliminary Budget Report to the city's School Committee this week for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2016. The $95.5 million budget includes a $1.3 million increase over last year.

As noted in his proposal, the development and well-being of Quincy's student population lies at the absolute core of DeCristofaro's budget considerations, and remains the very last area of the budget where cuts would be considered.

Quincy schools continue their attentiveness to academics, increasing the number of classroom teachers in order to maintain optimum class sizes. For example, the goal is to limit 22-26 students per class in Kindergarten through grade 3, and 24 to 28 students per class in grades 4 through 8.

These numbers are anticipated to be even lower in the next academic year, although senior-grade classes (9-12) can be slightly larger, with up to 30 students, subject to review and with consideration given to technology and science labs.

DeCristofaro projected an increase in academic program expenses such Special Ed., Art, Foreign Language study, Advanced Placement opportunities, and pointed to the significant increase of interest in the city's musical programs, such as instrument study, band, and choral groups.

The proposed budget includes also an increase in standard expenses for academic support, such as principals, department heads and special education tutors, while the category of non-academic support, including custodians, coaches, clerical staff and attendants will not increase.

The proposed budget was accepted without discussion by committee members Mayor Koch, Kathryn Hubley, Paul Bregoli, Noel DiBona, Anne M. Mahoney and David McCarthy.

On Monday, June 1 a Budget Public Hearing will be held in the Coddington

TIGHTLY STRUNG

Because pearls never go out of fashion, they are an excellent investment that should be protected by being restrung about once a year if worn often. The danger in extending the intervals between restringing is not so much that the string might break. This would endanger only one pearl because all pearls should be strung with knots in between. The real danger is that dirt and perspiration on the string will work its way into the pearl. Whether a pearl is natural or cultured, its weakest part is the inside, access to which can be gained through the hole, corroding and darkening the color of the pearl. Thus, it is in their best interests to be kept tightly strung.

Quincy's Dunford Tapped As Joint Chiefs Chairman

Marines Corps General Nominated By President Obama

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Marine Corps general who spent his formative years in Quincy before commanding forces in Iraq and Afghanistan has been chosen as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

President Barack Obama nominated Marine Corps Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr. to serve as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff during a ceremony at the White House's Rose Garden on May 5. Dunford has served as the commandant of the Marine Corps since October 2014. If confirmed by the Senate, he would become only the second Marine to serve as the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the highest-ranking military officer in the U.S. Armed Forces and the top military advisor to the president.

Air Force Gen. Paul J. Selva was nominated as the vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the same ceremony. Selva is currently the commander of the U.S. Transportation Command.

Dunford, 59, moved to Quincy from Boston at the age of 12. Dunford's parents, Joseph Sr. and Katherine, still reside in Merrymount.

"I was certainly surprised," Joseph Sr. said Monday of his son's nomination. "After we kind of digested the fact, we were extremely proud of the accomplishment."

Joseph Jr. graduated from the former St. Ann's School in Quincy, Boston College High School and St. Michael's University in Vermont before enlisting in the Marine Corps in 1977. His father said he never would have imagined his son being the highest-ranking military officer in the U.S. some 38 years later.

He was nominated to serve as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the highest-ranking U.S. Armed Forces officer and top military advisor to the president. Dunford will need to be confirmed by the Senate before assuming his new post. Department of Defense Photo

"Not in my wildest imagination," Joseph Sr. said.

Joseph Sr. served in the Marine Corps during the Korean War, rising to the rank of sergeant. Two of his children, Joseph Jr. and Michael, both served in the Marines as well; the latter retired as a lieutenant colonel.

"I'm the low ranking member of the family," Joseph Sr. quipped.

Both sons, he added, chose to serve in the Marine Corps on their own. Joseph Sr. and Katherine have two other sons, Paul and James. Joseph Sr. later served in the Boston Police Department for 40 years, retiring as deputy superintendent.

Joseph Jr. played in Quincy Youth Hockey growing up and baseball for the Koch Club. He also had a paper route, which was passed down between all three brothers.

City Clerk Joseph Shea has known the younger Dunford for several decades and was present when the general was awarded his fourth star. Shea said the military will be in great hands under Dunford's leadership and called it a great honor for Quincy.

"He's just a first-class guy in every respect. He has served in every rank, been around the world, and done everything that was asked of him. He is such an able individual. This great honor for the city of Quincy," Shea said. "The military will be in great hands with Joe Dunford."

Prior to being appointed commandant of the Marine Corps, General Dunford – known as "Fighting Joe" – served as the commander of the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan. In that capacity, he oversaw all U.S. and allied troops in the country.

Before that Dunford served two years as the Marine Corps' assistant commandant. He has served as an infantry officer at all levels. He commanded the 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines, and he commanded the 5th Marine Regiment during the 2003 invasion of Iraq.

In addition to his undergraduate degree from St. Michael's, Dunford holds a master's degree in government from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and a master's in international relations from the Fletcher School of Law

DURING WORLD WAR II the Squantum Naval Air Station had its own band as seen in this 1944 real photo postcard. The flying Squantum Sea Witch on the drum was the symbol of the air station and it appeared on everything from arm patches to matchbook covers. Most of the sailors in the band were African-Americans as they were not allowed to be pilots at the time. The sailor with the clarinet standing next to the chief on the right sent this postcard card home to his aunt in Jefferson City, Missouri. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

A Message From Bay State Community Services

The Harmful Effects Of E-cigarettes On Youth

The tobacco industry uses sweet flavors and cheap prices to target young people with its products. In particular, e-cigarettes are becoming one of the most prominently used tobacco products among teenagers with dozens of flavors available, such as berry crush, strawberry, or peach, and cheap pricing. Flavored products are targeted toward youth, so we must do everything that we can to prevent our young people from becoming addicted to nicotine.

The Center for Disease Control reports that e-cigarette use among middle and high school students tripled from 2013 to 2014. Young people report that "smoking cigarettes is gross but e-cigarettes are cool". This creates a huge concern for a growing population of teens because nicotine is especially harmful to the developing adolescent brain.

The way some manufacturers market e-cigarettes gives the message they can help people stop smoking. However, there is a lack of scientific evidence to support this and FDA has not approved e-cigarettes be used to help smokers quit. Currently, e-cigarettes are not regulated at the state or federal level. This means we have no way of knowing just what is in these products.

If you are interested in learning more about e-cigarettes and their harmful effects on children and teenagers, feel free to get in touch with Kelsey Matheson, Program Coordinator for the Greater Boston Tobacco-Free Community Partnership, at kmatheson@baystatecs.org.

Appreciates Quincy Remembering Vietnam Veterans

The recent annual Quincy Vietnam Veterans Memorial gathering at the Marina Bay Clock Tower took on added importance as this year marked the 40th anniversary of the fall of Saigon and toppling of the Republic of Vietnam.

Once again people gathered to remember a war that divided this nation. The politics of the time seemed so destructive here at home, dividing people and neglecting our brave men and women who served in that long war.

Over 58,000 heroes died from that war and many more came home with shattered and broken minds and bodies and too often most were neglected by many including too many in our government.

As a Vietnam-era veteran I will not forget 40 years ago or those who sacrificed their all for a country 6,000 miles away.

Those ugly scenes at the US compound in Saigon are an image that will live forever. Scenes showing helicopters on rooftops and many of our Vietnamese allies trying to escape the advancing forces of Ho Chi Minh. Watching American soldiers deciding who could get on board a copter or deciding horribly who couldn't get on the copter was just one more insult.

In the end we flew off leaving many of our allies on the ground crying at our departure. At the same time Quincy remembered that war and our warriors who fought in it.

For U.S. Veterans who served during the Vietnam War, Quincy's annual observation on their behalf in April is appreciated and for the South Vietnamese community here in America, it brings back bittersweet memories too.

Council Reluctantly Approves $400,000 For NQHS Annex

The city council has reluctantly approved, by a unanimous vote, the appropriation of $400,000 to build a temporary annex to North Quincy High School on Teals' Pond.

Council President Arthur H. Tobin said after the roll call that the council is "serving notice to the school administration and the mayor that we do not appreciate voting for something we do not want."

Councillors accompanied their affirmative votes on the matter with accusations of "poor planning" and "lack of foresight."

Mayor Walter Hannon praised the council for a "tough decision."

HOSPITAL EMPLOYEES PICKET CITY HALL ON CONTRACT DISPUTE

Some 75 Quincy City Hospital employees picketed City Hall during Monday night's Council meeting to bring attention to their contract fight.

The workers, some of whom carried signs charging that the city is "unfair," paraded in front of the building from 7-9 p.m.

George E. Harvey, president of Local 1139, representing DPW and non-professional hospital workers, said the union has been trying to get the city to negotiate a new contract for three or four months.

Union officials charge "unfair discrimination in the granting of raises to 'a select few, including members of the Mayor's staff' while denying the union increases."

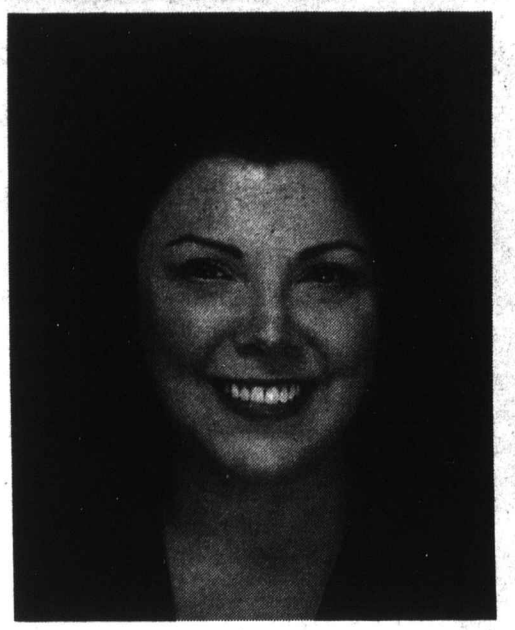
Songs Of John, Abigail Adams At Adams Historical Park June 21

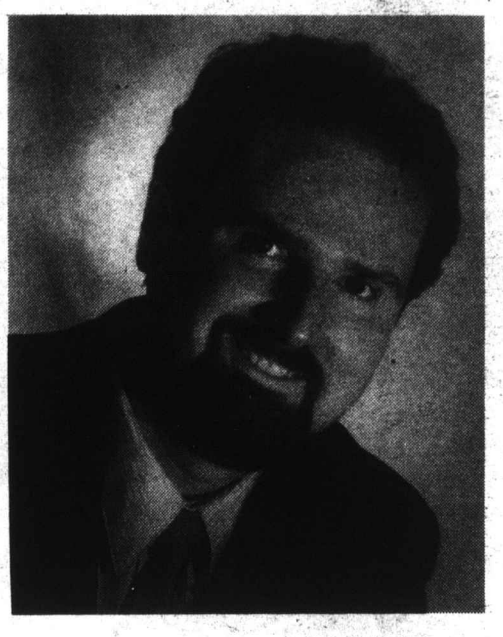
New York City based Chelsea Opera, in cooperation with the Adams National Historical Park, will present a free performance of the Gary S. Fagin/ Terry Quinn opera, "A Distant Love: Songs of John and Abigail Adams" at the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy on Father's Day, Sunday, June 21 at 2 p.m.

The performance will take place in The Carriage House behind Old House at 135 Adams St. For more information, call 212-260-1796 or visit ChelseaOpera.org.

The performance features soprano Victoria Tralongo and baritone Robert Taylor portraying the iconic roles of Abigail Adams and John Adams. The opera is scored for string quartet. The production has been funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts – Art Works program, and by friends of Chelsea Opera who have matched the $12,500 grant, dollar-for-dollar.

Drawn from letters exchanged between John and Abigail Adams, the first part of the work, "A Song for Abigail," concerns John Adams' work in Amsterdam to acquire loans from the Dutch to support the Revolution, already well underway. The second half, "A Song for John," chronicles Abigail Adams' struggle to maintain her family and their farm while a revolutionary war was fought right on their doorstep.





"A DISTANT LOVE: Songs of John and Abigail Adams" featuring soprano Victoria Tralongo (left) and baritone Robert Taylor will take place at The Carriage House behind the Old House, Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy, on Father's Day, June 21 at 2 p.m.

Married for only 10 years, John Adams left Abigail and their three young children behind in Old Braintree (now Quincy) for Philadelphia in 1774 to participate in the greatest political experiment known until that time, the severing of the American colonies from Great Britain to become an independent nation. Little did they realize that John would spend nearly three decades away from his beloved family and farm, during which time he served as Massachusetts's representative to the Continental Congress, a representative to draft the Massachusetts state constitution, a commissioner to Great Britain, France and the Netherlands, the nation's first Vice-President and its second President.

During those same years, Abigail was left alone to raise her children and keep the farm going, and in doing so survived a war, inflation, and a small pox epidemic. With only occasional reunions lasting a few weeks or months, it was their incredible correspondence that sustained them both, and which has been preserved and handed down as a testament to their love for each other and their mutual determination to see the birth of an independent nation. These letters were the inspiration for "A Distant Love: Songs of John and Abigail Adams."

A Distant Love received its Manhattan premiere from Chelsea Opera in 2013. In the audience, Caroline Keinath, Acting Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, who had driven all the way from Quincy to see the performance enjoyed it so much that on the spot, she invited Chelsea Opera to perform at the ANHP site. Keinath later wrote, "The words of John and Abigail Adams are poetic and the singers' voices captured the strength and emotion of every word. I appreciate that a specific time and place was chosen, especially a period that carried such importance in the young nation's history and the experiences and sacrifices of two of the most important patriots of their time. The performance of the Chelsea Opera String Quartet was absolutely elegant. The selection of a string quartet for this period was genius."

Co-producers Leonarda Priore and Lynne Hayden-Findlay love history as much as they love opera. "We believe in the power music has to transform a person. Layer onto that the incredible story presented through the words of John and Abigail Adams, and you have an exceptional hour of theater. We are so excited to be given this special opportunity to take A Distant Love 'home' to Quincy."

Friends Of Blue Hills Green Up May 31

All are invited to join the Friends of the Blue Hills for a spring festival of stewardship and fun.

The annual Green Up will be held on Sunday, May 31, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the Ponkapoag AMC Cabins. Volunteers will enjoy music, food, face painting, crafts and a scavenger hunt while helping with an essential task: pulling up invasive weeds that threaten the Blue Hills.

Meg McMillen is a history teacher and the Community Service Coordinator for Quincy High School. Last year, McMillen recruited nearly 20 students to participate in Green Up. At this year's Quincy High Community Service Fair, McMillen was again encouraging her students to volunteer for the annual event, and 27 signed up to do so.

Many plants look alike for most of the visitors to the 7,000 acre Blue Hills reservation, yet many of the plants that have expanded in recent years are not native to the park and threaten to crowd out naturally occurring species. Vigorous weeding during the warmer months helps maintain a healthy balance in the forest.

Volunteers should park at Temple Beth David, 1060 Randolph St., in Canton. It is a short, scenic walk to the cabins. The event is rain or shine, and while some gloves will be available for weeding, volunteers are encouraged to bring their own gardening gloves if they have them. RSVP to Greenup@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org or 617-696-8248.

Friends of the Blue Hills was founded in 1979 and has been working for over 35 years to protect the Blue Hills Reservation's beauty, natural habitats, and recreational opportunities. For more information, visit www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

Quincy Historical Society May Programs

The Quincy Historical Society will present two programs this month at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

On Thursday, May 21, at 7 p.m. the Society will present "1865 - Quincy and the End of the Civil War."

Executive Director Ed Fitzgerald will discuss Quincy's experience of the final months and immediate aftermath of the Civil War.

That experience ranged from the continuing active military service of hundreds of Quincy men, to the diplomatic service of Charles Francis Adams as minister to Great Britain, to the town's reactions to heroism and loss and to great national events – passage of the 13th Amendment, the long-anticipated fall of Richmond, and the assassination of President Lincoln.

On Thursday, May 28, at 7 p.m. at the Academy, Adams National Historical Park and the Historical Society will present a report on the Park's recent cultural landscape study of the Adams Birthplaces. Margaret Coffin Brown, Historical architect at the Olmsted Center, will be speaker.

WHAT'S COOKING
Marie & Suzie
By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Escarole & Potatoes

By MARIE

When we were all at home, we had a wonderful garden with so many vegetables that my mother would cook in different ways.

Today's recipe is for escarole and potatoes that we all enjoyed and one that I still make from time to time.

It's pretty easy to make and escarole is sold in all the markets so it is easy to find.

ESCAROLE AND POTATOES

1 large head of escarole
3-4 medium potatoes (cooked and cut up in pieces
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves of garlic (cut small)
salt and pepper

Boil the escarole until tender. Drain, cool and then cut in pieces.

Cook the potatoes, cool and cut in pieces. They can also be mashed but roughly.

In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and add the escarole stirring until blended. Add the potatoes and mix together while cooking. When I made it, I like the potatoes to be a bit crusty. Cook until all blended and hot. It's a wonderful side dish.

Cacao Date Truffles

By SUZIE

When you want to reach for candy, have some of these healthy "truffles" in the fridge instead with a cup of hot tea or glass of homemade almond milk (recipe to come soon.)

These little powerhouses are full of fiber, calcium, iron, magnesium, potassium and flavor. No need to feel guilty or deprived when you can have something as delicious as these at your fingertips.

I recently made these for a presentation and everyone went for seconds (they would have went for thirds but they were all gone) These are also pretty fun to make as well and look lovely, especially when rolled in the coconut or the pistachios.

CACAO DATE TRUFFLES

3 tablespoons raw cacao powder...
1 1/2 cups Medjool dates, pitted
3-5 tablespoons unsweetened shredded coconut pinch sea salt
dash vanilla

COATING OPTIONS

1/2 cup unsweetened shredded coconut
1/4 cup toasted sesame seeds
1/2 cup crushed toasted pistachios or hazelnuts
OR just roll in more cacao powder

Puree' cacao powder, dates, 3 Tbsp. coconut, and salt until almost smooth, adding water by the teaspoonfuls as not to be too dry and crumbly. Add more coconut if mixture is too sticky, so it varies with the texture of the dates.

Add vanilla and puree' some more. Scoop date mixture by the tablespoon and roll into balls (about 1 inch.) Roll in desired coatings to cover.

Cover and chill.

Can be made one week ahead.

Best-Ever Muffins

By MARIE

There is something about a muffin with a cup of morning coffee, and so many kinds to choose from.

Today's recipe is for a basic best-ever muffin, and one in which any kind of fruit can be added.

I've used blueberries – so plentiful now – but cranberries, strawberries, just about anything can be added.

BEST-EVER MUFFINS

1/4 cup sugar
1 1/4 cups flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg (beaten)
3/4 cup milk
1/3 cup melted butter
1/2 cup blueberries

Mix the egg, milk and butter. Add the dry ingredients, and stir until mixture is moistened.

Gently stir in the blueberries. Fill each muffin tin 3/4 full and bake in either paper lined muffin tin or greased at 400 degrees for 20-25 minutes.

The nice part about this recipe is not only is it so easy to make, but delicious plain.

Robert Largey, Andrew Trebicka On Award-Winning Robotics Team

Two Boston College High School students from Quincy – Robert Largey and Andrew Trebicka – are members of the school's Schrodinger's Cat robotics team, which won two awards in this year's competitions.

Largey is a sophomore and Trebicka a freshman at the school. The team recently won the Gracious Professionalism® Award sponsored by Johnson & Johnson, which celebrates outstanding sportsmanship and continuous Gracious Professionalism® in the heat of competition, both on and off the playing field.

In March at the NE District - UMASS Dartmouth - Event, Largey and Trebicka and their team won the Imagery Award established in honor of Jack Kamen for attractiveness in engineering and outstanding visual aesthetic integration of the machine and team appearance. This is the second year BC High has won both awards.

The team's energy dominated the competition racking up more points every match. Schrodinger's Cat improved from a first competition score of 8 to a season high of 125. Most of the team's improvement can be attributed to the fact that the team maintained focus on iterating on design through the entire competition season.

Phelan Running For Mayor

Former Mayor William Phelan released a video Monday officially announcing his candidacy for Mayor of the City of Quincy: http://youtu.be/2bIK8ApUsbA.

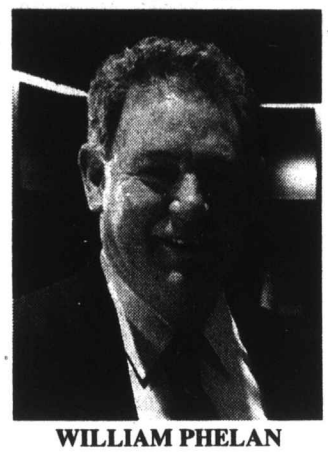
"I first sought public office to advocate for my four children as they made their way through the schools here, but now they are grown and I look at our city through a new lens. Will our next generation of residents thrive here? I've been proud to call Quincy my home for my entire life, and I want my kids to share that pride," said Phelan in a written statement.

"We are a city of incredible potential, but we see nearby cities and towns outpace us in attracting businesses and supporting transportation and infrastructure. I know Quincy can be stronger. My proudest days were those spent serving this city and working to make it the best place to raise my family. I'm running for Mayor with that same passion driving me."

Phelan served as an elected member of the Quincy School Committee from 2000 to 2002, where he introduced early intervention literacy programs and overhauled the citywide early literacy curriculum. In 2002, Phelan was sworn in to his first term as the Mayor of Quincy, where he would serve the City for the next six years.

Throughout his career in public service, Phelan said he has combined visionary leadership with strong fiscal stewardship. As Mayor, Phelan:

- Converted a $5.4M budget deficit into record $17M surplus, during a time of declining state aid to municipalities
- Achieved multiple bond rating upgrades from Moody's and Standard & Poor's
- Identified and collected revenues from delinquent tax and non-tax sources, resulting in historically low property tax assessments
- Implemented a citywide state-of-the-art integrated financial software system
- Conducted a top-to-bottom review and systemic restructuring of city departments, resulting in increased efficiencies and 100+ person reduction in payroll, with no layoffs
- Successfully negotiated with city unions, including teachers, resulting in increased employee contribution to health benefit costs.



WILLIAM PHELAN

As Mayor, Phelan also said he implemented management initiatives that allowed increased investment in education, while still achieving a record budget surplus for the City, including:

- Increasing the annual average education budget increase of more than 5 percent
- Restoring of enrichment programs
- Hiring resource officers

Phelan also noted he implemented a system-wide full-day kindergarten program, created a $22M program of energy improvements to school buildings, and began construction on $127M "green" high school. And during his time as Mayor, Phelan created a night school program, mentoring programs, and home-based counseling programs through the school department, resulting in a 50 percent reduction in the City's dropout rate.

Most recently, in 2011, the Town of Holbrook, asked Phelan to serve as its Town Administrator. Phelan has achieved a bond rating increase for Holbrook, while at the same time lowering taxes, increasing reserves to historic highs, and developing sound fiscal policies to ensure the long-term growth and stability for the town. Phelan saved the town hundreds of thousands of dollars by building a partnership with the Norfolk County Sheriff Department to allow inmates and town employees to perform Town Hall renovations.

Phelan is a lifelong resident of Quincy. He attended Beechwood Knoll Elementary and Central Middle School, where he met his future wife, Tracey Tobin. He graduated from North Quincy High School, where he co-captained the basketball team and was inducted into the Hall of Fame. He worked his way through Suffolk University, then Suffolk Law, graduating with honors. He began his legal career in the Suffolk District Attorney's Office, and went on to build a successful law practice here in Quincy.

6-Way Mayoral Primary Shaping Up

as Koch, 249 Newbury Ave.; Councillor Doug Gutro, 230 Marlboro St.; and School Committee member Anne Mahoney, 12 Ferriter St.

A fourth candidate, Richard Turpin of 118 Martensen St., pulled nomination papers for Ward 2 councillor on May 5 before notifying the City Clerk's Office the following day that he would run instead for mayor. Charles Dennehy Jr. of 610 Willard St. was the fifth person to do so.

A preliminary election would be held Sept. 22 if three or more mayoral candidates qualify for the ballot. All candidates – including those for mayor and other races – are required to submit 50 signatures to the Board of Registrars by 5 p.m. on Aug. 4 for certification. Certified nomination papers, including a statement of candidacy, need to be filed with the city clerk by 5 p.m. on Aug 18.

The final election will take place Nov. 3.

Phelan was first elected to the School Committee in 1999. He was halfway through his first term on the committee in 2001 when he defeated incumbent Mayor James Sheets in one of the closest elections in city history. Phelan was re-elected in 2003 and 2005 before losing to Koch in 2007. Phelan ran for mayor again in 2009, losing to Koch in that year's election.

Phelan has served as the town administrator in Holbrook since 2011. He also operates a law office in Quincy Center next door to City Hall.

Mahoney unsuccessfully challenged Koch in 2011. There was no mayoral race during the last municipal election in 2013.

The other contests shaping up include races for four ward councillor seats and School Committee.

Three residents are vying to replace Kevin Coughlin as Ward 3 councillor; Coughlin announced earlier this year he would not seek an eighth term. Ian Cain of 192 South Central Ave., Karl Roos of 8 Park St. and Sandy Verhault of 183 Highland Ave. are the three who pulled papers for that seat.

Incumbent Margaret Laforest of 236 Rock Island Rd. and challenger John McCone of 111 Darrow St. both pulled papers to run for the Ward 1 seat on May 5.

Two have also pulled papers for Ward 2 Councillor: incumbent Brad Croall of 65 Gay St. and James Connors 124 Martensen St.

Gina Ostis of 57 Estabrook Rd. has taken out papers to run for the Ward 5 seat. Incumbent Kirsten Hughes had yet to do so as of Tuesday afternoon, but has said she will seek re-election.

Incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, 16 Cross St., and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, 94 Newbury Ave., also took out papers on May 5.

Three residents have pulled papers to run for the three at-large seats on the council: incumbents Joseph Finn of 15 Williams St. and Michael McFarland of 27 Village Dr. and School Committee member David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Rd. Gutro is giving up his at-large seat to run for mayor.

Four candidates pulled papers to run for School Committee: incumbents Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave. and Kathryn Hubley of 44 Marion St. as well as former Quincy High Principal Frank Santoro of 80 Havilend St. and James DeAmicis of 66 Campbell St. Three of the six committee seats are on the ballot this fall. McCarthy holds one of those three seats up for election and is vacating it to run for City Council.

A preliminary election for one of the ward councillor seats would be held if three or more candidates qualify for the ballot. A preliminary election for councillor-at-large or School Committee would only happen if seven candidates qualify for either seat.

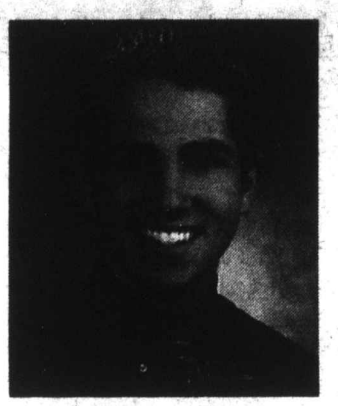
James DeAmicis Seeking Seat On School Committee

James V. DeAmicis, a member of the Quincy High School Class of 2015, announces he is seeking a seat on the Quincy School Committee in the munipal election this fall.

DeAmicis said is a 10-year resident of Quincy and attended Bernazzani Elementary, Broad Meadows Middle School and Quincy High School.



JAMES DeAMICIS

In his campaign announcement, DeAmicis said:

"The education I have received in the Quincy Public Schools has been excellent. Starting in elementary all the way through high school, it has challenged and enabled me to excel academically and has helped me to gain acceptance to the college of my choice, Suffolk University. I have been given the tools to succeed at Suffolk, where I will be working towards an undergraduate degree in American Politics, all thanks to my education in Quincy Public Schools.

"Ten years ago my family moved from South Boston to Quincy. My mother Noreen has raised my brother Luke (16) who is a sophomore at Quincy High School and is joined by my sister Victoria (14) who is a freshman at Quincy High School and my youngest sister Isabella (12) who is in seventh grade at Central Middle School.

"For the past seven years, since middle school, I have been a committed volunteer for various non-profits such as the Rotary Club of Quincy. Last year I served as a board member for the Interact Club, a student base group at Quincy High which is partnered with Rotary, and this year I had the great privilege of serving as Vice President. Rotary's main belief is service above self—in the community, the workplace, and throughout the world. Ever since I became involved with this program I have applied this to my life on a daily basis.

"Whether it's been going out and stocking a pantry or peer mentoring I have tried to make a difference. I am grateful to live in Quincy and I enjoy taking an active role in shaping the future of our city and with a seat open on the School Committee this election cycle, I find that I can't resist the opportunity to become more directly involved in our schools and our community."

If elected to the Quincy School Committee, DeAmicis said he would be "responsive and receptive to parents, staff, students and the community at large, encouraging an open dialog. The committee must take input from all groups and weigh all the facts before making a decision on any issues. My efforts would center on serving all of the children in the community; one child is no more important than another. We are a diverse community and have to celebrate that diversity. Our schools are here to serve the educational needs of all the children."

DeAmicis said one of the key issues for the school committee is to create a long-term vision, mapping a course that provides the necessary opportunities students need to reach their full potential.

"Two of my foremost goals center upon environmental education and incorporating a professional development program for both high schools. Future generations of Quincy are going to be in turmoil because of their lack of knowledge about environmental issues. To avoid this from happening we must give students the tools to address this topic by incorporating it in their curriculum. In addition, currently high school graduates in Quincy are facing a challenge with college because they lack the professional skills they could have gained in school through seminars, networking, and internships."

He added:

"As a graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, I feel a strong sense of devotion to the system and the community that ultimately is helping me reach my educational and career goals, and I feel it is my duty and honor to contribute to the continued growth and development of the schools that will shape the future. By working together we can all share in the knowledge and satisfaction that we have provided for the educational needs of all children, and have built a district where students, parents, teachers, and staff feel they are welcome and that they belong. I ask for your support because I am the new voice."

DeAmicis will officially kick off his campaign on Thursday, May 28 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parkingway in Quincy.

Local Receipts Up 9 Percent

By SCOTT JACKSON

Despite a brutal winter, Quincy's local receipts for the current fiscal are up by about 9 percent over what was projected in December.

The City Council's finance committee reviewed the local receipts – money the city receives for excise taxes, meals taxes, and various fees, among other items – Monday night before discussing the budget for the new fiscal year.

The city estimated receiving some $24.7 million in local receipts in fiscal year 2015 – July 1, 2014, to June 30, 2015 – in December 2014 when the state's Department of Revenue approved its tax recap. Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh said he now projects $26.9 million in local receipts for the city this fiscal year.

"We made a conservative estimate for this year; $24.7 million we thought would be the conservative target for local receipts," Cavanagh said. "I'm happy to report that despite the severe winter we all endured, local receipts are up and they are really quite healthy as a whole."

City Auditor Susan O'Connor concurred with Cavanagh's new $26.9 million projection.

One of the largest local receipts is the excise tax collected on vehicles. In December, the city projected $9.3 million in excise taxes. To date, Quincy has collected $8.4 million and Cavanagh now projects receiving $9.8 million for the fiscal year.

"That would account for 91 percent of what was collected last year and put into Munis as the budgeted target for this year so we're doing pretty well," Cavanagh said of the amount collected to date in excise taxes. The city is through about 85 percent of the fiscal year.

The city's portion of the meals tax is also doing better than expected, despite a record-breaking winter. The state gives communities that money on a quarterly basis and the city received $1.192 million for the first three quarters of the year, a period that ended March 30. The original estimate for the meals tax for the whole fiscal year was $1.5 million; that has been increased to $1.577 million.

"The meals tax, which I think you might all agree we could have reasonably expected to take a pretty good hit, especially the third quarter, it's actually up. It's up 4 percent," Cavanagh said.

"At the end of the third quarter we had collected $1.192 million and if that holds at 4 percent we'd be at about $1.577 million for the year…if we do a little bit better in this fourth quarter, which maybe we will with better weather, that's going to be a nice number for us as well."

The city has also received $1.96 million in interest premium payments on bonds. That number is not included in the December projection. The interest premium is earned each time the city takes out a new bond.

Some accounts are down so far this year. The city expected receiving $1.6 million in fees for building inspections for the fiscal year but has received just over $1 million to date. The new projection for that account is $1.2 million.

"That account is, to make a sports analogy, a late closer – a fourth quarter team," Cavanagh said. "Those revenues tend to come in heavy in May in June. I'm hoping it's a much healthier number, but I did curtail it down to the $1.2 million."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci expressed concern about the local receipts making up less of the city's total revenue in each of the last several fiscal years. In fiscal year 2013 local receipts accounted for 11 of revenue and property taxes 72 percent, according to a budget plan filed at the end of the prior fiscal year. In the fiscal year 2016, local receipts are expected to account for 8 percent of revenue and property taxes 75 percent. State aid has remained constant at 17 percent.

"I find it difficult not to read a trend in it. The trend is we are getting less local receipts as a percentage of our overall revenue and we're increasing the burden on the residential taxpayer and the commercial taxpayer," Palmucci said.

"If local receipts continue to go down and the state aid is staying static, it's always going to balanced on the property taxes."

Cavanagh replied that redevelopment of the downtown shift the burden away from homeowners.

"If the downtown gets completed, if there are more restaurants, more liquor licenses and a more vibrant downtown, you're going to see property taxes go up, you're going to see local receipts increase, you're going to see commercial values increase," he explained.

"You're going to see a shift within the 75 percent that is property taxes go more to higher value businesses and less burden on the homeowner."

Achievements, Progress Highlighted At School Meeting

Two Finalists Selected For New Sterling Middle School Design

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Achievements, community progress, and well-earned praise were the order of business at the recent Quincy School Committee meeting which met on May 6 at the Coddington Building.

In Superintendent Richard DeChristofaro's student recognition segment of the meeting, Saxon Bresnahan was introduced. Bresnahan recently pitched a perfect softball game for Quincy High against Duxbury, striking out all 21 batters.

Described by her coaches as a leader and a student who "not only excels in the field, but in the classroom," Bresnahan said, "Thank you for having me here. It's such an honor to represent Quincy High, but I couldn't have done it without my catcher." Her catcher is Angelina Avitabile, who joined Bresnahan at the podium.

Quizzed by Mayor Koch as to when, during the game, Bresnahan may have developed some nervousness about all the batters she was retiring, she said that around the 4th inning she began to think about it, but "did not want to jinx" herself.

DeChristofaro highlighted the many, highly-productive Arts programs being conducted around the city, including all the drama productions and Spring concerts and recognized the nine Quincy schools who applied for, and have received beautification grants, awarded by the city's Department of Public Works.

"Beyond the Bell continues, and we are so very proud of the many hours and activities...Beyond the Bell isn't just focused on academics – there's a ton of activities that our principals and teachers have planned," the superintendent said.

In an April letter to parents DeChristofaro described the Beyond the Bell program as "an enrichment opportunity for students and families as they engage in classroom and community connections as well as explore the rich culture, history and environment of Quincy."

This program will provide students with activities connecting school, home and community partners and present opportunities for learning in a structured, outside school-hours environment.

The superintendent thanked all the teachers, administrators, school committee members, parents and partners for all that they do for the city's programs. DeChristofaro pointed out how many of the city's departments have connections to the classroom, such as The Crane Library, the YMCA, the QPD, MSBA etc.

In the Open Forum section of the meeting, a Quincy Point mom spoke to the needs of lower-grade school students who perform above grade-level and their need for resources which will challenge them in the classroom.

Programs for younger, gifted students in other parts of the country were cited and emphasis placed on providing specialists who can devote themselves to gifted and talented youngsters in grades kindergarten through grade 3, as opposed to that responsibility being left to the individual classroom teachers,

It was announced that there exist two finalists in the bid for the design of the new Sterling Middle School. The firm of Ai3, who designed the new Central Middle School, and SMMA of Cambridge, who were honored in 2012 by the National School Board Association and the American Institute of Architects for their design innovation of the new Quincy High School.

In other school-building considerations, new windows and doors have been ordered for the Wollaston, Merrymount and North Quincy High schools, and under consideration is the conversion of the heating system of the Bernazzani School, which is the last remaining Quincy school to be heated by oil.

The program for community service which offers students in grades 9 through 12 the opportunity to serve their community and get 'credit for life' has over 100 organizations now participating. Each student is required to perform 10 hours yearly and 30 total hours must be completed by September of senior year. A complete list of participating companies is available at http://qscp.org.

Mayor Koch provided details of the city's 2016 budget which he said was increased by 3.16% and provided a copy to each of the committee members. The mayor pointed out that 35% of the city's entire budget goes to our schools.

Despite the challenges to the budget following this winter's fall-out, the city was still able to enhance the 95.7 million-dollar school budget. Committee members Noel DiBona and David McCarthy thanked the mayor for the city's 1.48 million-dollar increase. It was reported that 100 new positions in the school department had been added, Pre-K through grade 12.

The next School Committee meetings will be held on May 20 at Central Middle School and on June 10 at the Coddington Building, both at 7 p.m. There will be a budget public hearing on June 3 at the Coddington Building at 6 p.m.

A meeting of the Budget & Finance subcommittee was held on Monday, May 11, with subsequent meetings to be held on Monday, May 18 and Thursday, May 28, both at 5 p.m. at the Coddington Building.

A meeting of the Health, Transportation and Safety subcommittee was held on May 11, and the Special Education subcommittee will meet on Thursday, May 28 at 6 p.m.

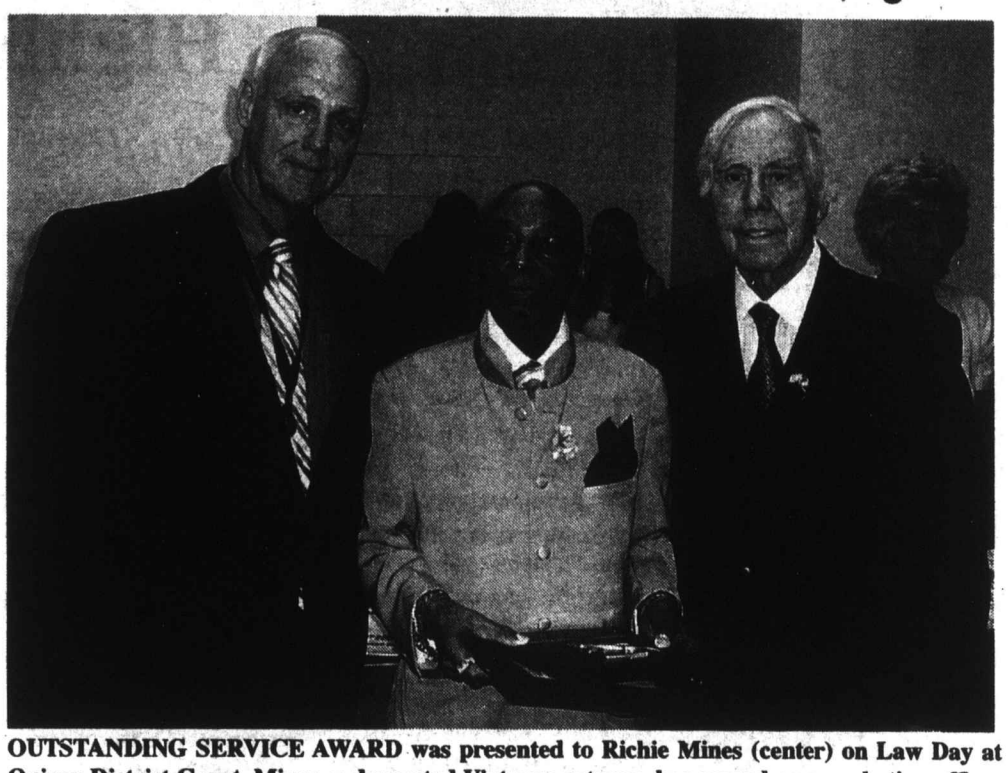
Two Quincy Police Officers Honored On Law Day

John 'Jake' Comer Receives Prestigious James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award



OUTSTANDING SERVICE AWARD was presented to Richie Mines (center) on Law Day at Quincy District Court. Mines, a decorated Vietnam veteran, has served as a probation officer for 33 years. Presenting the award to him were (from left) James Brennan, the court's chief probation officer, and Clerk-Magistrate Arthur Tobin. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

A pair of Quincy police officers who rescued two residents from a fire this January and a former national commander of the American Legion were among more than a dozen people from Quincy and surrounding communities honored this year on Law Day.

The Law Day ceremony was held on May 7 inside the Francis X. Bellotti Courthouse. A standing room only crowd of more than 100 law enforcement officers, local officials and residents attended the two-hour long event.

Quincy Police Officers Andrew Sweeney and William O'Neill received the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement for rescuing an elderly woman and a young child in the January fire. Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey presented the award, which is named for a Metropolitan Police officer killed during a traffic stop in 1984.

"On Jan. 4 of this year, Officers O'Neill and Sweeney were dispatched to Bent Terrace for a report of a working fire with an elderly person inside the building in the proximity of the second floor. The fire was visible through the window of the second floor as the officers arrived. Both officers entered the home, calling out to anyone inside," Morrissey said.

"They received a response from a woman who was sitting in the dark in the doorway. The woman stated there was a child inside the apartment. Officers O'Neill and Sweeney entered the apartment through the thick, black smoke. They found a three-year-old child sleeping in the bedroom. Officer Sweeney picked up the child and carried her to safety. Officer O'Neill picked up the elderly female and carried her out of the building.

"Both the female and the child were treated by EMS personnel who arrived at the scene. As a result of Officer Sweeney and Officer O'Neill's quick actions, their disregard for their own well-being and their tremendous physical courage, both lives were saved. Congratulations on a job well done."

Seven officers from five other police departments received the Dana Award at this year's Law Day: Blake Holt and Brian Stuart of the Braintree Police Department; Kenneth J. Murphy and Mark Sirignano of the Weymouth Police Department; Travis Weeks of the Milton Police Department; Det. Keysha Mitchell of the Holbrook Police Department; and Sgt. William D. Manning of the Environmental Police.

State Troopers John Fanning and Brian Tully received the Mark S. Charbonnier Award. They have helped Morrissey's office solve five homicides since being assigned to his office in 2012.

John "Jake" Comer received the prestigous James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award. Comer, an Air Force veteran of the Korean War, is a past national commander of the American Legion. He also worked as a city assessor in Quincy under five mayors, as director of the Quincy Housing Authority, and as the administrative assistant to the chairman of Massachusetts House of Representative's committee on weighs and means.

Arthur Tobin, clerk-magistrate of Quincy District Court and a former Quincy mayor, cited Comer's service with the American Legion while presenting the award.

"Mr. Comer's distinguished career with the American Legion has taken him from a local post commander to Suffolk County commander to Massachusetts state commander to national executive committeeman to the national commander of the American Legion. Mr. Comer was the leader of nation's largest veterans organization involved in every phrase of service to our veterans – benefits, care, disability, housing, hospitalization, legislation and child and family welfare," Tobin said.

"As a Legionnaire, Mr. Comer has represented our nation and the American Legion with distinction. He has visited all 50 states in the United States, 18 foreign countries and has received a special audience in the Vatican with his holiness, the pope. Mr. Comer has served as a special envoy to South America at the request of the president of the United States on a fact finding mission on two separate occasions."

"Mr. Comer need never ask himself if he has made a difference in the lives of others," Tobin concluded. "He has served our community, our state and our nation in the best interest of his fellow man and has touched the lives of others. The Quincy District Court proudly presents the 2015 James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award in grateful appreciation for his commitment to all our veterans and military personnel."

Sheila McIntyre, wife of the late mayor and senator for whom the award is named, called Comer a special man and a special friend.

"You are a special man, a special friend," she said. "I am so pleased to be able to present this award – the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award – for selfless concern and the promotion of human well being to Mr. John 'Jake' Comer, past national commander of the American Legion, in recognition of your selfless contributions on behalf of veterans and military families and upholding the humanitarian ideals and goals explemented by James R. McIntyre, mayor and senator of Quincy."

While accepting the award, Comer credited the late mayor for launching his career in government.

"I appreciate the recognition that has been afforded me by the James R. McIntyre Award. Back in 1969 I worked for John Hancock and they went on strike. Eddie Graham, my good friend, was the Ward 1 councillor at the time and went to Jim and said 'the man is out of work.' Jim McIntyre created the job in the assessor's office as an assistant assessor; they never had one before. I became the assistant assessor. Six months later the assessor retired; I then became the assessor," Comer said.

"My government life went on for 30 years because of James R. McIntyre – an outstanding mayor – probably one of the best mayors this city has ever seen. I mean that. We really miss Jim. He left us at too early an age.

"This award means so much. It means so much being here in the Quincy court. I came here quite often with Judge [Mark] Coven and others and I appreciate what they do for us. All I can say is when we hear, we forget. And when we see we remember. It's when we do, we understand."

Probation officer Richie Mines received the Outstanding Service Award. A Philadelphia native, he served in the Marine Corps for 23 years, including three consecutive tours in Vietnam. Mines was wounded during each tour; during his final tour he was shot in the throat by an AK-47. Mines received a Silver Star, multiple Purple Hearts and 22 campaign ribbons during his time in the Marines and retired with the rank of master sergeant.

Mines has worked as a probation officer for 33 years. He is also active in his church.

"Richie is easily the most loved and respected member of the Quincy Court family," Tobin said. "He treats everyone with dignity and respect and he deeply cares about all his co-workers and they in turn love and care about him. We honor him this morning with affection and gratitude for his many acts of kindness and generosity, which he quietly dispenses each and every day."

Sonya "Sunny" Shaw of Braintree received the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award during the Law Day Ceremony and David Ringius received the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award.

Mayor Thomas Koch was announced as the recipient of the Peter J. Muse Award and Michael F. Furey the recipient of Bar Advocate of the Year Award; both will be presented during the Annual Quincy Bar Association Dinner on June 3.

Koch was among the speakers at the Law Day ceremony.

"As we've seen the last several months some trouble around our nation, it reminds us how important the job that's done day in and day out through...the men and women on the front line each day serving our community," Koch said. "It's a privilege on behalf of the city of Quincy to bring the greetings, to congratulate all the recipients this morning and to express our gratitude to each and everybody here that serves our communities in Quincy and beyond."

Laura Martin, president of the Quincy Bar Association, made the Law Day motion. The theme for this year's Law Day was the 800th anniversary of the signing of the Magna Carta by King John of England in June 1215 at Runnymede.

"It has inspired the most basic democratic ideals of equality before the law and human rights," Martin said. "As we observe Law Day we shall reflect on the importance of this initial document guaranteeing our rights throughout the justice system while celebrating the innovations and adaptions that have been made over time."

The Law Day speaker was Daniel Bennett, who Gov. Charlie Baker appointed secretary of the Executive Office of Public Safety earlier this year. Bennett previously worked as a prosecutor in several of the state's counties and as a defense attorney based out of 15 Foster St. in Quincy Center, a short distance from the courthouse.

"I am proud of my time as a zealous advocate and a defense attorney. I am just as proud as I am of my time as a prosecutor," he said. "I became a better prosecutor because of the eight years at 15 Foster St."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GROWING MORE ATTACHED

Adults lose more teeth as a result of gum disease than from tooth decay. Poor dental hygiene can result in bacteria collecting in the cuffs of gum that surround each tooth. Over time, these bacteria can cause inflammation at the gum line that may worsen, creating even deeper pockets of bacteria around teeth, which contributes to tooth loss. Aside from scheduling regular dental check-ups and practicing good oral hygiene at home, adults can avert periodontal disease-related tooth loss by getting sufficient vitamin D. One study shows that people over age 50 with the highest levels of vitamin D in their blood had about 25 percent more "periodontal attachment" than those with the lowest levels of the nutrient.

Are you getting enough vitamin D? We welcome new patients of all ages with any dental or oral care need. We integrate cutting edge philosophies, technology, and techniques with the proven expertise that comes with a commitment to continuing education and a passion for excellence. Please call us at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are dedicated to saving and restoring your teeth and helping you look your best. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. According to a Norwegian study, adults living at higher latitudes with less exposure to sunlight (and consequently less vitamin D production in their skin) experienced much greater tooth loss than those living at more southerly latitudes.

Council OKs $79M For 19 Department Budgets

is better off for us," Murphy said.

"We've discussed [leaving the GIC]. We haven't actually taken steps to do it, but it is something we have interest in and have talked to other communities that may have exited GIC."

The proposed $387,955 budget for the Human Resources Department was also approved. The department's budget is up $2,000 over the current year; the increase is for existing salary obligations.

Three departmental budgets under the auspices of City Solicitor Jim Timmins were approved Monday night.

The Legal Department's budget was set at $579,440, up $2,900 over the current budget because of salary obligations. The worker's compensation budget was set at $1.2 million and the budget for court judgments at $200,000 – both are level-funded.

During Monday's meeting, Timmins noted the city is facing a deficit in this year's judgments budget because of the ongoing legal dispute with the Woodward School over the city's management of two trust funds that benefited the private school. The city in March agreed to pay the Woodward School $1,065,762 for damages related to the sale of real estate that was included in the trusts; that figure also included interest.

Under state law, the communities can deficit spend for judgments and snow and ice removal. The city will have to pay the judgments deficit off and may use free cash to do so.

The snow and ice removal account is also in a deficit this year. The city spent $13.2 million on snow and ice removal this winter; $1.76 million was included in the fiscal year 2015 budget for those costs. Koch has said a final decision on how to pay off that deficit won't be made until the fall as the city waits to learn how much it receives in federal aid.

A probate court judge will determine this summer how much else the city owes the Woodward School for costs related to the investment of funds in the trust; that cost would also be charged to the judgment account. Timmins did not disclose how much Quincy might end up paying as a result of that decision.

The city will make $14.7 million in payments on long-term debt in the new fiscal year. The debt payments are up $2.5 million in FY16, in large part because the city opted to take out a bond to refinance the Honeywell capital lease. The city has budgeted $2.4 million for the Honeywell lease in the current budget under a separate account.

The city's payments on short-term debt notes will increase by $267,000 to $812,000 in FY16.

The budget for the Informational Technology Department will increase by $135,000 to $2.46 million in FY16. Included in the increase is $10,000 for additional training of workers within the department and another $10,000 for overtime costs; IT Director Chuck Phelan said the added overtime money is for workers who staff the emergency operations center when needed.

Also included in the IT Department's budget is money to upgrade the city's website. The update of the website will begin in July and be finished by the fall. Phelan said the new website would have a mobile version for people viewing the site on smartphones.

The budget for the Health Department will increase by $20,000 in the new fiscal year to $684,743. Of that, $10,000 will go towards additional pest control on city property; $1,000 was budgeted for pest control in the current fiscal year.

The Park and Forestry Department's $2.1 million budget was approved Monday night, as was the $891,347 budget for the Cemetery Department; those budgets are up $37,000 and $41,000, respectively, over the current fiscal year because of increases in overtime, position reclassifications and existing salary obligations.

The budget for the Thomas Crane Library will increase by $54,800 to $3.13 million in the new fiscal year. The added money will go towards existing salary obligations and the promotion of a custodian into a supervisory position.

The Veterans Services Department's budget is up $10,900 to $2.18 million because of salary obligations. The Council on Aging budget was set at $649,573, up $4,700 over the current year because of salary obligations.

The Recreation Department's budget is up $9,000 to a total of $663,282; the increase is for salary obligations.

Also approved Monday were the Assessor's $758,588 budget; the Treasurer/Collector's $923,993 budget; $50,000 for tax title expenditures; and $488,724 for the Planning Department. The tax title expenditure budget was level-funded while the others are up slightly to cover existing salary obligations.

The finance committee will meet again to discuss the budget on Tuesday, May 26, at 7 p.m. The Fire Department, DPW, Inspectional Services and Public Buildings Budgets will be reviewed that night.

The third committee meeting is slated for 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 3. The budgets for the Police Department, City Clerk's Office, Mayor's Office and City Council are among those that will be discussed that night. A presentation on the Quincy Public Schools budget will also be made; the council only approves the bottom line for the school department and the School Committee is responsible for divvying up those funds.

The council would then need to approve the budget as a whole in June before the start of the new fiscal year.

Building at 6 p.m., where Director of Business Affairs James Mullaney anticipates discussion from those who may propose cuts or advocate increases.

"In the typical quarterly budget, the budget has been set and they want to review the finances and see 'where do we stand now....are we overspending in an area, under-spending?'

"Our budget is 80% payroll. so once you figure out the numbers and what the pay is going to be, there's not much deviation from the budget, so those are relatively quick meetings. It's the budget building talks that take a lot of time. When we need to cut, we start at the outside."

The 'outside' that Mullaney refers to are non-academic expenses, such as electricity, oil, postage, insurance, pensions, and to academic expenses such as library books, educational software, tuitions, staff development, textbooks, repairs, etc.

Upcoming budget meetings include: Revolving Accounts on Monday, May 18, and Budget Options & Priorities on Thursday, May 28, both at 5 p.m. at the Coddington Building.

On June 3rd the School Committee will present its proposed budget to the City Council at the City Council Chambers at 7 p.m.

The next School Committee meeting will be held on May 20 at Central Middle School and on June 10 a Budget Approval Meeting at the Coddington Building, both at 7 p.m.

A meeting of the Special Education subcommittee will meet on Thursday, May 28 at 6 p.m. at the Coddington Building.

Frank Santoro Seeking Seat On School Committee

Retired Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro announces his candidacy for School Committee in this fall's election.

Santoro served on the School Committee for two, four-year terms in the late 1980s and held the vice chairman's position. Santoro spent 42 years in public education as a teacher and administrator in Boston, Brookline and Quincy.

Santoro says he is seeking a seat on the School Committee because he wants to continue to serve the city in public education and contribute his knowledge in making sure that Quincy children get the best education they can.

Santoro, his wife Linda and their two children, Lori and Michael all attended Quincy Public Schools from kindergarten through high school. Santoro's two grandsons Joe and Andrew will be attending Quincy Public Schools in the fall. Santoro's degrees include a master's degree in education.

Santoro has been recognized for assisting in the design of the new award-winning Quincy High School and is a past recipient of the Richard Koch Youth Service Award. He is also a recipient of the Quincy Asian Resources Visionary Award and has appeared on Fox 25 News broadcasts as an Educational Consultant. He is also listed in Jack Encarnacao's recent publication, "Legendary Locals of Quincy."

Santoro has identified a number of issues for the Quincy Public Schools that need continued attention. They are: overseeing the planning and construction of the new Sterling Middle School and Squantum Elementary School, a planned vision for the upkeep and maintenance of the remaining school buildings, continued growth for Quincy's children on the state's mandatory testing assessments, guaranteeing that each child receives an equitable educational opportunity at each of the city's schools, and making sure that our talented teachers receive the necessary tools they need in providing the best education they can for Quincy's children are among the areas that deserve concentration.

"The City of Quincy should be proud of the education that our children are receiving," Santoro said. "The opportunities are there for them to obtain acceptances into the best colleges in our country and prepare them for rewarding occupations and to be productive citizens. Education is Quincy's number one resource and it has a direct bearing on its property values."

Santoro said he would like to use his past educational experiences and knowledge of public education as resources while serving on the city's school committee.

Human Side Of War Recalled At Vietnam Ceremony

By SCOTT JACKSON

A retired U.S. Marine Corps lieutenant colonel reflected on the human side of conflict at the city's annual memorial service for those killed during the Vietnam War.

More than 200 attended the ceremony on April 30, held at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower in Marina Bay. The tower, dedicated in 1987, is inscribed with the names of the 48 Quincy residents who died as a result of injuries sustained in the war.

Fr. John Cregan, the pastor of Blessed Sacrament Parish in Alexandria, Va., was chosen as the special guest speaker for the ceremony. He served in the Marine Corps for 22 years, including a tour of duty in Vietnam when he lost half his company. Cregan began seminary after leaving the Marines in 1983; he was ordained in 1987.

At the Marina Bay ceremony, Cregan recalled being asked to speak about his service in Vietnam shortly after he returned home from his tour. Cregan was invited to speak during a Memorial Day ceremony in New Rochelle, N.Y. More than 150 people showed up to protest the event, Cregan explained, some with signs calling marines "baby killers."

"I was turned in for inciting a riot on the city hall steps of New Rochelle. I tried to tell these people how confused they were, many of them who should have known better – they were educated," Cregan recalled. "I tried to tell them about the human side of war and the great young men that I saw and that I led in Vietnam."

"There is a human side to war," he later added. "These young men faced such very difficult circumstances and such horrendous taking of life and seeing their friends fall. But they had great hearts for other people."

Cregan told the Marina Bay crowd about different experiences he had during the war. In one case, a lance corporal stayed more than a month after his tour of duty was supposed to end to find an orphan he had befriended.

"I remember one lance corporal who had befriended a little Vietnamese orphan girl," Cregan said. "He was due to go home but somehow he worked it out and stayed 45 extra days because he had lost contact with his little friend. He finally found her and sent her home to his parents in Texas, who adopted her."

In another example, Cregan said his men refused to return fire on enemy soldiers because civilians were nearby.

"There were times that I was so proud of my marines who took fire from villages that were infested with the Viet Cong, but they didn't fire back because there were innocent civilians involved," he explained.

As a final example, Cregan recalled four marines and a Navy corpsman running onto a helicopter to save a Viet Cong fighter following a fierce battle.

"I happened to be on a landing zone once to wait for a helicopter," Cregan said. "We had been in a very difficult battle that day and several were wounded – four lost their foot. It was a very hard, difficult day. I saw four marines carrying a wounded man in a poncho and they were running out to get onto a helicopter with this Navy corpsman jogging next to them holding an IV. They got on the helicopter and I got on and they were trying to make this wounded man comfortable.

"I said to myself when I get off I'm just going to tell that marine to 'hang in there, he's going to make it and things are going to be all right.' So when the helicopter landed and took off and things settled down I walked over there. I looked down into that poncho at the face of a Viet Cong soldier and I said, 'there is greatness here. There is goodness here. This, to me, is America.'

"Sometime later I thought what de Tocqueville said in the 19th century, 'America is great because America is good. And if America ceases being good it will cease to be great.' Those misguided people were so wrong because they vilified the young who were willing to answer the call and fight for peace and for freedom and the dignity of every human person."

Cregan also compared the Vietnam era to his experience growing up in the Bronx during World War II and the Korean War.

"As I experienced what I saw when I came back, which was very hard to understand, I remembered a different time – many of you remember that time in our country – when values were clear and everyone held to the same values," Cregan said. "Everyone embraced duty, honor, country – a willingness to serve and give of oneself for the good and safety of others."

Cregan remembered peddling his toy wagon around the neighborhood in search of scrap iron. His mother would give him jars of grease to bring to the local butcher, where it would be collected for use as a lubricant in tanks and other vehicles. Victory gardens sprang up on every patch of grass in the borough.

"Everyone was involved in the war effort," Cregan said. "We were standing together in great unity, facing overwhelming odds but with great resolve that we we're going to be victorious, no matter the cost. That freedom was going to live on in this land. That America was going to be a bright light of hope for the rest of the world."

In his local parish in the Bronx, Cregan said, a number of young men enlisted in the Marine Corps. That led him to joining the after graduating from Fordham University.

"I was so very impressed by the young men who returned home and I was inspired by them. I said I want to be a marine," Cregan recalled.

Cregan was one of several speakers at the 90-minute ceremony. One of them was Joseph McCain, a Navy month, Noble was honored to have the privilege of laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia on National POW Recognition Day.

Noble is a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post, the Cavanaugh Chapter 79 of the Disabled Americans and has been active in other veterans organizations for many years.

After Noble's remarks, a memorial wreath will be placed at the base of the main flag pole at Veterans Island. Escorting the wreath will be SAL Commander Paul Moody and Senior Vice Commander James Gill.

A second wreath will be placed at the sign for "Flags for Veterans Island" by Post 294 Past Commander Robert LaFleur, SAL Commander Moody and Morrisette Post Ladies Auxiliary President Pam Norton.

There will also be a ceremonial flag raising. The U.S. Flag that will be raised is the burial flag of Salvatore Pugliesi, U.S. Navy, who was a decades-long member of the Morrisette Post and the uncle of Past Post Commander Stephen Fowles. Fowles is a dual member of the Morrisette Post and Squadron 294.

The National Anthem will be sung by Naseeb "Mo" Morad, longtime member of the Morrisette Post. The invocation will be given by Joe McDonald, chaplain, and the benediction will be offered by the Rev. John Culp, pastor of Fort Square Presbyterian Church.

The Flags for Veterans Island is decorated with 330 American flags. Some honor deceased veterans; others were donated by the living to support Squadron 294. One flag is unnamed – it symbolizes the Prisoners of War and the Missing in Action who have yet to return home.

During the ceremony Sunday, names of the deceased honorees will be read aloud.

The SAL Memorial Day observance will also include other speakers including Mayor Thomas Koch who will bring greetings of the city and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes who is the chairperson of the Council's Veterans Committee.

Also taking part will be various colors guards including the Quincy Police and Fire, Morrisette Combined Color Guard with Ladies Auxiliary Color Guard, the U.S Air Force Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps Color Guard from North Quincy High School and the Leatherneck Honors Society of Massachusetts – all veterans of the U.S. Marine Corps.

Following the ceremony there will be refreshments at the Morrisette Post, 81 Liberty St., Quincy.

Sunday's ceremony is open to all. The public is encouraged to attend.

This is the third consecutive year the Barbara A. Morris Award will be presented to an employee or an employee group.

Quarry Museum Volunteers Spruce Up Inclined Plane Railway

The Quarry Museum chose the historic Granite Railway Company's Inclined Plane Railway for Quincy's 2015 Cleaner, Greener Cleanup.

The Inclined Plane Railway was built by Gridley Bryant in 1828 to allow granite from the Pine Hill ledge to be transported down from the ledge for shipment by the Granite Railway to the wharf at Gullivers Creek and the Neponset River. The granite would then be shipped to Charlestown for construction of the Bunker Hill Monument.

Volunteers picked up trash in the area surrounding the Inclined Plane that had accumulated after a tough winter, then raked and bagged leaves and mulched around the foot of the railway and around the obelisks at the base. Volunteers also removed a large tree that had fallen across the railway with the use of chainsaws. This was a major accomplishment to clean the railway for the tourists who visit this historic site. Visit the museum's website www.quincyquarrymuseum.org for photos of the cleanup.

South West Quincy Area Celebrates Cleaner, Greener Quincy

More than 20 volunteers participated in the recent Cleaner, Greener Quincy Day in the South/West Quincy - Brewers Corner section of the city.

Among the volunteers were students from Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School parents and students; Sterling Middle School students; officers from the South Shore and Eastern Bank; and members of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, South/West Quincy NeighbhorhoodAssociation, Solutions Group, as well as the Ward 4 Association.

Volunteers . swept the streets, mulched flower beds and trees around Brewers Corner. Sterling Middle School students raked and cleaned the litter the length of Gordon Terrace by Lincoln-Hancock School grounds. The bank officials and members of the Wollaston Garden Club cleared the debris from Kincaide Field. SWQNA concentrated in Brewers Corner beautification efforts.

The volunteers covered a huge area which shows the volunteerism and community spirit is alive and well, not just in South West Quincy, but throughout the city. None of this large area could have been covered and achieved without this many hands giving up their Saturday morning, organizers said.

SWQNA thanks all the volunteers who participated in the cleanup effort including:

Sterling Middle School students and Principal Dr. John Franceschini; students, parents and principal of Lincoln-Hancock School, Ruth Widmar; Janet Carlson, Robin Cecchet, Ann and Sally Kozlowski, Alan and Marcus Johnson, Maryann Morton, Ellie Cleveland, Jeffrey Cummins, Anneli Johnson and Keith West of SWQNA; Julie Smith and Pamela O'Leary of South Shore Bank; Ellaine Deeken of Quincy Chamber of Commerce; Donna Kelble of Eastern Bank; Patrick Corcoran of Corcoran Realty Trust; staff from Solutions Group and Community Action; Jeff Poirier of the Ward 4 Association; Spukies' N Pizza, Granite Street Cafe and DPW for the civic beautification grant and Quincy Park Department for lending supplies and tools.

Dave Ramos, Call Taker

Dave Ramos, Call Taker

Dave Ramos had been an EMT with Fallon for nearly five years when in 2001 he was in a tragic motorcycle accident that left him disabled. As Dave was faced with a long road of rehabilitation and physical therapy, his Fallon family rallied behind him. They hosted a fundraiser that Dave was supposed to attend but couldn't, due to an injury he sustained during physical therapy. He remembers being incredibly moved by the support.

"A coworker took a cell phone around to everyone at the event so that I could say hello and thank you. I was overwhelmed and kind of tearing up. I kept thinking, is this really all for me?"

Remaining in close contact with Fallon in the years following the accident, Dave returned to work in the dispatch center in 2007 and has been there since. He values the extended family feeling he has at Fallon and wouldn't choose to work anywhere else, calling Fallon his home away from home. "Everybody knows you here. I'm like Norm from Cheers! It's like that," Dave laughs.

Dave says he really appreciates the approachability of Fallon management.

"You can walk down to Tim's office, knock on the door and go in and see him whenever you need to. He will bend over backwards to help out anybody."

Kathy Sacchetti, EMT

Quincy resident Kathy Sacchetti, Fallon EMT, has worked in the City for decades. Kathy says joining Fallon in 1997 was "one of the best decisions I've made." Her loyalty to Quincy and to Fallon is shared amongst so many of her coworkers. "We want to stay in Quincy and continue servicing the City because most of us live here, have grown up here, and our families are here."

A mother of six and grandmother of twelve, Kathy says family is everything and appreciates that Fallon shares this philosophy. In times of trial when her family members have faced serious health issues that required Kathy to take time off of work, she felt support from Fallon most of all. "Tim Fallon and Sean Tyler have been there through thick and thin with all of us. 'Take whatever time you need and let us know what you need from us,' they told me. Sometimes it was a last minute call if I had to stay home and they'd always understand."

As Kathy reflects on her career as an EMT, she knows she has touched a lot of lives and doesn't take that for granted. It comes down to going the extra mile to take care of our patients the best way possible.

"We try to provide more than just emergency medical care to everyone in the City. When you help deliver a baby in the back of an ambulance you are blessed to be a part of such an important event in someone's life. It's hard to explain what it's like to be there for something like that. I'm grateful for the opportunity I have to make a difference in a lot of lives and I work with a lot of people who feel the same way."

bus stop for Quincy schoolchildren right near here," Palmucci said. "For generations to come – for years to come – Quincy schoolchildren – our youth, our future – will stand nearby here. There will be a fitting tribute to George right by them. They will see everyday this concrete memorial we are constructing here that will last beyond all of us."

"Today we show our appreciation for Chief Petty Officer George R. Levesque, West Quincy native, killed in Vietnam on March 13, 1969," Rep. Bruce Ayers added. "However, everyday we honor his memory and his sacrifice. May this memorial square serve as a reminder to all of his character, his devotion to his family and his love for the city of Quincy and the country."

Schofield was killed on Sept. 16, 1968, at the age of 21. He was serving as a platoon leader and his unit was escorting a convoy on a road security mission when they came under heavy enemy fire. The lead vehicle was disabled, trapping Schofield's armored personnel carrier. Schofield was killed while carrying a comrade to safety; he was posthumously awarded the Silver Star for his actions.

Schofield was a 1964 graduate of Quincy High School; dozens of his classmates were on hand as the square at Adams Street and Alrick Road was dedicated in his memory. The Class of 1964 presented a Quincy High senior a $500 scholarship in 2014 in Schofield's memory and raised $700 for the Wounded Warrior Project at the 50th reunion in November 2014.

Robert Molla III. a relative of Schofield, asked the crowd to remember him whenever they pass by the corner.

"Forty years ago today, the United States military involvement in Vietnam officially ended with the evacuation of Saigon. Forty years ago, 58,200 U.S. troops and more than 1.3 million others – both civilian and military – lost their lives in the war," Molla said.

"Forty years is a long time and since then memories of Vietnam and of the turbulent 1960s and '70s have begun to fade. We're grateful that this son of Quincy, Mass., First Lieutenant, Purple Heart and Silver Star recipient Alfred Vincent Schofield, who grew up here, who went to school here, who started a family here has not been forgotten and that he is being honored here today.

"Please remember Al and his courage whenever you pass by this corner. I hope he inspires you as much as he inspires us."

Schofield was captain of the Quincy High soccer team his senior. Quincy High soccer coach Mark Spendlove and his team's four captains attended the ceremony; they will dedicate their season to Schofield next fall.

"I see the armed forces as the ultimate team," Spendlove said. "You depend on your teammates and when it mattered Lieutenant Schofield was the ultimate teammate on the day he laid his life down for his team. That's what for me resonates more than anything. We try and enforce above anything to be a good teammate. Clearly, Lieutenant Schofield was a great teammate."

Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, presented a $500 check to Spendlove for the soccer program on behalf of House Majority Leader Ron Mariano. Mariano, Norton explained, was friends with Schofield and wanted to do something in his memory.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, the chairwoman of the council's veterans committee, said she has the greatest respect for those who veterans who served in the military and those who did not make it home.

"Any remarks I could make wouldn't add to the wonderful outpouring of support we see here today, but I will say this: As a new mother of two boys it's amazing to me that mothers and fathers send their sons off to do our bidding to make sure this country is safe and we're all safe," Hughes said. "I just have the greatest respect for those who are still with us today and those who have passed and made the ultimate sacrifice."

"Alfred Schofield was a hero in every sense," Rep. Tackey Chan added. "But more importantly he was a father, he was a son,

Marissa Monaco Runs Boston Marathon For Charity, Mother

By TREVOR WENNERS

Marissa Monaco, a former Quincy Sun news carrier and Quincy High School graduate, ran the Boston Marathon on April 20 as part of the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center Team.

Marissa's mother, Linda Monaco, was diagnosed with lung cancer in March 2014 and has been receiving treatment at The Cancer Center at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

"When my mom was diagnosed I was running a lot and realized that life is unpredictable so now was as good a time as any if I was going to do it," said Marissa who graduated from Quincy High School in 2006. "I then heard about the BIDMC Marathon charity team and it all kind of fell into place. To be able to raise money and give back for my mom, to be able to run the Boston Marathon that I grew up watching, and to be able to come home and experience all of that right around the one-year anniversary of my mom's diagnosis was the motivation I needed to run the 26.2."

In high school, Marissa played varsity soccer for four years, varsity tennis freshman year and varsity lacrosse for three seasons. She is a 2010 graduate of Babson College where she played varsity lacrosse for four years and received a bachelor's of science degree in global business management. She previously ran a half marathon in October

Belcher Backs NQ To 12-9 Win Over PN

By BILL GRIFFIN

GIRLS LACROSSE

Few players influence a match more than a goal keeper, and few goal keepers influence a match as much as senior Marguerite Belcher did for North Quincy against Plymouth North last week.

Belcher made 19 saves, 13 in the second half, and seven in final six minutes. Those are eye-popping numbers, but they tell only a small part of the tale. The saves were of the highest quality. More than half came off free shots and clear, point-blank chances directly in front of her cage.

And she was clutch. She made her most difficult saves when her team needed them the most en route to leading the Red Raiders to an important 12-9 decision over Plymouth North at the stadium Thursday evening.

"I thought we played very well in all phases of the game, but Marguerite was phenomenal," said coach Meg Therrien whose club went to 5-6 and stayed in the chase for a tournament berth. "She was on top of her game and she was involved every second. When she wasn't making saves, she was directing the defense. She saved the game for us."

There was, of course, more than Belcher. Junior Marissa McGue scored five goals which raised her total to 25 in a season when her exceptional athletic gifts and endless hustle have made her one of the finest payers in the Patriot League.

McGue scored on everything from power moves from behind the net to quicksliver rushes through the middle to free shots to a reverse, lefty finish. She controls a match for long stretches with her quickness and strength. She is not only a rare three-sport athlete, she is a three-sport athlete who has played to an all-league level in soccer, basketball and lacrosse.

"Her instincts are so good. She reacts to something almost before it happens," said Therrien.

Molly Minton and Abby Koch anchored a defensive line which locked on to attackers, marked them religiously and gave Belcher a clear view to make her saves. Molly Kate Cannon and Kara Carchedi not only were solid on the backline, but also made strong, fast rushes up the wings to move the Red Raiders from offense to defense.

"Our defensive communication was excellent," said Therrien. "We were focused. The defense stuck to their attacker and when it was time to switch, we did. Molly Kate and Kara gave us good rushes well."

Sara Tsan scored twice while Ciara Forde (her 21st of the season), Kiera Clifford, Aislinn Collins and Savannah Flynn also had goals for North. Carchedi had the goal of the game with a full-field rush and a high finish which gave North an 8-5 lead early in the third.

More than just scoring, North's offense controlled the pace and the clock. When Belcher and her defense needed a break, McGue, Clifford, and Forde shifted to the defensive line and out-fought Plymouth for possession. They then worked with Flynn, Tsan, Kerin Coleman, Katie Sautter and Charlotte Chretian cycling the ball, keeping it away from the Eagles and allowing Belcher and the defense to refresh and regroup.

Sometimes the Red Raiders scored off the possession. Sometimes they didn't. It almost didn't matter. In each case, the offensive patience allowed North to take back control of the match.

"That's something we've worked a lot in practice," said Therrien. "We want our offense to be able to slow the game down and control the ball when we need to."

But mostly, there was Belcher. Nineteen saves is an unusually high amount of saves for a winning goalie in a lacrosse match. Also, it wasn't so much how many saves Belcher made, but when she made them.

Late in the first half, the Eagles had scored twice to tie it at 4-4 and were pressing hard for the lead going into halftime. In the final three minutes, Belcher was steady and sure, stopping a free shot and two blue-chip chances in front of the net.

The offense fed off this. McGue picked the far corner off a great setup from Forde with 12 seconds left in the half, and it was North, not Plymouth, who was up 5-4 at intermission. The reason? Belcher made the big saves.

"A team can take inspiration from a great save and that happened several times from Marguerite," said Therrien. The Red Raiders grabbed a three-goal lead early in the second half on scores by Clifford and Tsan and never relinquished it.

In the final minutes of the match, North was protecting a two-goal lead. Plymouth crashed and crashed the net. There were free shots. There were golden chances. There were rebounds and deflections. Belcher never gave an inch. She was the portrait of a poised, senior goalie – a three-year starter – who had seen all this countless times. Her skills, her positioning, her quickness were there, but it was her calm and confidence that was most striking. She knew what she was doing.

"I think experience does help," said Belcher. "It helps me know how to direct the defense. I know when the other team is going to crash and when they're going to shoot. I know they're going to keep coming and I just stay focused on what is in front of me."

And the saves were far from routine. She stopped seven free shots in the match, four in the final seven minutes. She stopped them with her stick, feet, arms, and, amazingly, she stopped one on a quick grab with her glove. This was on a rocket of a lacrosse ball zipping in from a range of mere feet. And there were a fistful of clear chances from attackers planted in front of the net which Belcher not only stopped, but also controlled and sent the other way.

"It's funny. I almost don't mind free shots because I have a chance to get set," she said. "Our goalie coach has worked with me on reading body language and it's been a big help. It gives a better read on where the shooter is going to go. Mostly, you have to be conscious of the low shot and the shot to the off side."

"She's fearless. She'll throw her body at anything," smiled Therrien.

Belcher is one of six seniors on the team. As North enters the stretch run with a good shot at the tournament, each game becomes more precious. It his her last trip down this road.

"It means a lot because I'm playing with all my friends," said Belcher. "We're close. I'll be sad when it's over."

Quincy Hosts Fitter, Faster Swim Clinics

The Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy recently hosted a Fitter and Faster swimming stroke clinic.

"I can't thank Tim Mulvihill, Director of Competitive Swimming for the South Shore YMCA Strypers (Hanover and Quincy branches), enough for the partnership between the YMCA and Quincy Public Schools for promoting swimming on the South Shore," said Quincy/North Quincy head swim coach Bob McGillicuddy.

Swimmers were mentored by two 2012 Olympians including Kara Lynn Joyce and Scott Weltz. Joyce has been a member of three Olympic teams over which time she has won four medals in addition to earning nine individual NCAA titles. Weltz won the 2012 Olympic trials in the 200-yard breaststroke clocking 2:09.01.

During the clinic, Joyce noticed that a swimmer was afraid to dive off the starting block. Remembering how difficult it is to jump off the block for the first time, she took them aside for a private conversation and lesson.

YMCA, Quincy Public Schools 'Learn To Swim' Program

The South Shore YMCA and Quincy Public Schools have collaborated to produce the "Learn to Swim" program.

Now in its third year, the Learn to Swim program offers free swimming lessons to some of QPS's second, third and fourth grade students. This year's program will help over 250 QPS students learn to swim, focusing on basic skills and water safety for those who would not be comfortable in deep water without a flotation device.

The partnership between the YMCA and QPS has helped beginning swimmers develop lifelong skills in the pool. The South Shore YMCA also provides about 30 Germantown Neighborhood Center students free swim lessons once per week during the school year.

Water safety education does not only take place in the pool; through the American Red Cross's "Whale Tails" program, schools throughout the South Shore enlist South Shore YMCA swim instructors to educate grades K-5 about water safety within the classroom. Thee educational sessions include interactive activities and videos that offer life-saving knowledge and tips about water safety that are relatable and understandable to each age group.

As part of National Water Safety Month in May, the South Shore YMCA recommends children and adults practice the following safety tips when in and around the water:

- Only swim when and where there is a lifeguard on duty; never swim alone.
- Adults should constantly and actively watch their children.
- Inexperienced or non-swimmers should wear a Coast Guard-approved life jacket.
- Parents or guardians of young children should be within arm's reach.

Families interested in learning more about the South Shore YMCA's swim programs can contact Stephanie Higgins, Senior Director of Aquatics, South Shore YMCA Emilson Branch, or visit www.ssymca.org.

TREATING DIZZINESS

When patients feel that their heads are spinning upon repositioning their heads or getting up from a lying position, it is often due to a condition known as "benign paroxysmal positional vertigo" (BPPV). This common disorder of the inner ear's vestibular (balance) system occurs when calcium crystals that normally reside in the three semi-circular canals of the inner ear become dislodged. Instead of moving as they normally would to signal the brain to balance the body properly, they send a false signal to the brain that causes "vertigo" (dizziness). Fortunately, many chiropractors are versed in a treatment called the "Epley maneuver," which involves guiding the head through a series of controlled movements that reposition the loose crystals and relieve dizziness.

We have everything you need to make your life easier as you begin your vertigo treatment plan. At Family Practice of Chiropractic, you'll find an experienced and helpful staff of health care professionals dedicated to serving your health care needs. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. If your problem is a chiropractic condition, we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The Epley and similar Semont maneuvers often improve (or cure) benign paroxysmal positional vertigo (BPPV) with only one treatment.

Red Raiders Softball Bows To Fontbonne

By BILL GRIFFIN

A wise man once said: A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step.

North Quincy's softball team is building a club with eight freshmen and three sophomores. The Red Raiders have taken several steps forward. And they took a couple of giant ones with an impressive performance against a talented Fontbonne team at Mitchell-McCoy Field Saturday morning.

Liz Will pitched a complete game and Alanna Zack had two hits and three RBI to lead the Ducks to an 8-3 non-league win over North Quincy who played solid softball against a good team. The Ducks are 7-4 on the season and play out of their rugged Catholic Conference.

"I was happy with the way we played. This is the type of game that we have been playing lately. We're competitive," said North Quincy coach Jim Connor. "The first time we played Fontbonne, they beat us by the slaughter rule. We gave them a good game today and we were missing three starters. That shows how much we've improved."

The first star goes to North's junior catcher Sarah Franklin who was easily the best player on the field. She was 4-4 with two doubles. In the seventh she drilled a shot which hit the base of the fence in center field on the fly. She had six hits in her last two games. She threw out a base-stealer. She picked off three runners. Twice she blocked the plate and got North tough outs at home. It was a special game by a special player.

"Sarah has done everything for us both hitting and behind the plate," said Connor. "She's a returning all-league player. She'll play college softball one day."

Freshman Johanna Douglas took over on the mound in the second innings for Mia Sapienza who had seen considerable work in Friday's doubleheader against Pembroke. It was Douglas' varsity debut and she did just fine. She struck out two and gave just four earned runs in six innings of work.

She fielded her position well, chalking up three assists including a fine grab of a hot smash up the middle to rob Jessica Olivieri of a hit in the fifth. Douglas also chipped in with a single and a walk at the plate.

"She had no idea she was going to pitch before the game, and I thought she was excellent," said Connor. "She's a natural second baseman, so she knows how to field the position."

The Red Raiders rapped out 10 hits against a good pitcher. Will threw hard for Fontbonne. Dana Graselli, who had three hits in the the second game of the doubleheader against Pembroke, had a single and two RBI. Nancy Aimola had a pair of hits. Madison Hally had a single and an RBI.

Jen Luo added a single. Luo, Sapienza and Rachel Dunphy scored runs for the Red Raiders.

"Dana has really improved since the beginning of the year. The last few games, she has swung the bat really well," said Connor.

And North made the plays in the field. Aimola in left and Lindsay Delaney in center handled several outfield chances really. Delaney and Sapienza combined to cut down a runner at the plate on an 8-4-2 relay. Jessie Caldwell grabbed two hard grounders at third and threw out a runner at the plate.

Grasselli had a fine game with her footwork and stretches at first base. Hally went to her right at short to turn a ground ball into an out with runners on second and third and with two outs in the fourth. The progress is clear. They are well along on their journey to becoming a good softball team.

"We're miles better than we were last year and we're miles better than we were at the start of the season," said Connor. "Our pitchers are all freshman, so they pitch to contact. We've improved making the plays behind them. As our pitchers mature and get more strikeouts, it will take the pressure off our defense."

Fontbonne scored twice in the first. North tied it on Grasselli's two RBI in the bottom half of the inning. The Ducks scored one in the second, two in the third, one in the fourth and single runs in the sixth and seventh. North scored in the sixth on singles by Luo, Aimola and Hally.

"It's a matter of a getting a hit when we need it," said Connor. "A win would be big for us. It would change our whole mind-set. Hopefully, we have one coming soon."

For veterans like Hally, it has been a teaching as well as a learning experience over the past two years. Hally is a three-year starter at short and a two-year captain. She knows how to play the game and she has discovered that the best way to learn more about something is to teach it.

"I've worked a lot with the freshmen," said Hally. "We had a lot of indoor time together because of all the snow and cancellations. We worked on getting around on the ball. When we got outside, I found out that it had helped me as well."

"Maddy is a great leader," said Connor. "She is the glue to the team and she always keeps the chemistry positive. The young girls can look at her and see what a varsity player should be."

Hally is hitting over .300 and plays a sold shortstop. It is her senior year, her last trip down this road. Players with her talent level are playing for league titles and tournament bids. Hally would not trade places with any of them.

"For me the whole thing is the atmosphere. We get along and we have fun," she said. "It's a different bond with all the young players this year, but it's still strong. We communicate and we get better. I work with them on postioning and knowing what base to throw to before the ball is hit.

"It's been a good experience for me. High school is about getting involved in things. I want to look back and have memories. I'll remember the laughs and good times. My memories of this team will be happy ones because everyone is positive. After every game, we talk about something positive we can do for our next game. I'll always remember that."

North is at Scituate Thursday and at Hanover Friday. The Red Raiders host Plymouth South Monday.

Presidents Baseball Falls To Whitman-Hanson

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was just one piece of the puzzle missing.

Junior lefty Cody Desmond pitched six strong innings. For the most part, the defense was solid, and in one important moment, it was exceptional. Quincy ran the bases well. The only issue was hitting, and more specifically, the lack of a big hit when the Presidents had an early chance to take control of the game..

Whitman-Hanson's Jayson Keenan escaped a huge first inning threat and pitched the Panthers to a 5-2 win over Quincy in a Patriot League contest at Adams Field Friday afternoon.

"The kids are working hard, but we're not scoring a lot of runs," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan. "We seem to have trouble stringing hits together or getting the hit we need when we have a good chance to put together a big inning."

In other action last week, senior righty Greg Paulo pitched a brilliant two-hitter and struck out nine to lead Quincy past Duxbury, 3-0. Hanover defeated the Presidents last Wednesday, 6-1.

"That was the best game Greg Paulo has pitched in four years at Quincy High. He was excellent. It was our ace against their ace and Greg won the battle," said Bryan.

After W-H went up, 1-0 in the top of the first, Quincy had a golden chance in the home half of the inning. The red-hot Tyler Beach singled, stole second and scored on an infield bouncer by Bobby Salvucci. David Cooper beat out an infield hit. Cooper and Salvucci each stole a base.

The Presidents were three batters into the game and they had a run, two hits and three stolen bases. Not a bad start. Desmond walked to load the bases with nobody out. One or two hits would give Desmond a comfortable lead with which to work.

However, Keenan finished the threat with a double play and a strikeout. As frequently happens when a team misses a an opportunity in the early innings, it does not come their way again. Quincy had one hit – a third-inning single by Salvucci – the rest of the game and the Panthers put up just enough offense to win the game.

"I thought we put the bat on the ball against their pitcher, and we ran the bases well. We missed that chance in the first inning, and it hurt us," said Bryan.

Desmond pitched well enough to win most games. He threw hard and mixed in a dipping curveball which had serious drop on it. In six innings, he gave five hits, just two earned runs, struck out ten and walked six. At times, he was overpowering, and he finished strong, retiring the last seven batters he faced.

He also used an excellent pickoff move which caught two Whitman-Hanson base runners.

"Cody threw the ball well," said Bryan. "He's has a good fastball and his curve has good movement on it. He controls the running game with his pickoff move. When he throws consistent strikes, he's a good pitcher."

Desmond was also tough with men on base. He worked free from bases-loaded threats in the second and third with big assists from the defense. In the second, Desmond ended the inning by striking out Matt Donovan on a curve which bit into the the dirt. Catcher Joe Ferracane made a fine block and tagged home to end the threat.

In the third with the bases loaded and two out, left-fielder Alex Linskey made a running, knee-high grab of a line drive by Ryan Amado to finish the inning and keep the score tied at 1-1.

"That was a great catch by Linskey," said Bryan. "It saved two or three runs."

The Panthers went up, 3-1 with two in the fourth. Quincy answered with one in the sixth. Cooper and Desmond walked. They moved to second and third on a wild pitch. Linskey drove a sacrifice fly to deep right to cut it to 3-2, but reliever Mike Gould finished the threat with an infield pop-out.

W-H ended the scoring with a pair of unearned runs in the top of the seventh.

The highlight of the week was Paulo's shutout against Duxbury. He built on the four perfect innings he threw against North and stretched his scoreless streak to 11 innings. He threw hard, used his curveball well, got ahead early in the count and walked nobody. He is a legitimate ace.

"I had a good fastball and I threw a lot of first-pitch strikes," said Paulo. "That's the key for me. If I get ahead, I can go to my other pitches and keep the hitters off balance. My defense also played great behind me."

Beach made a fine charge and throw from short on a dribbler to end a Duxbury threat. Desmond roamed and caught everything in center. Beach and Salvucci made good plays on difficult popups on a windy day. Once again, Ferracane did good work on balls in the dirt behind the plate.

"The play Tyler made on the ground ball was excellent," said Bryan.

Beach was also the offensive star of the week with eight hits in three games.

"He's starting to come along and hit the ball well," said Bryan.

Against Duxbury, Beach had three hits and scored a run. Brendan Collins had two hits and a run scored, and Chris Mann had a single and scored a run.

Beach had three hits and scored a run against Hanover.

Season Of Improvement For NQ Girls Tennis Team

By BILL GRIFFIN

It has been a season of improvement and good feelings for North Quincy's girls tennis team.

Sophomore Tia McKee has had a breakout season at No. 1 singles. She has played the top players on the top teams in the Patriot League which frequently features the best in the state. She has pushed good players to the limit, showed solid strokes on both the backhand and forehand, and learned how to play the game at a high level which offers promise for a bright future.

Senior captain Cindy Chau is, in the words of her coach, a human backboard. She never gives up on a point. She will do anything to get the ball back and keep the point alive. Senior captain Amanda Huang is a smart, effective tactician at No. 3 singles.

Senior Emily Luu and junior Geri Hu are solid both at the baseline and at the net at No. 1 doubles. Donna Chen, Nadia Lymswan, Lisa Chen and Emily Chen give the Red Raiders depth and have rotated at the No. 2 doubles spot.

"I think it's been a good season so far. It's a very tough league and we've been competitive," said coach Francesca Quintero. "The kids have worked hard and we've been right in the mix in most of of our matches. We've had a couple that were decided by a single point that could have easily gone either way."

Hanover defeated North, 5-0 Monday afternoon at the Bishop Park courts, but there were bright spots for the Red Raiders.

McKee played an excellent match against Hanover's No. 1 Greta Barry. Barry is a gifted, experienced player, but McKee pushed her hard before falling, 7-6, 6-4. McKee is quick and she hits with pace. She works well on the baseline. Mostly importantly, she never gave in to her favored opponent and was within a few points of forcing a third set.

"Tia has all the tools, but what I like best about her is a she always has a positive attitude," said Quintero. "She has played against some really top players, and no matter what happens on the court, she is always upbeat. She'll add more weapons to her game as she matures."

It is a learning experience.

"You get better by playing against the best, and that's what I've done this year," said McKee.

Hanover's Chrissy Greco defeated Chau, 6-2-, 6-2, but the score does not show how hard Chau battled.

Several of the points lasted longer than a night at the opera. Chau never quit on the ball, and somehow managed to send back shots which seemed like certain winners. She also showed a good cross-court finish and a backhand volley at the net.

"I started with doubles, so I am comfortable at the net," said Chau. "I'm willing to do anything to send the ball back over the net. I think if you're willing to do that, it can surprise an opponent. I try to get as many back as possible until I can get an easy ball or force a mistake."

Huang lost a 6-2, 2-6, 6-3 decision. She played a smart match, changing speeds and moving her opponent around the court.

"She's probably our best player tactically," said Quintero. "She uses both the drive and slice. She hits a variety of shots. She's a very smart player."

Luu and Hu also won a set before falling 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

"I put them together in the third match and they just clicked," said Quintero. "They get to a lot of balls, and they both have a good, all-around game."

Donna Chen and Lymswan lost, 6-4, 6-3. They have combined with Lisa Chen and Emily Chen to give North a good mix at second doubles.

"They are all solid players. There's no weak link. They give us good depth," said Quintero.

Chau is a good example of the progress North's players have made. She took up tennis in high school, and she has worked her way to No. 2 singles. She is pleased with her game, and she is even happier to be playing with her teammates and for her coach.

"We're all about the same skill level, so it's fun practicing with each other," she said. "We don't have a lot of experience, but we enjoy each other and I think we play with a lot of heart. We're a close team, and we all have improved.

"I think a lot of the credit goes to our coach. She's so supportive in everything she says and does. She's willing to give up part of her weekend to work with us and give us a chance to hit. We all enjoy playing for her."

North (2-7) is at Scituate Thursday and hosts Plymouth South Monday.

Marissa Monaco Runs Boston Marathon

2013 and went 20 miles during a training run.

"I started training in late December, and the BIDMC team has a coach and training plans for you to follow," said Marissa. "The majority of my training was around running with some yoga and cross training in between. I also have a bum ankle so (I) had to mix in (physical therapy) appointments for the second half of my training. I was lucky living in San Francisco that the weather accommodated outdoor running during the entire training and I wasn't lacking for hills to practice for Heartbreak."

The 119th running of the Boston Marathon is special to Marissa because she was able to take part in it and raise money for the Cancer Center Fund. She was able to run for her mother and give back to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. Marissa grew up with some positive memories of the event.

"I grew up going to the marathon and loving Marathon Monday," she said. "I can remember standing along the course as a kid and cheering away for elites and regular runners alike. I always thought it was something I would like to experience; I just didn't think I'd ever want to actually run 26.2 miles for any reason. I got into running very casually in the last few years and after 2013 I started to think it really was something I wanted to do, but I needed it to be for the right reasons."

Marissa had a personal goal to raise $10,000 dollars and was able to surpass that amount. All of the money she raised goes to The Cancer Center at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

The money will be used for cancer research.

Linda's fight has been evident throughout the process and she has been helping others by encouraging people to donate money to the research center at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

"The way she handled the diagnosis and treatment with courage, positivity, and grace, made me incredibly proud and reminded me to do the same in all aspects of life," said Marissa. "If she can be happy when fighting cancer, then I can be happy when things don't go my way or I'm having a bad day."

Marissa attended Bernazzani Elementary School and Central Middle School in Quincy. She talked about her emotions as she neared the finish line.

"I honestly felt probably at my best for the last two miles because I was finally at the point where I knew I was going to finish the Boston Marathon," she said. "A couple hundred yards from the finish was one of my best friends from childhood so I got to run over and share it with him and then crossing the finish line was pretty incredible, hearing them announce your name over the loud speaker. My mom and aunt had finish line passes so they were in the stands right at the finish which was really special. It was a great end to a long journey."

Marissa spoke about the quality of the care her mother received at BIDMC and spoke about how much that motivated her to run.

"My main objective was to be able to give back," she said. "(Beth Israel) did so much for my mom, provided world class care, and treated her like a human being. It gave us all peace of mind to know that my mom was in good hands. I saw the opportunity to give back while also working towards a personal goal, and even though I had no idea what I was getting into with running a marathon, I knew I had to go for it."

Track Teams Highlights

Looks can be deceiving in a track meet. A team can look like its racking up points only to lose them in the field events which are less visible to the casual observer. Such was to case in a 89-51 loss to Pembroke last week at Faxon Field.

North girls took victories in the 400, 800, and mile, with 2nds in the 100 and 400 hurdles but still came away with the loss. So strong are the Pembroke Titans that freshman Cora Cuett's 27.5 state qualifying personal best in the 200 only netted her 4th. Likewise Isabel Flaherty's 17.8 in the hurdles only gave her a close third. Pembroke arrived with three bus loads compared to Norths 30 among both genders.

"Pembroke is one of the vanguard programs of the state," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "They won their division in the relays indoors and out last year and are a senior laden team." Likewise, North is mostly freshmen and sophomores with the exception of Junior Molly Donahue (win in the 800) and the Bryson twins (1-2 in the mile). Melody Umoren took 2nd in the shot, Tara Nguyen 2nd in the long jump and Flaherty 2nd in the high jump.

On the boys side a 118-18 loss, Mike Mullaney's come-from-behind victory in the mile brought the crowd to its feet with a 4:36 clocking. Devin Ganno turned in a PR in the 200: 25.7 and Dimitri LeGaspi threw the javelin 99'8" fir the few highlights for the undermanned and extremely young boys team.

At the MSTCA Invitationals held over the weekend, Mike Mullaney took 3rd in the two mile (9:49) and Jimmy Cannon clocked a 4:51 in th mile. Their meet took place at Greater New Bedford Voke.

At the girls edition, held at Somerville's Dilboy Stadium, Emily Bryson led the entire two mile running shoulder to shoulder with Milton's freshman phenom Bridget Mitchell, suddenly with a lap to go Emily blasted a 77 final lap and won going away with a 11:00 time. Sister Julia ran 11:44 for 8th, her final 200 meters was a blistering 3(seconds and nipped the fading Mitchell with 10 meter to go.

Melody Umoren placed 5th in the shot, Isabel Flaherty cleared 4'11" for 16th in an 80 girl field in the high jump, Mia Healy ran a respectable 13.47 in the 10(meters and Devin Hiltunen won her heat in the 400 with a 64.34.

This week the team travel to Scituate for their final road dual meet and will bring several relays to the Class B relays at Whitman Hanson Saturday.

Point Webster Gym George Dunn Hoop Tourney Champs

The City of Quincy Recreation Department's 2015 George Dunn Basketball Tournament Championship belongs to Point Webster Gym, as they rolled past Montclair gym to secure the title, 51-30.

The victory marks Point Webster's first title since 2011, and their third since 2008. Second-year coach Richard Turpin proudly hoisted the George Dunn Memorial Trophy and credited the win to his team's hard work and unselfishness.

Point Webster claimed the title using a balanced offensive attack, with three of their seven players scoring in double-digits. After a close first half, Point used a 32-point second half to pull away from Montclair.

Nick Manning led the Point attack, showing nice touch around the basket on several offensive put backs. He finished with 12 points.

Joey Cochran and Joey Dwyer each hit a pair of second half three-pointers that quieted a late Montclair comeback and finished with 11 and 10 points, respectively. Ryan Turpin, younger brother of coach Richard, and Davon Jones shared ball-handing duties, each showing great court vision and the ability to get to the rim. Turpin and Jones finished with six points apiece.

Patrick Cook and Joey Dwyer rounded out the scoring for the Champions, with Cook scoring four points and Quinn adding two to go along with fierce defense.

Montclair fell behind early in the game, but never threw in the towel, continuing to battle until the final whistle. Devlin St. Marie hit 6 three-pointers on his way to 18 points in the final game of his impressive tournament run. St. Marie hit at least 4 three-pointers and scored at least 14 in each game he played in one of the more memorable performances in recent history.

Alan Chen added four points and kept several plays alive by beating Point players to balls on the offensive end of the court. Anthony Demers, Declan Murphy and Dylan Richardson played well for Montclair, moving the ball on offense and playing tight defense on the Point Webster guards. They each finished with two points.

Matt Deng continued his good work on the boards and finished a key second-half put back on an offensive rebound. Aiden Golden and Carlos Aquino each provided great energy off the bench when their team needed it the most. Coach Paul Cunniff said he was proud of the sportsmanship and heart displayed by his team and congratulated Point Webster on their victory.

In previous tournament action, Point Webster met up with Atlantic gym in the semi-finals, using a 45-point first half to cruise to a 65-50 win. Joey Dwyer poured in 21, including 5 three-pointers for the eventual champs.

Atlantic played hard the entire game, even cutting a 20-point half time deficit to single digits late in the second half. Jackie Liang led all Atlantic scorers with 11 points, Will Zhang hit 3 from long distance to finish with nine, and Jason Mei scored his seven points in the second half to keep Atlantic in it.

Kevin Tran and Andrew Huang each showed off their smooth shooting stroke and finished with six apiece.

Zi Zhang and Dan Mei grabbed some timely rebounds and pushed the ball up the court during Atlantic's second half comeback, finishing with five and four points. Steven Yang scored the other two points for Atlantic on a circus shot early in the second half that ignited a run, and Wesley Mei and Kevin Wu played key defensive roles off the bench. Veteran Joe MacRitchie coached the Atlantic team and wished Point well in the championship.

In the other semi-final game, Montclair snuck by two-time defending champs Snug Harbor, using a late go-ahead layup by Devlin St. Marie and tough defense on the other end to hold on to a 48-46 victory. On top of the game winner, St. Marie added 4 threes, 3 of which came in the second half. He finished with 14 points.

Big man Abraham Hoti, who used strong moves around the hoop to finish with nine points, led Snug Harbor. Reda Laftih and John Mei each scored six-points, Curtis Calley, Mike McDonald, Sean Halleron, and Frankie Nunziato each hit a pair of baskets to finish with four points.

Nick Locken hit a momentum swinging three in the second half, and Alex Linskey scored a tough layup in traffic for his two points. Scotty McGloin and Alex Leo gave Montclair fits on the offensive glass, creating second chance opportunities for Snug Harbor. James Egan and Matt Adams both did a great job finding teammates for easy baskets in transition. Rookie Steve Scolaro coached Snug Harbor.

In a first round match-up, Montclair played Atherton Hough, coming away with a 75-37 victory. Montclair went crazy from the three-point line in this game, hitting 14 from long range, with St. Marie hitting five and Declan Murphy connecting three times. Many of these opportunities were caused by a strong offensive rebounding performance by Steven Chen, who also added two points.

After a slow first half, Atherton played much better in the second, led by Joe Boddie, who scored 11 second half points, finishing with 13. John Costello hit 3 threes on his way to an 11 point outing, and Bernie VanTassell powered his way inside to nine points.

David Leuchte scored a pair of baskets and handed out several assists, finishing with four points. Marc Ghossoub played extremely well defensively, constantly outhustling everyone else on the court to get to loose balls. Coach Eddie Grennon manned the Atherton Hough sideline.

The George Dunn Tournament is played each year to mark the conclusion of the winter open-gym program that is supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department from November to April. The tournament is over 50 years old, and in 1997 was named for longtime Recreation Supervisor and Youth Coach, George Dunn, who passed away at an early age from cancer.

Participants represent the neighborhood gyms that they attend, and come from public, private and parochial schools. Athletes cannot participate in the tournament if they played on a high school varsity team during the winter season.

Quincy's Dunford Tapped As Joint Chiefs Chairman

and Diplomacy at Tufts University in Medford. He is a graduate of the U.S. Army Ranger School, Marine Corps Amphibious Warfare School, and the Army War College.

Obama called Dunford the definition of "Boston Strong" when he nominated him as the chairman of the Joint Chiefs and called him one of the military's most highly regarded strategists.

"General Joe Dunford is one of the most admired officers in our military. A native of Boston, Joe is the very definition of 'Boston Strong,'" the President said.

"The son of a retired Boston police officer and Marine veteran of Korea, Joe followed in his father's footsteps and has distinguished himself through nearly 40 years of military service. He's commanded Marines in the field, from the platoon level to a Marine Expeditionary Force. During the invasion of Iraq, he led Marines in the charge to Baghdad.

"Given his combat experience, I was proud to nominate Joe as the commander of American and coalition forces in Afghanistan. I've had a chance to work with him. I have been extraordinarily impressed by Joe – from the Situation Room, where he helped to shape our enduring commitment to Afghanistan, to my visit last year to Bagram, where I saw his leadership firsthand.

"I know Joe. I trust him. He's already proven his ability to give me his unvarnished military advice based on his experience on the ground. Under his steady hand, we've achieved key milestones, including the transition to Afghan responsibility for security, historic Afghan elections, and the drawdown of U.S. forces – setting the stage for our combat mission there.

"So Joe is a proven leader of our joint force, including our troops in Afghanistan, who he served Christmas dinner to. He's one of our military's most highly regarded strategic thinkers. He's known and respected by our allies, by members of Congress – on both sides of the aisle – and by colleagues across our government. He's also tireless. His staff has been known to carry around a voice recorder to keep up with his commands and new ideas.

"He just began his service as commandant of his beloved Marine Corps. So, Joe, I appreciate your willingness to take on this new assignment. I think the only downside in my book is, as a White Sox fan, there is yet another Red Sox fan who I'm going to have to be dealing with. And I want to thank you and your wife, Ellyn, for your continued service."

U.S. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ), the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Dunford was a "strong choice" to be the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"I extend my congratulations to General Joseph Dunford, General Paul Selva, and each of their families on their nominations to be chairman and vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," McCain said in a statement.

"In addition to his leadership of the Marine Corps, General Dunford's exemplary service in Iraq and Afghanistan makes him a strong choice as we confront threats to stability and peace in both countries and throughout the region. General Selva's extensive experience as an operational and strategic leader would be a welcome addition to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"The Senate Armed Services Committee will give these nominations prompt and thorough consideration."

If confirmed, Dunford would replace Army Gen. Martin Dempsey as the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on Oct. 1 of this year. Dempsey was first appointed chairman in 2011.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA (third from right) nominated Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr. (second from right) as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on May 5 at the Rose Garden. Dunford moved to Quincy at age 12 and attended the former St. Ann's School and B.C. High. Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

I'd like to convert my basement rec room into a wine cellar and tasting room. What do I need to consider for storing the wine? Any ideas to make the space stand out? Stan and Maria

BARBARA GRACEFFA

When it comes to storing wine, you must consider temperature, light, humidity, and vibration-and what you need to know is to avoid all four! Ideally, wine should be stored between 45-65 degrees, so work a wine refrigerator into your budget and plans. You can find small ones at your appliance store for less than $200 or splurge for a pricy EuroCave which has dual zones and can store hundreds of bottles. If you go with open shelving-lying the bottles on their sides, of course- window coverings are in order as light can adversely affect the quality and aging potential of wine. Vibration is also harmful to your fermented grapes, so keep the bottles away from mechanicals in your cellar. If your basement is humid, consider a dehumidifier so the corks don't dry out letting oxygen in, which can lead to mold.

Ok, now that you have these four things under control, you can have fun decorating the space. Look at pictures of winery tasting rooms or wine bars for inspiration. You might go for a chateau look with stucco walls or even a gentleman's club with nice paneling in rich dark colors and leather easy chairs. Create a grape arbor on the ceiling and weave vines between the slats. Cool chandeliers exist today in which you add your empty wine bottles or wine glasses. Pick up a whiskey barrel at Home Depot and add a clear Plexiglas top to create a nice cocktail table. Make sure you have space to pour your wine and to set out appetizers or desserts if you plan to entertain in your wine cellar. Do not forget storage for wine glasses and you might install a small sink for rinsing them. Cheers!

Bay State Community Services Buying Quincy Headquarters

MassDevelopment has issued a $2,533,500 tax-exempt bond on behalf of Bay State Community Services, Inc. (BSCS), a nonprofit human services agency based in Quincy. BSCS will use bond proceeds to buy a 20,100-square-foot, three story masonry office building near the downtown area of Quincy that the agency currently leases as its main office.

The headquarters, located at 1120 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was for many years the John F. Kennedy Health Center building.

For BSCS, officials said owning its building will ultimately result in significant cost savings that, in the long run, will benefit all of its programs and employees. Blue Hills Bank purchased the bond, which was supported by a MassDevelopment guarantee.

BSCS was formed in 1991 through the merger of five community-based agencies that support individual, family, and community empowerment through social, mental health, addiction, and correctional services. The agency is dedicated to improving the social functioning of adults, adolescents, and children within a framework that recognizes the primary importance of family and community. The agency is the South Shore's largest provider of child and family services.

"Agencies like Bay State Community Services, Inc. are critical to the Commonwealth, providing communities with much-needed social services and programs," said Marty Jones, MassDevelopment President and CEO. "MassDevelopment is happy to help the agency devote more resources to its essential work by enabling BSCS to buy its home."

"When Bay State Community Services moved into 1120 Hancock St. in 2014, we were honored to not only have restored the building in the structural sense, but to also have restored it to its original purpose as the first community health center in New England," said Daurice Cox, CEO, Bay State Community Services. "We never dreamed that one year later, with the guidance, support and encouragement of MassDevelopment, we would be able to purchase this historical landmark building and officially call it our home. Owning the building allows us to focus our valuable resources on directly assisting our youth, families and communities. BSCS is so proud to assist over 3,000 individuals and families throughout the greater South Shore each year."

Top 5 Home Upgrades

What upgrades to our house will pay off the most in the long run? -- Karl V., Melrose, Massachusetts

Many people think that remodeling the kitchen is an expense they can fully recoup (in terms of home value or resale value), but that is not necessarily the case. According to Remodeling Magazine, which puts out a Cost vs. Value chart each year on home remodeling, a major kitchen remodel averaging $56,768 will recoup 67.8 percent of that cost, or just $38,485.

However, a number of indoor and outdoor projects will increase the value of your home. Here are five projects on the midrange cost scale that will provide the biggest return for your remodeling investment:

1. Entry door: Replacing your entry door with a steel door will recoup 101.8 percent of the cost. (Replacing it with a fiberglass door will return 72 percent.)

2. Veneer: Replacing the bottom third of your home's exterior siding with manufactured stone veneer will recoup 92.2 percent of the cost.

3. Garage door: Replacing your garage door will recoup 88.4 percent of the cost.

4. Siding replacement: Adding vinyl siding to your home's exterior will recoup 80.7 percent of the cost.

5. Wooden deck: Adding or expanding a wooden deck will recoup 80.5 percent of the cost.

Other projects that have a higher chance of recouping their cost include a minor (below $20,000) kitchen remodel (79.3 percent), wood window replacement (78.8 percent) or converting part of your attic to a bedroom (77.2 percent). Remodeling your bathroom will recoup 70 percent of its cost.

So, when putting together a remodeling project list, take their lasting value into account. You may decide to downscale that ambitious kitchen or bathroom remodel and shift some of the budget to your home's exterior elements.

TIP: Wood or vinyl windows? Carefully consider the merits of both before deciding on replacement windows. For example, wood windows are aesthetically pleasing, but vinyl windows require almost no maintenance.

Norfolk County Real Estate Market Report For April

Sales Volume Up, Average Price Flat

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports robust increases in total volume of real estate sales and average real estate sales price but a relatively flat number of real estate sales in the Norfolk County real estate market for April 2015.

"The April 2015 real estate figures for Norfolk County clearly show a seller's market with average sale price of commercial and residential property increasing year over year by 23% to $776,760. Total volume of commercial and residential sales increased 16% to $537 million compared to April 2014 numbers.

"However," O'Donnell continued, "the total number of real estate sales only increased by 1% compared to one year ago. This is due to continuing issues with real estate inventory.

"Buyers in Norfolk County are competing amongst themselves for a limited number of properties. One of the issues causing the reduced inventory is the harsh winter that was experienced resulting in some homeowners having to make significant repairs to their properties before putting them on the market. Good news for the home improvement industry but bad news for real estate buyers; particularly first time buyers," O'Donnell said.

A continuing bright spot has been the steady recovery of the mortgage market. Total number of mortgages recorded increased 36% compared to the same time last year. Total mortgage indebtedness also increased 32% year over year.

"The mortgage numbers are a clear indication of an improving economy in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said. "Homeowners are taking advantage of increased equity in their homes to access financing for home improvements and other critical needs."

Homestead recordings, which provide limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence up to $500,000, increased 2% from April 2014 to April 2015. A total of 905 Homesteads were recorded versus 888 during this comparative time period. Information regarding the Homestead Act can found on the Registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Foreclosure activity in Norfolk County showed signs of improvement. The Notices to Foreclose recordings totaled 36 for April compared to 47 filings in April 2014. Foreclosure deeds recordings were also flat in April 2015. 16 foreclosure deeds were recorded during the month, the same number as April 2014.

"While one foreclosure deed is one too many, the reduced number of Notice to Foreclose filings is a sign that at least in Norfolk County, the worst of the foreclosure crisis recently experienced appears to be behind us," O'Donnell said. "With that said, my office continues to watch these numbers closely and work with other government agencies and programs to assist homeowners who have received a Notice of Foreclosure."

O'Donnell concluded, "Without question, the total real estate sales number for April 2015 was less than expected. However, I am a firm believer this number will improve once inventory levels rise as the weather continues to improve and in some cases, homeowners complete necessary repairs to their residences caused by the harsh winter months. Norfolk County continues to be a destination location for individuals to live and work."

O'Donnell Guest Speaker At PASS Meeting

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell was the guest speaker at a recent Plymouth & South Shore Association of REALTORS (PASS) monthly meeting.

O'Donnell provided an overview to real estate brokers and agents with regard to the Registry's services, followed by an informative question and answer session.

"I very much appreciate Plymouth & South Shore Association of REALTORS (PASS) President Brian Morisse, the PASS Education Committee and staff of the association who hosted the event on our behalf. In today's environment, working with and listening to the concerns of key constituencies is critical to the success of a public agency. In the case of the Registry of Deeds, interacting with real estate professionals and making them aware of the services offered at the Registry, whether it be a state-of-the-art computer system, a Customer Service Center to answer questions, or availability of closing tables, is important to the success of the Registry," O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell also spent time answering questions about the benefits of the Homestead Act. A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of a property owners principal residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, May 1, 2015, at approximately 2:00 p.m., Officers John Leuchte and James Goldrick were dispatched to the Citizens Bank inside the Stop and Shop store on Southern Artery for a possible bank robbery in progress.

The Dispatcher gave out the description of the suspect as a tall female, heavy set wearing a blue hooded sweatshirt with a baseball cap and a multicolored bandana. Officer Goldrick and additional Officers canvassed the area while Officer Leuchte spoke with the bank teller, who said that the suspect came up to the window and passed her a note and a bag indicating that she was robbing the bank. She said that no weapon was shown.

The Officer then spoke with the Loss Prevention Officer of Stop and Shop to watch video from cameras throughout the store. The video showed the suspect exit a taxi and walk into the bank area, then wait for all the customers to leave. She walked up and passed the note with a bag to the teller approximately 6 minutes later.

After getting the money, she then left the store and got back into the taxi. The taxi appeared to be a Red Toyota Prius 4 door taxi. The driver appeared to be tan skinned with dark hair, wearing a blue button down shirt or jacket, and tan pants. The taxi then drove off onto Southern Artery. The video provided a clear image of the suspect.

After obtaining a copy of the video, Officer Leuchte spoke with the Teller again. She stated that the suspect came up to the window and passed a note that read, "Be Quiet No Dye Packs put your money from your drawer and put it in the bag" and handed her a silver drawstring bag with an apple emblem on it. The Teller said that she emptied the drawer of $2,177 in 50's, 20's, 10's, 5's, and 1's. She stated that the woman then left the store.

Anti-crime Officer Steve DesRoche spoke with a taxi driver and was able to get a name of a driver who met the description given and this information was given to Detectives Jamie Karvelis and Tom Pepjonovic. He said that the driver in question often picks up fares but doesn't call them into their dispatcher. Detective Karvelis spoke with the driver, who denied picking up anyone in the Stop and Shop area or dropping anyone in Germantown. When asked what he was wearing, he provided a description that matched what the taxi driver was wearing in the video from Stop and Shop. He was advised to respond to the Quincy Police Station and he did at about 5:30 p.m.

Detectives Pepdjonovic and Karvelis joined Sergeant Detective Gilmore in the interview of the driver, who admitted to picking up a female friend and driving her to the Stop and Shop where this incident took place. He explained that he picked her up on Lawn Avenue where she lives and drove her to Citizens Bank, where she cashed her check and he then drove her home. He stated this took place around 2:05 p.m. He said he did not tell his dispatcher from Marina Bay Cab. He stated that this female had texted him for the ride and provided the telephone number. He said that the female paid him $115.00 for the ride. When shown a photo of the suspect, the driver confirmed that it was the same female he had in his taxi.

Based on this information, Detective Pepdjonovic was able to match the photo with that of the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles License database. It was also discovered that the suspect had 2 outstanding warrants for her arrest. Still photos of the suspect were provided to the responding Officers. The FBI was notified of the bank robbery and agents arrived on scene.

Quincy Police Department units converged on the suspect's residence and apprehended the suspect. Detective Pepdjonovic noted that the suspect was wearing the same glasses she had on in the photos of the robbery. He then read the suspect her Miranda Warnings. When asked about her involvement in the robbery, the suspect confessed to robbing the bank and said that she did this because she owed two months back rent and has a gambling debt.

After receiving consent to search her residence, Officers found all the clothing that the suspect was wearing during the commission of the crime. When asked where the money was, the suspect led the Officers to a kitchen drawer and pulled out a "Polish Collection" kit. She then pulled the insides out and turned over $265.00. She stated the rest of the money was gone – to pay a gambling debt.

The suspect, a 48 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for the two warrants as well as for "Unarmed Robbery." At the station, the suspect was again interviewed. She confirmed what the bank teller said occurred. She stated that she threw the note and bag out the window of the taxi on Southern Artery. Once home, she was picked up by a man she owed the money to and paid him $1800.00. He then dropped her off at the Quincy Center MBTA station and she took a bus home. The suspect said that when she got home, she thought she had "gotten away with it." The area was searched for the note and bag but it was unproductive. Nice Work!

SIMPLE QUESTIONS TO ASK YOURSELF AFTER BEING INFORMED THAT YOU WON A LOTTERY:

1. Did you enter your name or buy a ticket to this particular lottery? If you didn't, then how can you win? (Such as a European lottery – were you in Europe and did you buy a ticket?)
2. Why do I have to pay taxes first on a lottery? Why do I have to wire money to someone first to get my lottery winnings? Never send money by "green dot" or electronically wire money to someone you don't know.

REALITY: It is very rare that any Police Department will ever be able to get your money back to you. Once you send it, it is gone!

BANK SCAM: residents are getting emails claiming to be from Bank of America stating that there is a problem with their account. This is "phishing" for information. This is being sent to people who don't even have an account with the bank.

QCA Penny Drive Raises Over $1,100 For Cystic Fibrosis

With the month May being Cystic Fibrosis Awareness month, Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) sponsored a coin drive to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Students were asked to donate pennies, nickels, dimes, and quarters and raised over $1,100.

Cystic Fibrosis is a life-threatening genetic disease that primarily affects the lungs and digestive system. An estimated 30,000 children and adults in the United States have CF (70,000 worldwide).

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation is the world's leader in the search for a cure for cystic fibrosis. The Foundation funds more CF research than any other organization, and nearly every CF drug available today was made possible because of Foundation support. In Loving Memory of
on his Birthday
May 5, 1928 – October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ar dheis De go raibh a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Lovingly remembered and Sadly Missed by: Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan, Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his 17 grandchildren and many friends.

Arthur E. Yacubian

A funeral Mass for Arthur E. Yacubian, of Quincy, will be celebrated Saturday at 9 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy. Mr. Yacubian died May 10.

He learned from a young age the importance of family, education and community. The son of immigrant parents, he was raised in Quincy of the strongest moral fiber. His parents, through their example, instilled in him a desire to succeed, love of learning, and a keen sense of how to help others in the community.

Mr. Yacubian graduated from North Quincy High School in 1949 and later enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, serving for four years during the Korean Conflict. When he returned home and had difficulty finding work, he decided to recommit himself wholeheartedly to his studies.

Education was his second love, after family, and he quickly excelled during his four years at Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy. Mr. Yacubian was a dedicated student who could always be found in the same cubicle at the library. When the library closed he continued studying at the desk of his professor's secretary. He studied to learn the material, not just to pass a test.

Mr. Yacubian graduated Magna Cum Laude from Eastern Nazarene College and received a perfect score on the Graduate Record Exam. This success allowed him to further his studies at Trinity College where he received a Master's Degree in Mathematics. He always felt his college days were the best. In later years he would have loved to go back to school.

His favorite job was at the Underwater Sound Lab in CT. He made a difficult choice to come home and help take care of his parents, who had became ill, thus giving up his prized job. He then worked at Natick Labs in MA for over 30 years and had turned down several promotions in order to continue the care of his beloved parents. Arthur retired from Natick Labs in the early 1980's.

He did not crave the attention but was always willing to help his younger brother. He credits his parents for the wonderful life he was able to lead. "We are who we are because of them," was a favorite saying paying tribute to his parent's sacrifices, love, and support of their family.

Arthur will be remembered for his generosity, compassion, genuineness, and the ability to always help people in need.

Beloved son of the late Absolam Yacubian and Zaruhe (Chilingerian). Loving brother of Dr. Allan H. Yacubian, DMD of Quincy, and the late Eleanor Yacubian.

Visiting hours are 4 to 8 p.m. Friday in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A Celebration of Life Service will be held in the funeral home at 8:15 a.m. on Saturday prior to the Funeral Mass in Sacred Heart Church.

St. Jude Novena

This Novena has never been known to fail. This Novena must be said for nine consecutive days. Publication must be promised.

Oh Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name know and call you to be invoked. St. Jude, pray for us all who invoke your aid. Amen. M.T. 5/14

Holy Spirit Novena

Holy Spirit. You who solve all problems, light all roads so I can obtain my goal; You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things as You confirm once again that I never want to be separated from You, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. Say this prayer for three consecutive days, the favor will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor. M.T. 5/14

Holy Spirit, you solve all problems, light all roads, so that I can attain my goal. You who give the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things, confirming once again that I never meant to be separated from you even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.
The person must say this prayer for three consecutive days. After 3 days the favor will be granted even if it is difficult. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. NL 5/14

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might not like some people's idea of a surprise. But you could be in for a pleasant shock when someone finally sends a reply to a request you made so long ago that you almost forgot about it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a time to expect the unexpected. So don't be surprised if a decision that just recently seemed final suddenly opens up and leaves you with another chance to make an important choice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking a different tack on a work project might rankle some colleagues. But the positive results of your innovative course soon speak for themselves. Celebrate with a fun-filled weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Meeting new associates can be awkward, even if you're in a high positive phase right now. Best advice: Make them feel comfortable, and you'll soon forget your own discomfort.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good time for you social Lions to blow-dry your manes, polish your claws and look like the Fabulous Felines you are as you make new friends and influence the influential.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expectations run especially high this week, and you should feel confident in your abilities to take advantage of what might be offered. A colleague has some advice you might find helpful.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A recent flurry of activity leaves you in need of a little breathing space, and you'd be wise to take it. Close family members should have an explanation about an emergency situation that just passed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An insensitive act makes a difficult situation more so. But try not to waste either your physical or emotional energies in anger. Move on and let others fill the clod in on the facts of life.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's a good time to look into that training program or college course you've been considering. You might have a good place to use those sharpened skills sooner rather than later.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Education dominates much of your aspect during this week. You might want to start checking out those summer session courses that could help advance your career plans.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Progress often comes in fits and starts. But at least you're moving straight ahead with no backsliding. You should soon be able to pick up the pace and reach your goals in due time.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be wary of a deal that gives confusing answers to your questions. Remember: It's always risky swimming in unknown waters, so you need all the help you can get to stay on course.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of bringing people together and creating close friendships wherever you go.

veteran and brother of U.S. Sen. John McCain, who had attended the annual on several other occasions.

McCain spoke about his impressions of Quincy over the years. Among them was the willingness of the city's residents to serve.

"To me it's a remarkable thing about Quincy – in the state where most of the nation thinks of it as very liberal and one of the fostering places of anti-war movements – in Quincy, men and women stand up and they volunteer to serve," McCain said. "This community has one of the highest percentages of citizens who have served their nation through various wars."

McCain also spoke about what he called the "subtle architecture" of the clock tower; though it stands 85 feet highly, he explained, it doesn't appear that tall in person. The 48 names of those killed, he added, are in no particular order – symbolic of how they are all equal in death.

"I looked at the plaque and saw its true elegance and symbolism: 48 men drawn up into two files of 24. I looked at the notebook I had with me and I saw that there was no order. There was no order of rank or date deceased or branch of service or any other criteria," McCain said. "I thought how appropriate that is and symbolic, for in death they are all equals."

Mayor Thomas Koch asked those in attendance to be mindful of the sacrifice made by those lost in the war and their families.

"Each and every generation the veterans of this city – going back to the Revolutionary War – have responded to the call of this great nation. Today we especially mark our Vietnam vets," the mayor said.

"I know each of us pray in our own way and frequently when I do my prayers at night or in the morning I thank the good Lord for the gift of life, the gift of family and the gift of faith. So as we leave here today, be mindful of that gift of life and be mindful of the 48 that gave their life for us. Be mindful of the sacrifice their families made so our families could live in freedom. And be mindful of that faith – that faith in God, that faith in the nation and that faith in one another."

Francisco Urena, the Massachusetts secretary of veterans' services, said Quincy is known as the 'City of Veterans' for all it does for those who served.

"It's such an important day, remembering and honoring our Vietnam veterans, especially those whose names are behind me who did not come home," Urena said. "I've said this once and I'll say it again. Quincy calls itself the City of Presidents but I think Quincy is also known as the City of Veterans."

The Marina Bay ceremony and the dedication of three memorial squares to servicemen who lost their lives in Vietnam earlier in the day – such a square has now been dedicated to each of the 48 who lost their life – was organized by the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter. Sen. John Keenan thanked the group for ensuring the memory of those lost in the war won't be forgotten.

"Because of them we get to know these men. In doing so, they will get to live on with all of us and we will never forget them," he said.

Lawrence Norton, president of the Quincy Chapter, concluded the ceremony by vowing to return next year to once again honor those lost.

Veterans Council Memorial Day Parade, Ceremonies May 25

The Quincy Veterans Council Annual Memorial Day Parade and Ceremonies will be held Monday, May 25.

The parade will start at 10:30 a.m. The route begins at the Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., and follows Quincy Avenue to Hancock Street to Coddington Street and rests at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, World War II podium.

Guest speaker will be Joseph McConville, father of James McConville, current Commanding General of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Mayor Thomas Koch will bring the Greetings of the City.

The annual ceremonies are sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council on behalf of the local veterans' organizations. George Bouchard, Graves Registration Officer, Quincy Veterans Services, is the parade chairman.

In the event of inclement weather, call Bouchard at 617-376-1194 for further information.

Memorial Squares Dedicated To Three Vietnam Veterans

a cousin, a neighbor and a classmate. It's wonderful to see all the people remember him, not just as a hero but also a friend and a relative. Every time we look at these memorials around the city, it's a reminder that these are real people with real stories that are close to our hearts at home."

Coughlin's memorial square was dedicated at the corner of Quincy Avenue and Charlesmount Avenue. Robert LaFleur, the commander of the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 79, went to Point Junior High School with Coughlin.

"The one thing I remember about John in junior high school – he was probably about 6'2" already in junior high school – he loved basketball," LaFleur said. "John was a great kid, a real good kid. He never caused any problems. I never saw him in detention – not that I ever went there, but I never saw him when I walked by the door. He was a good kid – a typical Irish kid with the reddish-colored hair and the freckles on his face and always smiling."

During his senior year at Quincy High, Coughlin left school in November 1967 to enlist in the Marine Corps. He was on patrol duty near Quang Nam on Oct. 13, 1968, when a booby trap exploded, serious injuring Coughlin and four other marines. Coughlin died the following day; he was 19 years old.

"At that time that John had died, I was in the Navy and my mother sent me a letter and in the letter she asked me if I had known John," LaFleur recalled. "I wrote back to her that I did know John and he was probably the kid you would take home to meet your sister. He was that kind of a person."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall called the commitment made by Coughlin and his fellow service members remarkable.

"I would assume that when John embarked on his mission as a marine, the thought might have been there that he would never return," Croall said. "It's absolutely remarkable to me when somebody makes that commitment they're willing to go to any length to fight for the freedom and the democracy and the principles that make this country so strong."

Firefighters Cookout June 19 At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Fire Association will provide a cookout for members of the Quincy Council on Aging at the Kennedy Center on Friday, June 19th at 12:30 p.m.

This annual event is popular with the seniors. Firefighters prepare and cook hamburgers and hot dogs. Potato chips, water, soda and dessert are also provided.

Tickets for this are available at the Kennedy Center. Space is limited.

Cost is $3 per ticket. Proceeds will go to the Quincy Firefighters Muscular Dystrophy Fund. The firefighters will also have their MDA Boot available for those who might like to donate.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

KOCH

FOR QUINCY

Dear Friend:

It is with tremendous humility and excitement that I write today to let you know I am a candidate for re-election as Mayor in this year's City election.

We will formally kick off the campaign at a special event at 6 p.m. on May 14 in the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry Street. It will be a great night of fun, friends, and community, so please accept this letter as my personal invitation. As always, if the cost is a burden, please come as my guest.

I am deeply mindful of the trust you have placed in me, and please know that it has been the honor of my life to serve this great City that we all love so much. I intend this year to work tirelessly to once again earn that trust as we continue to work together to build a future for Quincy that will make our children and grandchildren proud.

Together, we emerged from one of the worst economic crises in a generation to a period of remarkable growth. We're investing in education – lowering class sizes, building new schools and restoring existing ones. We're protecting our seniors with expanded programs and the City's first senior center. And we're earning national recognition for creating financial stability; rebuilding our infrastructure, fostering economic development and fighting the epidemic of substance abuse that affects communities across the Commonwealth.

None of this is to say we don't have our challenges as a community. I don't like to make blanket promises, but I can promise that you can count on me to continue to work hard to meet those challenges.

Thank you again for the privilege of serving as Mayor, and I respectfully ask you to stand together with me this year. I hope to see you on the 14th.

Sincerely,

Tom

The Quincy Sun

2015 Visitor Guide

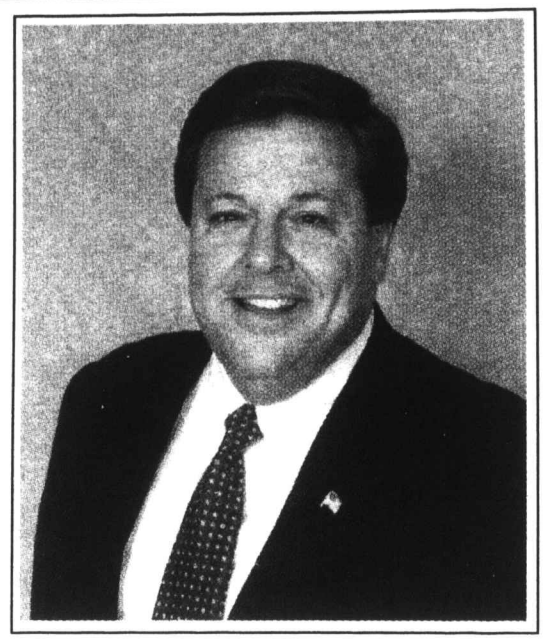
City of Quincy, Massachusetts
Office of the Mayor



Welcome to Historic Quincy!

There are few things more synonymous with our great City of Quincy than history, and it is once again my pleasure to introduce this wonderful supplement to The Quincy Sun celebrating our community's proud heritage and unparalleled history as America's "City of Presidents."

Inside the pages of Historic Quincy, you'll find the essential guide to all things Quincy – the Adams National Historic Park and presidential homestead; the United First Parish Church and the crypts of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; the Hancock Cemetery; the Dorothy Quincy homestead; the Adams Academy and the Quincy Historical Society; our granite and shipbuilding history and so much more.

I am tremendously proud of our City's strong commitment to protecting and enhancing our heritage for future generations. This summer, you will see the fruits of this commitment in the completely restored 1844 City Hall that is one of our country's oldest functioning government buildings. The renovation includes new exhibit space showcasing a number of artifacts important not only to Quincy's history, but America's as well.

And after many years of planning and construction, the nearby First Parish Church where the Presidents and First Ladies rest, will finally take a deserved place of prominence for visitors and pedestrians as the infrastructure work for our Adams Green park project will transform traffic patterns around City Hall and the Church to create a welcoming promenade for both of these historic treasures.

I hope you will take the time to discover all that Quincy has to offer this summer – from our award-winning restaurants, to our wonderful parks and summer events, to our 27 miles of beautiful coastline and of course, to our history.

Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

First Father And Son Presidents

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six-year, $175,000 reconstruction project, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in the them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over. Also included is admission to the Old House at Peace field within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour leaves the Visitors Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was, in his boyhood, a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peace field," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as the summer White House for two Presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams National Historical Site at Peace field.

The Old House at Peace field,135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour at the Old House at Peace field is 4:05 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour of the park leaves the Visitors Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Quincy: A Great Place To Live And Stay

History is best understood as a living reality. It impacts both our present in which we dwell and the future we strive to create. We possess today what we do because of the willingness of the men and women who went before us; who strived, when called, to do their duty, and often to risk much for their principles of freedom and democracy. From those who laid the foundation of our state and nation; to those who labored in the shipping and granite industries, to the many who gave their lives in defense of our country, to those who were leaders in the arts, and those who organized for the rights of working families, they left to Quincy a rich legacy that calls each of us to dare, to risk, to be the best we can.

Quincy is a great place to live and to stay. Its greatest asset is the sense of neighborhood and community that infuses every section of our city. It is a wonderful place to bring up a family and to seek and live out the promise engendered here of the right to pursue one's happiness in peace. We recognize that this does not happen by accident, but instead is the product of our commitment and striving toward being a true and responsible member of our community. Our neighborhoods, our schools, our parks, our recreational fields, our services to each other, all reflect our gifts from the past, our commitment to the present, and our responsibility for the future.

FLAGS AND WREATHS adorn the last resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, in the crypt of United First Parish Church. It's the only church in the United States where two presidents are buried side by side with their wives.

United First Parish

Only Church Where 2 Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 – which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate – and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., is open to the public daily from April 19 to Nov. 11. Tours begin on the hour from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Friday and noon to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Suggested donation is $4 for adults, $3 for students and seniors, and children 12 and under are free. Group tours are available upon request by contacting visitorsprogram@ufpc.org. Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family, which settled here at Mount Wollaston, pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there.

So is the Rev. John Hancock, Jr., father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, one of the most intriguing is marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

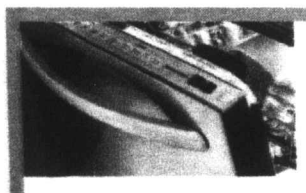
In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock Street in Quincy Square, next to City Hall (1305 Hancock St.), is open to the public. There is no admission charge.



Located next to John Adams birthplace, you'll find another famous Quincy landmark.

Adams Academy Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

Now Home To The Quincy Historical Society

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets, site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson

Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses a periodical reading room and two quiet study rooms, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001. The project was funded by the City of Quincy, with grants from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Massachusetts Historical Commission and nearly $1 million in private donations.

The new wing was dedicated in 2005 as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 1 to 5 p.m. For information, call 617-376-1301.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE in Wollaston – a National Historic Landmark – looks like how it appeared in the 1880s when historian Eliza Susan Quincy began to organize historical information on the house.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, former President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open to the public on the first and third Saturdays of the month from June 1 and Oct. 15 (excluding July 4) between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tours start on the hour; the last tour begins at 4 p.m. Admission is free for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $5 for adults, $4 for seniors, and $2.50 for students. Group tours are available by calling 617-994-5930 or visiting historicnewengland.org.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead: A Grand Mansion

Home For Five Generations Of The Quincy Family

Quincy Homestead, often called the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, is a grand 17th and 18th century mansion sited on almost two acres of tree-shaded lawn.

A National Historic Landmark, the Quincy Homestead is significant for its role in early American history, for its architecture, and for its Quincy family association. The property is located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road in Quincy. It is part of the original land that Edmund Quincy acquired for a farm in the 1630's.

The present house, dating from 1686, was enlarged and enhanced over a period of more than 200 years. Its majestic Georgian frontispiece and gambrel roof, with distinctive dormer windows, give the building a stately and substantial appearance.

The Homestead served as a home for five generations of Quincys, one of the leading families of Massachusetts. Their progeny include President John Quincy Adams and Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. Leading up to the American Revolution, it was a meeting place for many American patriots including John Adams, Josiah Quincy and John Hancock. The house was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the first First-Lady of Massachusetts and the wife of John Hancock, the president of the Second Continental Congress, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the first governor of the Commonwealth.

The Quincy Homestead represents three architectural periods.

In 1686, the original kitchen area and bedchamber above were built. In 1706, extensive additions were made, and finally in the mid-18th century the current form emerged. It is one of the few houses in Massachusetts in which the elements of a 17th century building are still clearly visible, although they are surrounded by a later style.

The house is an excellent illustration of how architectural styles developed during the colonial period. It is furnished with period antiques and artifacts that provide an intriguing historical record of daily life in a house dating back three centuries.

Quincy Homestead was an early success for historic preservation in Massachusetts and is an on-going example of public-private partnership.

In 1904, The National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts purchased the Quincy Homestead and then entered into a long-term cooperative relationship with the Commonwealth whereby the Commonwealth would own the property and maintain the exterior of the house and grounds. The Dames agreed to furnish and maintain its interior and to interpret its important history for visitors.

This relationship continues today.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, 34 Butler Rd., will be open to the public for tours of the house and gardens on the following Saturdays this season: June 6, June 20, July 18, Aug. 1, Aug. 15, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3, from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Special arrangements may be made for private group tours at other times. For more information, contact the Colonial Dames' Massachusetts headquarters at 617-742-3190. All public tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Richest Man In The Colony

At the start of the Revolution, Quincy-born John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

John And Abigail: A Unique Historic Team

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

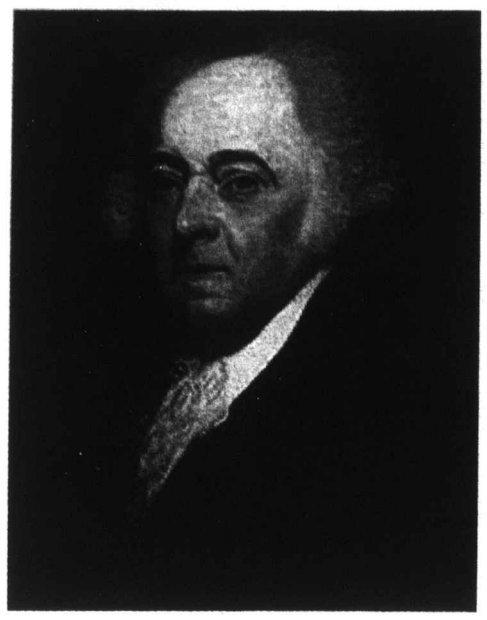
John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.



JOHN ADAMS

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

Both John and Thomas Jefferson, his fellow Founding Father and rival, died on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail, along with their son, John Quincy, and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail at about the age of 32 and John Quincy at 10 stands beside the church, looking at the statue of John Adams across Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall.

The story of Abigail and John was recounted by HBO television in a seven-part mini-series in the spring of 2008. The mini-series, based on the book John Adams by David McCullough, starred Paul Giamatti (John Adams) and Laura Linney (Abigail). It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

Hotbed Of Revolution

Pew 54: Where John Quincy Adams Worshipped

Quincy's United First Parish Church is perhaps best known as the final resting place of two U.S. Presidents and their wives. But it is also the church where one president worshipped for 20 years.

John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, sat in pew 54 of the church, which was built in 1828. The church was constructed out of funds raised from the sale of pews and replaced the wooden Hancock Meeting House that sat on the same site.

Adams lost the presidential election in 1828 and returned to Quincy after leaving the White House the following March. He sat in pew 54 whenever he attended services at the United First Parish Church – including during his tenure in the House of Representatives – until his death in 1848.

"The church was built in his last year as president. So when he was back here and when he was in Congress, he would use it when he was in Quincy," said Bill Westland, a member of the United First Parish Church who provides tours of the historic building. "Number 54 would be the pew he used."

Today, the pew is marked by a plaque denoting it the Adams Pew and a patriotic red, white and blue ribbon. The pew, which sits five rows from the pulpit, is a favorite of visitors who come and tour the church; couples who wed inside the church are known to pose for photos inside it as well.

But why did John Quincy Adams choose number 54?

The reason for that dates back to one of Adams' predecessors, James Madison. The fourth president of the United States, Madison attended services at St. John's Church, an Episcopalian house of worship in Lafayette Park, a short distance from the White House. Madison sat in pew 54 and that pew has been known as the presidential pew ever since.

"When James Madison was president of the United States, there was an Episcopal church not too far from the White House that he went to, picked out number 54, and said that was the presidential pew," Westland said.

"Other presidents using that church, including John Quincy Adams, always use number 54. When this church was built and John Quincy Adams was the president of the United States I'm sure if you were on that pew committee and the president of the United States said he wanted number 54, you weren't about to say no. That's how 54 became the presidential pew."

Other members of Adams' family used pew 54 at the United First Parish Church as well, including Charles Francis Adams. The son of the sixth president, Charles Francis Adams served as the U.S. ambassador to the United Kingdom from 1861 to 1868 under Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson. (John Quincy Adams and his father, John Adams, also served as ambassadors to Britain.)

John Quincy Adams' wife, Louisa Catherine Adams, did not attend services at the United First Parish Church, according to Westland. A London native, and the only foreign-born first lady, she had grown up as an Anglican.

"She never joined the church and she remained an Anglican, or Episcopalian," Westland said. "He actually bought her a pew up at Christ Church up the street. She used to go up there."

John Quincy Adams was just one of several prominent Quincy residents who purchased pews in the new United First Parish Church in 1828. Josiah Quincy III – who served as mayor of Boston, president of Harvard University and for whom Quincy Market is named – purchased pews 55 and 56, right behind Adams. Members of the Greenleaf, Faxon, Fenno, Beale and Spear families bought other pews.

"It's interesting if you look at the ownership of some of the pews," Westland said. "It's the old Quincy families going way, way back."

The sixth president purchased other pews inside the church to finance its construction, including pews 1 and 2, which sat to the side of the pulpit and faced it at a right angle. Those pews were later removed when an addition was added to the rear of the church.

John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa Catherine, were entombed in a crypt beneath the church after their deaths. The crypt is also the final resting place of John Adams and his wife Abigail.

The Wife Of John Quincy Adams Only First Lady Born On Foreign Soil

Louisa Catherine Adams' Adventures As 'A Nobody'

When she was 65 years old and a member of the famous and not always sensitive Adams family for 43 years, Louisa Catherine Adams penned a brief, unpublished memoir.

She called it "Adventures of a Nobody."

Louisa Catherine, the wife of John Quincy Adams and the only first lady born outside what became the United States, never quite fit in with her in-laws until late in life when Abigail finally acknowledged she was worthy to be an Adams wife and John grew to enjoy her letters and his conversations with her.

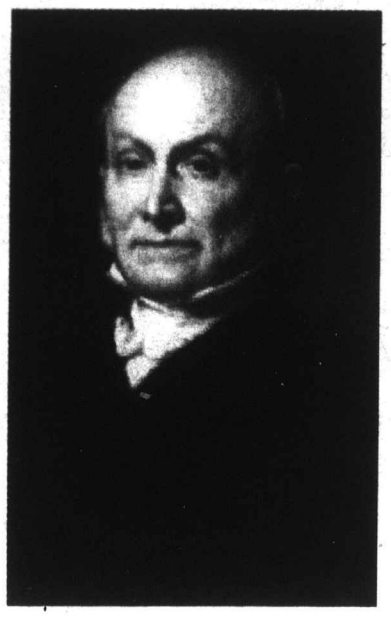
She was born Louisa Catherine Johnson on Feb. 12, 1775 in London to Joshua Johnson, an American merchant from Maryland, and his wife, Catherine, an Englishwoman. The family fled to Nantes, France, when the American Revolution made life untenable for Johnson in England.

In Nantes, Louisa attended a convent school run by nuns and thought of herself as Catholic and French in culture. She spoke French fluently and had to learn English all over when the family returned to London after the war in the colonies ended. Becoming an Anglican confused her so much that she fainted in her first visit to the altar.

Louisa first met her future husband in Nantes when she was 4 and he was 12. They met again at a party in the Johnson home in London and this time John Quincy was old enough to take notice of her literary, musical and conversational skills. They became engaged, much to the consternation of John Quincy's folks back home.

John the elder, now the president, was concerned that his son was about to marry "a foreigner," and Abigail called in to remind her son that the choices he made now might interfere with his political future. She even sent letters to Louisa pointing out the importance of economy and lack of frivolity required of an Adams wife.

LOUISA CATHERINE ADAMS



JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

Nevertheless, John Quincy and his Louisa were married July 26, 1797, in London. The ceremony called for little more than a paragraph in John Quincy's voluminous diary.

"At nine this morning, I went, accompanied by my brother, to Mr. Johnson's, and thence to the church of the parish of All Hallows Barking where I was married to Louisa Catherine Johnson, second daughter of Joshua Johnson and Catherine Johnson, by Mr. Hewlett.

"We were married before eleven in the morning."

They barely had time to set up housekeeping in London before John Quincy was off to the continent as minister to Prussia. Louisa was in her element in Europe. She made friends with the Prussian royal family. But she miscarried their first child and was subject to fainting spells and fevers. Her husband, engrossed in diplomacy, ignored her needs.

She came to the United States for the first time in 1801, landing in Quincy, the very heart of Adams country. John, now an ex-president, found that he rather liked her but Abigail still doubted her qualifications to be an Adams wife.

"To a woman like Mrs. Adams, equal to every occasion in life, I appeared like a maudlin, hysterical fine lady," wrote Louisa.

A year later, John Quincy was elected to the U.S. Senate as a Federalist and the family was on the move again, this time to Washington. Out from under Abigail's thumb, Louisa blossomed, turning her home into a social salon for politicians and diplomats. But all that ended when her husband broke with the Federalist party and resigned his Senate seat.

John Quincy was immediately offered the post of minister to Russia by President James Madison and, without consulting his wife, he accepted. The family included three children by now and it was decided by John Quincy and Abigail that the oldest, George and John II, would remain in the States for their education while the youngest, year-old Charles Francis, would go to St. Petersburg with his mother.

She found the winters in the Russian royal capital cold and dark but there was social life and she became a favorite dance partner of Tsar Alexander I.

A daughter was born in St. Petersburg but died before her first birthday. In all, Louisa was pregnant 14 times with nine miscarriages and one still born. Her oldest, George, drowned at 28 when he fell or jumped from a boat in New York Harbor; John II died of alcoholism at 31; only Charles Francis survived to become a diplomat and author.

For once, John Quincy heeded his wife and asked to come home. Instead, President Madison assigned him to Ghent, Belgium, to help negotiate the treaty ending the War of 1812. When his duty to his country was concluded, he sent for Louisa to join him in Paris, touching off one of the great adventures of her life, even impressing her mother-in-law, Abigail.

For 40 days and nights in the dead of the fierce Russian winter she and Charles Francis, age 7, accompanied by a small escort, were driven by a carriage on a sled, thawing their frozen food over candles, crossing frozen rivers on quaking ice, hurrying past old battle fields still littered with dead soldiers. It was in relief that they arrived in friendly Berlin. But there were still perils ahead.

Napoleon had escaped from exile on the isle of Elba and was in Paris collecting his Grande Armee to confront the Duke of Wellington and the Prussian General von Blucher at Waterloo. There were French troops everywhere. A group of them spotted Louisa's obviously Russian carriage and surrounded her, shouting: "Kill her! Kill her!"

Louisa's escort convinced them she was Napoleon's sister. She addressed them in fluent French and they allowed her to proceed, cheering her as she went.

John Quincy was next assigned as minister to London and Louisa spent two happy years in her old hometown. Better yet, her oldest boys, George and John II, were permitted to join her. She hadn't seen them in more than six years. Neither parent recognized their sons, now 14 and 12 respectively.

The peripatetic Adams clan was on the move again when President James Monroe named John Quincy his secretary of state. Back in the states, Abigail greeted her daughter-in-law with new respect. Louisa enjoyed life in Washington, too, turning her home into a social center for diplomats and others with an open house every Tuesday night.

When it was apparent that her husband would be a candidate for the presidency in 1824, Louisa threw a ball honoring Andrew Jackson on the 10th anniversary of his victory over the British at New Orleans. She tried and failed to get the popular Jackson to support John Quincy. Instead, the war hero ran against him.

Jackson actually won the election with 99 electoral votes to 84 for Adams, 41 for William Crawford of Georgia and 37 for Henry Clay of Kentucky. But he failed to get a majority, throwing the election into the House of Representatives. After some wheeling and dealing, Clay threw his support to Adams and John Quincy became president. Clay became his secretary of state.

Louisa was depressed by the bitterness of the election and disappointed in her husband's backroom maneuvers to win the election. Son George fathered an illegitimate child by a chambermaid. Son John II was thrown out of Harvard. Son Charles became "addicted to depraved habits." She spent much of her White House years in seclusion, eating chocolates and writing poetry.

But when John Quincy asked Congress to appropriate funds for a billiard table in the White House and pro-Jackson newspapers suggested it was for Louisa because "gambling furniture is common in the castles of the European rich and great," it was Louisa herself who answered back in the pro-Adams press.

She was relieved when John Quincy's single term ended in defeat by his old nemesis Jackson and they could retire to a quiet life in Quincy. But it was not to be. It took a year for her husband to catch his breath, then once again duty called and he ran and was elected to the House of Representatives, first as a candidate of the National Republican Party and then as a Whig.

John Quincy's great cause was anti-slavery and Louisa worked closely with her husband for the cause, even branching out to women's rights, equating the status of American women with that of American slaves and keeping up a lively correspondence with advocates of women's rights.

John Quincy served in the House for 17 years before he was stricken on the floor of Congress and died Feb. 23, 1848. Louisa remained in Washington, suffering a stroke a year later. She died May 15, 1852 at the age of 77 and was buried along side of John Quincy, John and Abigail in the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

Congress adjourned in mourning, a first time tribute for the First Lady who thought of herself as a nobody.

Whaling In Quincy

Although it never attained the status of New Bedford or Nantucket, the town of Quincy played a role in the whaling industry in the early and middle 19th century.

It is recorded that the top-sail schooner Cambria sailed from Quincy on an 18-month whaling voyage in 1839 and returned with 420 barrels of sperm oil.

However, reports for 1845 show that only one Quincy vessel was engaged in whaling and by 1855 the industry was viewed as so insignificant that it was not recorded.

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams Cairn

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

John Adams, The Stamp Act And The Braintree Instructions

250 Years Ago: The Beginning Of A Revolution

By ED FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

Among the various historical anniversaries to be observed this year, one which should not be totally overlooked is the 250th anniversary of the Stamp Act Crisis. This was the first major confrontation between Great Britain and the American colonies, and arguably it put them both on the path that led to revolution 10 years later. The crisis also saw the young lawyer John Adams emerge as a spokesman for the Patriot cause via his Braintree Instructions.

Passed by Parliament in March 1765, the Stamp Act was not the first effort by George III and his ministers to obtain increased income from the American colonies. But it was an escalation, both in its nature and in the range of its effects. The brainchild of Prime Minister George Grenville, it established a tax, payment signified by attached stamps, on virtually all uses of paper in the colonies—whether it be legal documents, pamphlets, newspapers. It thus taxed colonists directly and affected just about everyone

Even before the Act went into effect, America responded with a firestorm of protest. Colonial legislatures passed resolutions denying the right of Parliament to tax the colonists since the colonists were not represented in Parliament. Legislatures and informal groups made plans to enforce non-cooperation with the tax. Colonists were encouraged by knowledge that numerous members of Parliament were sympathetic with their position. A group borrowed a phrase from one of these members and began to call themselves "the Sons of Liberty." With the act due to take effect in November, the colonies agreed to hold a congress in New York in October, to consider a unified response. Meanwhile in August in Boston, mobs trashed the houses of Andrew Oliver, the designated distributor of the tax stamps, and Thomas Hutchinson, the lieutenant-governor.

That summer, John Adams was 29 years old, an attorney rising in prominence, and a brand new first-time father. He had shown interest in defending the rights of the American colonies, but had not yet taken a prominent role. The circumstances of how he came to write the Braintree Instructions are unclear, but there are some interesting indications. (A quick recap: Until 1792 present-day Quincy was the North Precinct of the town of Braintree. However, the North Precinct was the leading part of that town.)

In an account he wrote much later in life, Adams says the Instructions were his initiative: he led the call for a town meeting to discuss the Stamp Act and arrived at the meeting with a draft in hand. Formally a set of instructions to the town's representative in the legislature, the Instructions are actually a public statement of the town's position on the Stamp Act. According to Adams, "They rung through the State and were adopted, in so many Words, . . . by forty towns." Adams also recalled that he and his cousin Samuel incorporated some of John's paragraphs into the instructions he was writing for Boston.

JOHN ADAMS, as a young lawyer, emerged as spokesman for the Patriot cause via his Braintree Instructions 250 years ago.

Historians have questioned the accuracy of Adams' memory on the immediate fame of the instructions.

However, it does seem plausible that he was the driving force in their creation.

The Instructions reveal qualities of Adams' mind and character that would be important throughout his career.

For one thing, they show Adams as more than willing to be confrontational. In fact, his original draft is much feistier than is the version the Town finally adopted. In particular, in his draft the rhetorical high point is not buried three paragraphs from the end, as it is in the final version. Instead, the statement, in which Adams asserts an "Assertion and Vindication of our Rights" and watchfulness against "all attempts to take them from us" for "we never can be slaves," appears where it should —as the stirring conclusion. The text thus shows the qualities of character that would later make him an unrelenting advocate for independence. It also suggests that Adams may have skillfully pushed the town to take a position beyond its comfort zone.

The Instructions also reveal Adams' concern for fundamental principles. While a simple reiteration of the taxation-without-representation argument would have been sufficient, Adams actually puts his emphasis on another issue and says that the "most grievous" wrong in the Stamp Act is its power to deny the right of trial by a jury of one's peers.

In these two respects, the Instructions contain the essentials of a political philosophy that Adams presents more fully in a series of essays he wrote around this time for the Boston Gazette. With the unpromising title, "A Dissertation on Canon and Feudal Law," these essays set forth his ideas on the essential link between freedom and knowledge. Here he argues that the colonists have not been too bold in their defense of their rights, but too timid and presents his famous injunction: "Let us dare to read, think, speak, and write."

Under the new Prime Minister Lord Rockingham, the Stamp Act was repealed in 1766. But a process of political growth had begun and John Adams had irretrievably stepped onto a larger stage.

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family, for whom the city is named, came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

City Hall: Seat Of Government For 171 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 171 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

A $12 million restoration of City Hall began in September 2013. The project - the first significant makeover of the historic building in 100 years - is expected to be completed later this year.

CITY HALL - dedicated as the James R. McIntyre Government Center in memory of the city's former mayor and state senator in 1984 – has served as the center of Quincy government since 1844. The structure - made of Quincy granite – was designed by architect Solomon Willard who also drew up plans for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown.

Quincy Capital Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

Quincy City Hall Restoration Nearly Complete

By JIM EDWARDS
Quincy Historical Society

Quincy's "Town Hall" restoration project is rounding the bend and heading for the home stretch.

Despite a nearly catastrophic nighttime fire, progress on this important City project has been steady, and presently all fire related damages have been successfully addressed. Construction in the 1844 structure is now in the "finishing" stages. The installation of wood trim in various rooms along with the application of paint brings life to spaces long devoid of charm or aesthetic integrity.

Such finishing operations were hardly the foremost thought in anyone's imagination the fateful early morning of September 30, 2014, when a major blaze was caused by thieves using cutting torches to remove copper piping from the partially completed building. Due to the rapid response and tremendously skilled work of the Quincy Fire Department, the blaze was contained in the southwest corner of old Town Hall.

Despite the heroic measures of the Fire Department, which resulted in saving the building, the damage to a portion of the structure was considerable.

Newly installed structural steel was deformed because of the intense heat. New flooring joists and decking were destroyed on the first and second floors, drywall and metal studs, wall insulation, electrical wiring, plumbing and fire protection piping, heating and air conditioning equipment and ductwork all were impacted either directly by the fire and smoke or by water being poured into the building's confines to quell the blaze.

Worst, there was considerable damage to this marvelous building's granite clad exterior. The heat developed by the blaze destroyed a first-floor, newly installed window, with flames licking up the side of the building. The direct flame and searing heat caused delamination of the granite surface layers and ultimately resulted in structural failures in a number of stones serving as structural supporting members or lintels.

The strategy for the repair or replacements of the buildings' interior structural systems, mechanical systems and finishes was clear-cut. The insurance company insuring the building for the general contractor during construction made certain that all mechanical systems, piping, equipment, electrical wiring and devices would be replaced. All damaged or water-impacted joists, studs, insulation, drywall, sub-flooring materials that had been exposed to fire or water were also to be removed and replaced. All costs associated with the repair work were assumed by the insurance company.

The replacement for the damaged granite created a more complex situation. Finding granite of the proper size to match the damaged stones presented a great challenge, made more complicated because the original granite was of a grain, color and geological make-up that originated from a long dormant quarry. And, even were one to find stone of appropriate size and color, given the fact that the original granite has been exposed to a direct southerly and harsh sunlight for some 170 years, the chance of accomplishing a perfect match was small.

Scouring the City for just the right granite was in itself an exercise. Various locations in the City were visited during this "prospecting" excursion. Two locations where salvaged granite of the proper size was found included "the yard" at the Parks and Forestry Department and the City's Department of Public Works facility. Test saw cuts were made through various stones which allowed the grain and color of the proposed replacement stones to be assessed against granite samples brought from Town Hall.

The repairs have now been made and the exterior of the building is more or less complete with a final cleaning of the granite to take place. The new exterior features new wood double-paned replacement windows, a new slate roof and copper gutters as well as wood shutters replicating those visible in some of the oldest "Town Hall" photos on file at the Quincy Historical Society.

At the rear of the original building the former stucco clad wood framed addition has been removed. In its place is being constructed a glass-clad appendage which will contain a new entrance lobby as well as an elevator and a stairway. The glass exterior will be transparent, unlike the reflective glass of City Hall Annex, and will provide unrestricted views into the addition where the existing rough hewn granite ashlar will be visible for the first time in over 100 years. Interior views from the addition will feature the new and exciting Adams Green Park and the restored Hancock Burial Ground.

The greatest and most exciting change is the restoration of the "Great Hall" on the second floor. Although not nearly completed, the grandeur of the room can easily be imagined. The spacial qualities of the hall extending the full width and length of the majestically scaled original building, with four new windows per side, allow vast amounts of light into the interior of the room. The Great Hall, even in its present skeletal robes, conveys a completely different experience to workers and visitors alike. Gone is the cut-up and constricted council chamber that has been in evidence for 100 years. When the finishing touches are applied and the Great Hall is completed, the result will be spectacular.

This building is without a doubt, one of Quincy's fine architectural treasures and soon the public will be able to view the final product. It is with sincere thanks we should acknowledge the great financial assistance rendered to the project by the members of the Quincy Community Preservation Committee. It is also important to note the support and encouragement provided to this restoration project by the Quincy City Council. Their voices in embracing the critically needed upgrades to this City treasure will resonate through the next 100 years of the City's history.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

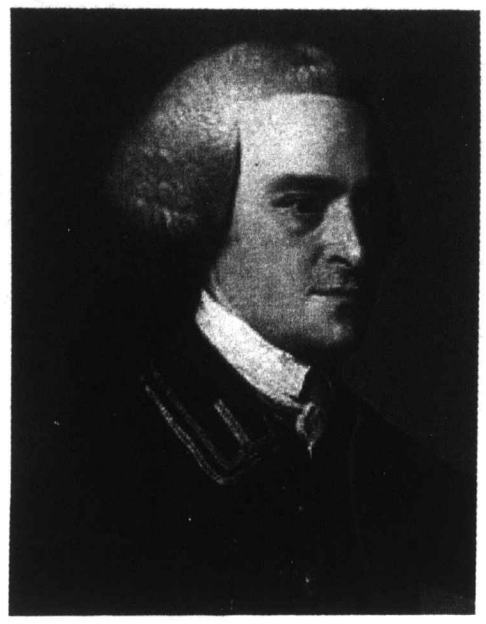
John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

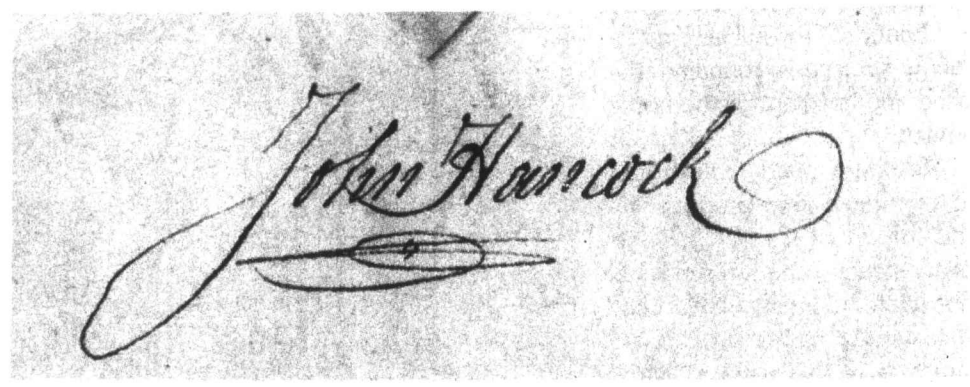
His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock, Jr.



JOHN HANCOCK



When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle, Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington Green and Concord Bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president. According to popular legend, Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

But historians believe Hancock actually signed an engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence. There was no ceremonial signing of the Declaration on July 4, 1776 so after Congress approved the wording of the text on July 4, a copy was sent to be printed. As the president of the second Continental Congress, Hancock could have signed the document that was sent to the printer. However, no one seems to know for sure since that document was lost. Some think the document was ruined in the printing process.

According to historians, the printer produced the first published version of the Declaration in the familiar broadsheet size. Hancock's name is the only delegate to appear on this document. A second broadsheet was issued six months later with all the signers listed.

Hancock's iconic signature does appear on a different document: a sheet of parchment that was carefully handwritten sometime after July 19 and signed on Aug. 2 by Hancock and those delegates present. This document - known as the engrossed copy – is displayed at the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration was adopted and signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered a humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 56, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 8.

John Hancock, one-time Merchant Prince of Boston turned Founding Father, left but a small estate.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Hancock's Grandfather A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, Sr., grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Wake Up Call

Two of the most important town officials in Quincy (then Old Braintree) in the last days of the 17th century were the constable and the tithingman.

The tithingman was appointed and paid by the town selectmen to keep order in church on Sunday morning and see to it that pewholders stayed awake during the sometimes three or four hour sermons.

He was provided with a two-foot long staff with a brass tip on one end to rouse sleeping male parishioners and a feather on the other end to do the same for female.

Among the duties of the constable was to apprehend Quakers and "attend funerals of any that died with the small pox, and walk before the corpse to give notice to any, who may be in danger of infection."

150 Years Ago: Quincy And The Civil War

By ED FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

America's commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the Civil War concludes this year. The myriad profound changes in American life that the war either caused or caused to accelerate have been the subjects of scores, possibly hundreds, of history books. At Quincy Historical Society we have spent much of the past four years trying to retrieve a sense of what the experience of the Civil War was like in Quincy. This year, we want also to take a look at the war's after effects.

In many respects Quincy's war experience was typical. Young working men went off to war. The townspeople at home spent an agonizing four years doing what they could to support those men, receiving what to us would seem extremely slow news from the battlefront, learning of the death or injury of men they knew, being cheered by news of a victorious battle, and hoping for a final victory and, most of all, an end to the war.

But Quincy was also distinctive because of its history of leadership during the American Revolution. Men from three families prominent in the Revolution—Adams, Quincy, and Revere—continued to have a close connection with the town. All of these men were, in varying degrees, part of the principled opposition to slavery and all would have leadership positions in the war. Charles Francis Adams served as America's minister to Great Britain, while his son Charles Francis, Jr. was an officer in the Union Army. Samuel Quincy, whom the town claimed as a native son although he lived in Dedham, and Paul J. Revere, who married Lucretia Lunt of Quincy – daughter of the minister of First Parish Church – both served heroically and tragically as army officers. Samuel Quincy, wounded and taken prisoner, was eventually released in a prisoner exchange, but with his health ruined. Revere, also a prisoner for a time, served at Antietam, and was mortally wounded at Gettysburg. Revere, in both life and death, had an exceptional hold on the affections of Quincy residents.

Many Quincy men with less famous names performed as heroically and often as tragically. For ordinary Quincy people—whether at home or in the service—the experience of the war formed an arc. In 1860 they were ambivalent about slavery and uncertain about Lincoln. The firing on Fort Sumter brought a surge of patriotism and a strong belief that the Union must be preserved. In the ensuing years enthusiasm turned to recognition of the war's horrors, to war-weariness, to a grim determination to see the war through to victory and, by Lincoln's leadership, to a firm resolution that slavery must be abolished.

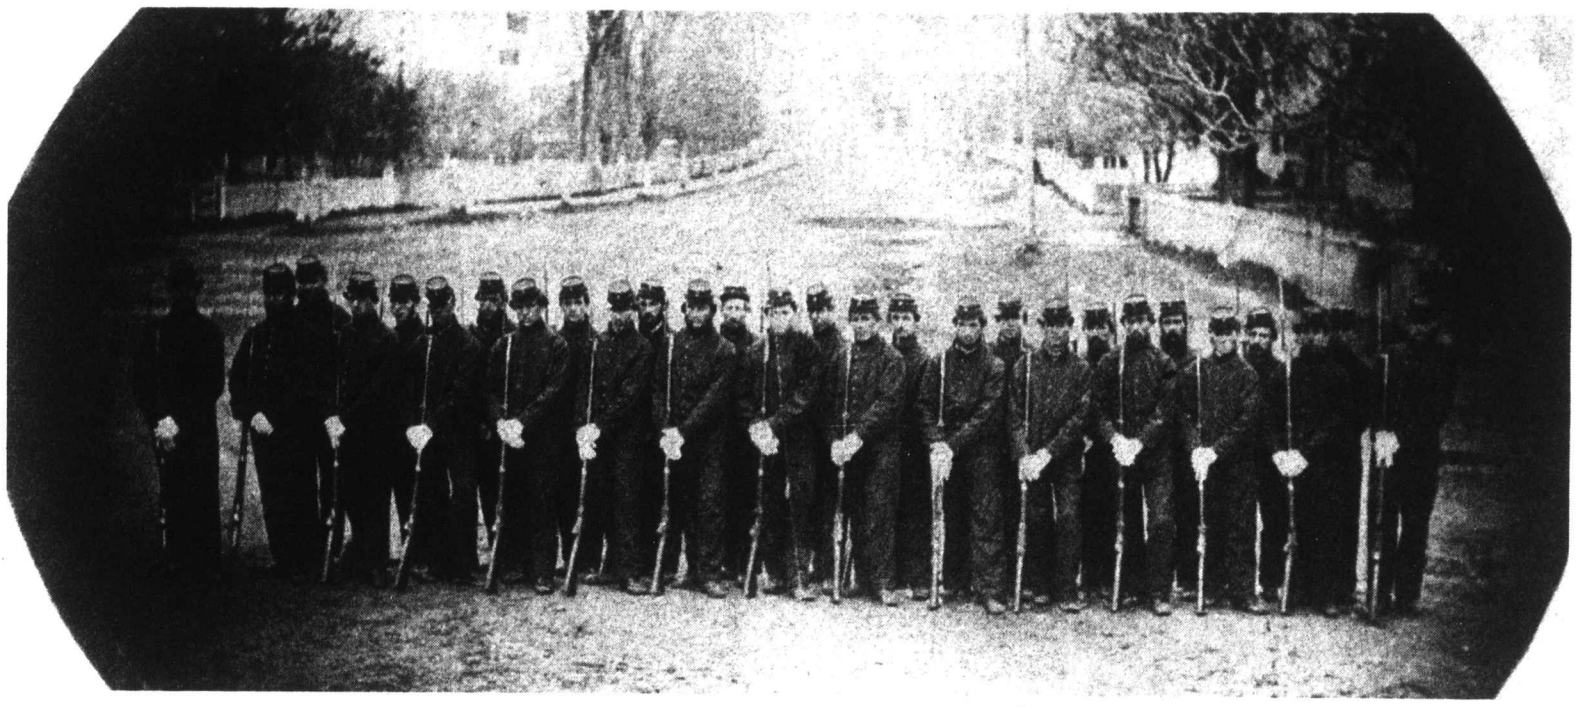
In 1865, Samuel Quincy, now promoted to Colonel, was overseeing the recruitment of African-American soldiers in New Orleans. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., also promoted to Colonel, commanded the 5th Massachusetts Cavalry, the state's first African-American cavalry troop. When Richmond fell, Adams and the 5th Massachusetts were the first Union mounted troop to enter the city. At home, Quincy residents spent early 1865 anticipating the now inevitable victory. In April, their sense of joy and deliverance was, as was it elsewhere, sobered by the assassination of President Lincoln.

Lincoln's assassination begins the long complicated story of the war's consequences. For Quincy, the effects of the war in the following years are also complex and deserve to be explored fully. Here, we can point out a few instances.

As did most towns, Quincy very soon erected a monument to the war dead. Made of Quincy granite, it was dedicated in Mount Wollaston Cemetery in 1868. The Quincy post of the Civil War veterans organization, the Grand Army of the Republic, would name itself in memory of Paul J. Revere. In a sign of the increasingly mobile American society the war helped to create, by the late 1800s nearly half the Post's members had enlisted from places other than Quincy.

Charles Francis Adams and Charles Francis Adams, Jr. returned from the war with a new commitment to living in Quincy. The senior Adams sought to fulfill his father's and grandfather's legacies by building the Stone Library and building and opening the Adams Academy. Charles Francis, Jr. turned to involvement with the town meeting and the town schools and was instrumental in the creation of the Thomas Crane Library.

Quincy was rapidly changing, however. Within five years of the war's end, development began of Wollaston Hill as suburban homes for Bostonians. As the population of the town grew, new ways of organizing and governing became necessary, and the "ordinary" men who had served in the war rose in prominence. The process is exemplified by Charles Porter. Porter, who was working as a clerk when he enlisted in 1862, rose to the rank of Lieutenant in the toughly tested 39th regiment. He first showed his political talent in 1863 when, home on leave, he rallied townsnmen to enlist. In 1888 Charles Porter became the first mayor of the new City of Quincy.



HANCOCK LIGHT GUARD – Quincy's militia – responded to President Abraham Lincoln's call for 90-day volunteers in the first days of the Civl War in 1861. The members of the Light Guard became part of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment.

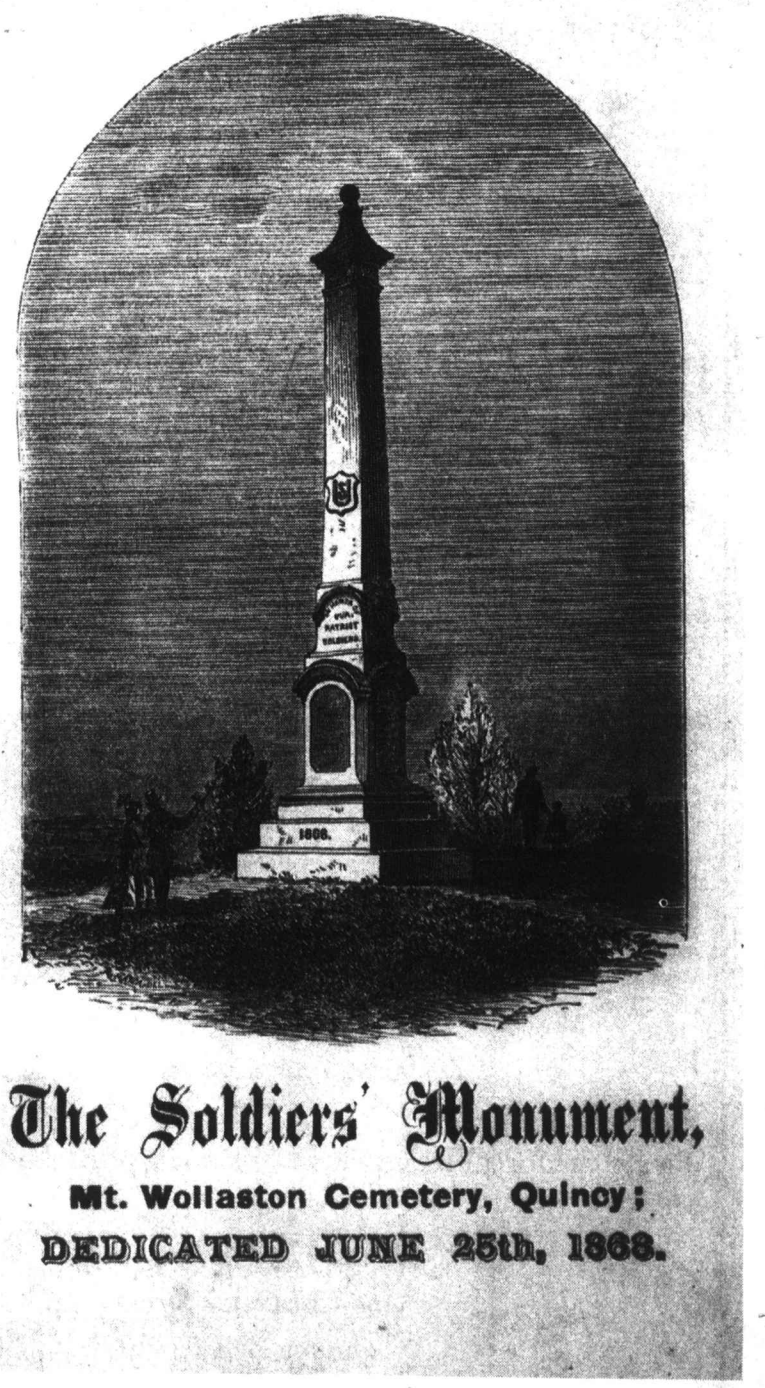
Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all male company led by a Captain Wollaston. who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

But after exhaustive research, former Quincy city historian Hobart Holly concluded that his first name was probably Richard — but, still, nobody knows for sure.



QUINCY'S CIVIL WAR Monument was dedicated June 25, 1868 in the city's Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Some 115 residents died as a result of the war - including 29 who were killed in action and 12 who perished from wounds received in battle. Others died in Confederate prison camps or from disease contracted in service.

City Named For Him But:

Col. John Quincy Something Of A Mystery Man

Few men have served the public good longer or as well as Col. John Quincy.

He was Speaker of the Massachusetts House, a governor's councilor, a selectman and perennial moderator of the town meeting in Old Braintree, commander of the local militia regiment and guardian of the rights of the few Ponkapoag Indians who survived the plague.

And through his granddaughter, Abigail Adams, nee Smith, he was the grandfather-in-law of the second President of the United States and the great-grandfather of the sixth.

Small wonder then, that when the North Precinct broke away from Old Braintree in 1792 they named the new town "Quincy."

Col. John Quincy is something of a mystery man, even in the city that bears his name. It is not known for sure when he came to Old Braintree. Nor is there a picture of him extant or even a physical description of him in the words that have been left to us by his contemporaries.

During celebration in Quincy in 1908, the main speaker, the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, noted that "in his day, he was one of the most trusted and influential public characters of the province; but for a hundred years or more, he has now been buried in oblivion.

"For example, I once mentioned John Quincy to a lifelong resident, a man of affairs and influence in the town. The response was: 'John Quincy? John Quincy? I never heard of him before!' Another in the group then exclaimed 'You mean John Quincy Adams, don't you?'"

John Quincy was born in Boston. His father, Daniel, died when he was a year old and his widowed mother, Anna, married the Rev. Moses Fiske, minister of the First Parish Church in Braintree.

He graduated from Harvard in 1708, obtained a master's degree in 1711 and inherited, through his mother, a good-sized farm in Mount Wollaston and lived there for the rest of his life.

John Quincy's rise in public life was meteoric.

He married Elizabeth Norton, the daughter of a Hingham minister, in 1715 and was named justice of the peace the same year, moderator of the town meeting a year later and began 22 years of service in the House a year after. He was Speaker of the House for 12 years, starting in 1729.

In 1741, he was manipulated out of his posts as commander of the Suffolk militia regiment by a wealthy Boston lawyer named Joseph Gooch, who is described by some as an "opportunist," and by others as an "unsavory demagogue."

Gooch arrived in Old Braintree determined to launch a political career. Beer and cider, supplied by Gooch, flowed freely in the taverns. The strategy prevailed and Quincy was dismissed as militia commander.

But his banishment was short-lived. Captains and lieutenants refused to serve under Gooch. They would serve only under Quincy. Demoralized, the people of Braintree turned Gooch out and returned command of their militia to Quincy.

Quincy's reputation was such that he was named by the legislature to be trustee of the funds of the Ponkapoag Indians, survivors of a devastating plague. He held the post for 20 years at the insistence of the Indians themselves.

Whenever there was a civic job to be done, it was the practice of the people of Old Braintree to appoint Col. John Quincy to do it. Thus it was that he was called on to chair the committee that first recommended the North Precinct become a separate town. That was in 1728.

It took 64 years but finally it was done, and when it was, they named it for John Quincy.

JOHN QUINCY TANKARD is on display in the foyer of Quincy City Hall glass annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Colonel John Quincy, for whom the City of Quincy was named, was the grandfather of Abigail Adams and the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams. Quincy attorney and former City Council President George Burke paid $200,000 for the tankard at auction in 2001. It was the only piece in a collection of colonial silver put up for auction by United First Parish Church to remain in Quincy. Burke has provided in his will to gift the tankard to the city.

Distinguished Service From Age 14 To 80

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And Much More

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to Old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great-grandfather.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the U.S. Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onis Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secretary tary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the Electoral College 178 to 83.

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams, like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

Final Resting Place Of City's Earliest Settlers, Generations Of Adams And Quincy Families

History And More At Hancock Cemetery

It may not share the same well-profiled status of some of the city's renowned historical sites like the Old House, Adams Birthplaces and United First Parish Church.

But Quincy's historic Hancock Cemetery should be a must-stop on any visitor's list to the "City of Presidents."

In fact, you might even say the Cemetery located on Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall is a blueprint to many of the city's historical figures. There's a story of the living associated with every grave marker that provides a perspective of not only local history but our nation's history, too.

The cemetery is the final resting area for some of the city's earliest settlers as well as generations of the Adams and Quincy families, including Rev. John Hancock, the father of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

There are also lessons to be learned from some of the monuments themselves. The artwork on the markers are examples of colonial winged skulls and cherubim, to Federalist classical motifs and representatives of Quincy's 19th century role as the national center of granite quarrying and carving, says Edward Fitzgerald, a leading authority on the Hancock Cemetery and executive director of the Quincy Historical Society.

There are many notable graves but there's one that may leave some visitors a bit perplexed.

That would be the tomb marked "J.Q. Adams" located to the left of the front gate. And there's an interesting story behind this tomb.

The tomb is the Adams family vault, the original resting place of John and Abigail Adams and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams, who are all now entombed in the Presidential crypt in United First Parish Church – located just across the street from the cemetery.

The vault remains the grave of numerous family members including John and Abigail's daughter, Nabby, and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine's sons, George and John.

According to Fitzgerald's research, when Nabby died in 1813, she was evidently buried in the family tomb in Hancock Cemetery. Her mother Abigail was buried there in 1818 and then John Adams was buried there after he died on July 4, 1826.

"In the ensuing weeks, John Quincy Adams came up with the idea of the crypt beneath the planned new church building," Fitzgerald says. "The new church opened in 1828 and John and Abigail's remains are moved" (to the crypt.)

ADAMS FAMILY VAULT at Historic Hancock Cemetery has an interesting history all its own. Other photos on Page 33.

By 1834 – over the next five years – three more Adams are buried in the family tomb: John Quincy Adams' brother Thomas and his sons George and John.

In 1848, after JQA died in Washington, he was returned to Quincy and buried in the family tomb.

It is JQA's son, Charles Francis, who gets the idea to expand the crypt so that his father can be buried next to his father and mother. But JQA is not moved right away, Fitzgerald points out.

"His widow, Louisa Catherine, died in 1852 in Washington. Over the next few months, Charles Francis arranged preparation of the crypt. Louisa's body remained in Washington. On Dec. 15, 1852, the bodies of the Sixth President and First Lady Louisa Catherine are moved to the crypt in a coordinated ceremony."

After Louisa's body arrives by train, she is moved directly from the train station to the church.

A few other facts about the Adams family vault:

In Paul Nagel's book, Descent from Glory, Four Generations of the John Adams Family and John Quincy Adams, he describes the sequence for JQA's and Louisa Catherine's burials:

• JQA dies on Feb. 23, 1848. His body is brought back for burial and is in Quincy on March 11, 1848. A funeral service takes place in First Parish Church. "At 5 p.m. the coffin was taken across the road and placed in the crowded family vault. . . For four years John Quincy rested in the old burying ground with many relatives, his brother Thomas, his sister Nabby, his two sons, and others nearly so dear."

• Louisa Catherine Adams dies May 15, 1852 in Washington. Her son Charles Francis Adams "hastened back to Quincy, leaving his mother's coffin behind until he could arrange for his parents to be placed next to his grandparents."

• John Quincy Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams are placed in the crypt, Dec. 15, 1852. "JQA's casket, draped with velvet, was brought to the church as Louisa's was delivered from the railway depot, where it had arrived from Washington. The interment may not have been completed until the 16th, because JQA's granite tomb was not big enough for his coffin and had to be enlarged."

There are many other notable graves in Hancock Cemetery. Among them:

Henry Adams (1646) – the great-great-grandfather of John Adams – who emigrated from England in the first years of the Massachusetts colony. How different local and the nation's history may have been had Henry not "emigrated for reasons of conscience."

Rev. John Hancock (1744) – father of the future Patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Rev. Hancock served as minister of United First Parish Church from 1726 until his death in 1744. It is widely assumed that the cemetery came to be named for Rev. Hancock but some local historians believe the cemetery took its name from its location on Hancock Street.

Col. John Quincy (1767) – served more than 30 years in the colonial legislature, including 12 as speaker. The grandfather of Abigail Adams, the town of Quincy was named in his honor in 1792.

Abner Packard (1902) – commander of the town militia unit that responded to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers in the Civil War in April, 1861.

On any given afternoon, you'll find cemetery visitors meandering throughout the cemetery, reading markers and pausing in silence. Some graves are decorated with American flags, identifying the deceased as veterans of the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil War.

Hancock Cemetery is a must-stop along the city's historic trail. Visitors will learn more about Quincy and its early history.

Clipper Ships From Quincy

Some of the finest specimen of the famed clipper ships, sailing vessels that carried cargoes to and from China at high speeds, were launched and fitted in Quincy.

The last was the "Red Cloud," launched Nov. 24, 1877, from the shipyard of Deacon George Thomas at Granite Wharf in Quiny Point where Twin Rivers Technology is located today.

Second Phase Of Hancock Cemetery Restoration

After completing a gravestone restoration project last year, Hancock Cemetery is in line to receive $500,000 in conservation funds which will go towards further upkeep of the historic burial ground.

The work to be completed in the next phase of conservation includes restoration of the historic iron fence along Hancock Street, replacing the chain link fence with a historically appropriate iron picket and granite pier fence, pruning selected trees that currently endanger burial sites, and replacing the asphalt pathways with concrete.

Money for this second phase of the project comes from a $190,000 grant award from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and a recommendation for $310,000 from Quincy Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds.

The first phase of the cemetery restoration was completed in August 2014. It consisted of treatment and resetting of more than 260 grave markers at a cost of $113,000.

The site, located next to the old City Hall building, was first used as a burial ground in the 1620s when English settlers first arrived in what is now Quincy. More than 1,000 are buried in the site, including the Rev. John Hancock (father of the signer of Declaration of Independence) and Josiah Quincy. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine, were also buried in the cemetery before they were moved to the United First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents).

The project is being undertaken by Historic Gravestone Services of New Salem, Mass. The company's owner, Ta Mara Conde, has restored gravestones in cemeteries throughout the U.S. and Canada, including local historic cemeteries in Newton and Malden. Quincy's Hancock Cemetery, she explained, contains numerous unique images worth preserving.

SECOND PHASE of the restoration of Hancock Cemetery in Quincy Center includes refurbushing the cemetery's historic iron fence along Hancock Street. The first phase of the project, completed in 2014, called for treating and resetting some 260 grave markers.

"It's not just the important people – for me it's the stones. I like the important people too, don't get me wrong, but these were hand-carved and they were hand-carved by certain people," Conde said.

"You have some really unique images over there. For Quincy it's important but for the rest of the nation it's important, too. These are images that are gone. These are important Puritan images that were brought about."

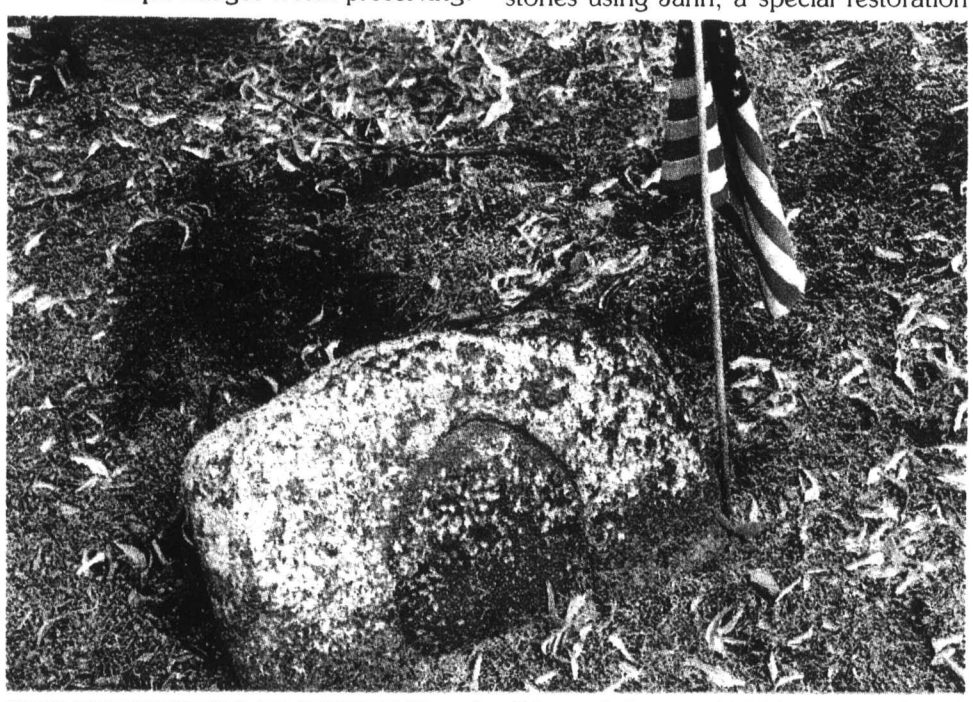
The project involved removing growths from the stones, creating new bases to set the headstones in, and repairing broken stones using Jahn, a special restoration mortar made in Germany that can match the original color of the grave markers. Some of the cemetery's slate gravestones that have began to delaminate, or peel apart, were also repaired.

The cemetery, Conde noted, still contains a number of original footstones. Unlike most modern cemeteries, graves in the Hancock Cemetery include two markers, one on each end of the body.

"Almost all the graves there would have been laid out in an east-west orientation with the headstone facing west and a footstone facing east. This would be like your bed, with your headboard and your footboard, and the body is in between," Conde said.

"These footstones would be at the end. There are a lot of some still over there, which is wonderful. Some cemeteries lose their footstones, they just grow feet and walk away or something."

Planning for the restoration work began a dozen years ago. At the time the city's Board of Cemetery Managers identified a plan to upgrade the cemetery, including work on the gravestones and eventually landscaping the site, city historian and cemetery board chairman Tom Galvin noted.



THIS INTERESTING GRAVESTONE is for Edmund Quincy (1698) who built the original portion of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road. Note the headstone's hollowed space. Tradition has it the space housed a lead engraving of the family seal but it was removed during the American Revolution and made into bullets.

TOMB OF John Briesler who died in 1836. A veteran of the Revolutionary War, he later served on the household staff of John and Abigail Adams for nearly 20 years, including the Adamses' time in the White House.

GRAVE SITE OF Henry Adams (1646) is Hancock Cemetery's earliest identified grave. Henry Adams was the great-great-grandfather of Second President John Adams. Henry Adams emigrated from England in the first years of the Massachusetts colony.

MARBLE MONUMENT for Josiah Quincy, Jr. (1775) and Abigail Phillips Quincy (1798). Josiah Quincy was a colleague of John Adams in the early patriot causes and his co-counsel at the Boston Massacre trial. He died at age 30 while returning from pleading the American cause in England. The monument to him and his wife was erected and composed by their son, the third Josiah, who served as mayor of Boston and president of Harvard College.

Josiah Quincy House: Historic Hidden Jewel

The historic Josiah Quincy House – which received $44,000 in renovations last year – is one of the city's "hidden jewels," says Nancy Carlisle, senior curator of Collections for Historic New England.

Visitors to the house, located at 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, will learn about how deeply connected the Quincy family was with the nation's history and Boston's history, Carlisle said.

"Three mayors of Boston came from the Quincy family and each of them were very influential in the Boston that we live in today," she says.

The home, built 1770, was part of a 250-acre estate known as the Lower Farm that once reached Quincy Bay and served as the part-time residence to Revolutionary leader Josiah Quincy who lived there until his death in 1787. While the Quincy family moved frequently between their seven homes located in Quincy, Boston, and Cambridge, the Quincy House seemed to be their true home.

"This was the house that spoke to their souls. This was the one they wrote about how great it was to get back here," Carlisle said.

The renovations, according to Carlisle, show the home as it appears in a series of photos taken in the 1880s; a time when the interior was heavily photographed and the last Quincy family members lived in the home. The house also tells the story of Eliza Susan Quincy who was the daughter of Mayor of Boston Josiah Quincy III and Eliza Susan Morton. Eliza Susan Quincy not only lived in the home, but made it her duty to heavily document the items contained within through the use of detailed journals and diaries and meticulously painted watercolors.

"She wrote this extensive memorandum of what things were, where they came from," Carlisle said.

Also contained in her writings are accounts of visits by Benjamin Franklin, a Patriot who made such an impression on the Quincys that they prepared a bedroom for him on the upper floor of the home, aptly naming it "The Franklin Bedroom." Other notable visitors include U.S. Senator Daniel Webster and French aristocrat Lafayette.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

"The Quincys were very much like the Kennedys in their day in that they were linked to cultural and historic figures of tremendous note so what went on here is amazing," said Carlisle. She noted the connection between the Quincy and Adams families. "The Quincys and the Adamses both felt the Quincys were more important because they were significantly richer."

The family amassed their fortune through subterfuge, she said. Colonel Josiah Quincy owned a ship in partnership with his brother-in-law who was an English merchant and the two successfully captured a Spanish ship loaded with valuables and gold. The booty was divided between them and the resulting wealth was enough to sustain the Quincy family for 150 years. A painting of their ship currently hangs at the Quincy Historical Society. A reproduction is displayed in the Quincy House.

The wealth of the family was reflected not only in the size of their estate, but in the furnishings within their two-story home. Upon entering, visitors would step upon a floor cloth, now long gone but reproduced by an expert on historic decorative paint with the help of a portion of Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds allotted for the project. The base of the floor covering is canvas covered in ten layers of gesso. The acrylic paint used to create the piece's intricate pattern is protected by multiple layers of varnish and took over three weeks to complete.

The wallpaper was reproduced and its pattern was based on the 1880s photos because no remaining samples existed in the home or in other homes of that time period.

A needlework under the stairway which leads to the home's upper level was made by Eliza's great-great aunt who was a woman John Adams had been interested in romantically before meeting Abigail. "He writes about her in lovelorn letters and calls her Orlinda," said Carlisle who noted the piece's exceptional quality for its age.

By the needlework is a small, enhanced photograph of a portrait of Josiah Quincy III who served as the president of Harvard University from 1829-1845. In 1823 he was elected the second mayor of Boston and served six, one-year terms. During his time as mayor, Boston's Quincy Market was built and a systematic reorganization of the city's police and fire departments took place.

The Quincy family entertained, for the most part, in the home's West Parlor which recently was upgraded with the help of a generous donation of time and effort from a member of Historic New England's board of trustees who happens to also be a leading expert in textile reproductions. She recreated era-appropriate curtains for the room, contributing significant savings to the overall cost of the project.

The West Parlor was more formal than the East Parlor, and as such was set up in honor of the family's ancestors. A recreation of a portrait of Colonel Josiah Quincy painted by John Singleton Copley hangs above a fireplace. The original is currently displayed at the Philadelphia currently displayed at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

A settee and mirror that were saved from fires that occurred at Colonel Josiah Quincy's two previous homes are on display. A single chair that is one of a set of eight has been placed in front of the fireplace. The other seven remain in museum collections across the country. Other chairs in the room have been acquired through private auctions as well as on eBay and make up part of Historic New England's collection of objects that have been accumulated over the past 100 years. They are consistent with the style of the era.

"We have a collection of things not related to our houses that's about 65,000 objects," said Carlisle. "A lot of the things here are pulled from that collection and then there are instances where we knew what should be here and we didn't have something in our collections so we purchased at auction or on eBay."

Another item in the West Parlor pulled from the organization's collection is a circa 1815 wooden desk made in Boston. While no photos of the original piece exist, Carlisle and her team of roughly 30 Historic New England employees were able to estimate the appearance of the desk based on the writings of Eliza Susan Quincy.

The home's more actively used East Parlor is notable for its double fireplace which is adorned with tiles which are original to the home and date back to 1770. Carlisle said the tiles, which were created using a technique invented in London in the 1750s called transfer printing, are important to the history of ceramics.

"It became hugely popular. There was a fad for these printed tiles," she said. The tiles in the Quincy House depict everyday events such as a couple enjoying a stroll or a day by the ocean. In other historic Quincy homes they depict scenes from Aesop's Fables or the Bible.

Eliza Susan Quincy at one point in the East Parlor watched John Adams and President James Madison take their leave of each other and wrote in one of her diaries that to watch such an event was "an interesting thing." John Quincy Adams was also a frequent visitor to the house however she was not as impressed by him due to his young age and, at the time, lack of accomplishments when compared to his father.

Silver platters and candle sticks – some solid silver and some plated – on a table in the rear portion of the room are commemorative of Josiah Quincy IV's position as a Temperance leader who brought running water to Boston. "Water was kind of symbolic of that in that people were drinking water and not wine and ale," said Carlisle. The pieces are placed as is depicted in the 1880s photographs and were not meant to be used but rather displayed as a sign of the family's affluence.

A circa 1837 piano in the room which is not original to the home or family will soon be refinished and have its ivory keys – which were luckily saved – put back in place.

Not far from the piano, several blue and white ceramic dining pieces are displayed which are original to the family and are significant to the history of direct trade between the United States and China following the Revolution. "One of the first traders was a guy named Major Shaw and he was a brother-in-law of Abigail Quincy and he brought back things from his first trip to China for her," Carlisle said.

AN ARRAY OF historical figures dating back to the Revolutionary War have visited the Josiah Quincy House including Benjamin Franklin who stayed in this second-floor bedroom, hence known as the Franklin Bedroom.

Renovations to the upstairs bedrooms and hallway include replacing current textiles which are not appropriate to the home's 1880s narrative. The large linen-press in the hallway which is not an original Quincy family piece but is nearly identical to the one they owned will remain as will the two Chinese vases placed next to it which were acquired once trade opened up with the East.

The most important and notable item in the hallway – and possibly the entire home – is a pane of glass unassumingly hanging on a wall beneath an original watercolor of the house done by Eliza Susan Quincy. Etched into it by Colonel Josiah Quincy as he watched British ships evacuate Boston on October 10, 1775 are the words "Governor Gage Sail'd for England with a fair wind." The glass was originally in a window located in the home's monitor roof – a raised structure which runs parallel to the main roof and has windows on each side.

Microscopic paint analysis done in one of the upstairs bedrooms show that the Quincy family did not line their walls with wallpaper, something Carlisle found to be strange for a family of such wealth. "A family this rich would normally have wallpaper," she said. "It was astonishing to me that in the 1880s they didn't have wallpaper. For whatever reason paint analysis shows that the room was painted [mint green]." The room's wooden paneling has also been painted to its original taupe color.

A Japanned high chest placed in the corner is considered to be one of Historic New England's top ten historically significant items. Made in 1745 in Boston, it is one of only a handful of similar items.

"There's about 50 pieces made in Boston that survived with that Japanning and it was once really popular as a way of imitating Chinese lacquer when you couldn't afford to import Chinese lacquer," Carlisle said.

The Franklin Bedroom, as the name implied, was where Franklin slept during his visits however it was actually the bedroom of Eliza Susan Quincy. Bedding will be replaced in the next year to more accurately portray the time period. The room's carpets and rugs, much like in the rest of the house, are not original to the home. The last occupant of the home, Abigail Phillips Quincy, died in 1893. Her nephew, Josiah Quincy IV who had already built himself a home called the Josiah Quincy Mansion – constructed in1848 and demolished in 1969 – on what is now the Eastern Nazarene College campus, sold the entire Lower Farm property, part of which was later acquired by an elderly New Hampshire couple "who were thankfully respectful of the history of the house so they didn't do a lot of work on it and they lived here part-time so they lived in it very lightly," said Carlisle. Surviving, distant Quincy family members grouped together and purchased the home following the death of the elderly couple and gifted it to Historic New England in 1937. While there are still surviving cousins, nephews, and great-nephews of the Quincy family, they are far removed and not entirely directly related to the home.

About 1,000 people tour the Josiah Quincy Home yearly, a number Carlisle, who has been the home's curator for 28 years, would like to see rise as a result of the renovations.

In total, at least $80,000 in renovations have taken place over the past two years.

Other restoration plans include restoring the garage which is significant in early 20th century history, creating more room for program space for school children who tour the home to learn the history of the Quincy family. Carlisle also anticipates upgrades will be made to the exterior of the home, including the garden, in the future.

Thomas Morton's Merry Time At Merrymount

It was a strange tableau that took place that May day in 1627 on the hill overlooking Boston Bay in a land where the righteous Pilgrims ruled.

There were the English adventurers (don't ever call them colonists) from across the sea, and the local Indians, or what was left of them after a visit from the plague, curious to witness this strange white man's way.

Together they stripped an 80-foot pine tree of its bark, hauled it to the top of the hill, attached a rack of buckhorn to its peak and raised it on the hill called Ma-re Mount (hill by the sea) or more commonly Merrymount.

Then they broke out the beer and cider and, Englishman and Indian together, they danced around their Maypole in a hedonistic ritual that was guaranteed to leave the Pilgrims, 40 miles away in Plymouth, aghast.

"Drinke and be merry, merry, merry boyes," wrote their leader.

"Let all your delight be in hymen's joyes...uncover thy head, and fear no harme, for here's good liquor to keep it warm."

"Lasses in beaver coats come away. Ye shall be welcome to us night and day."

The leader was Morton of Merrymount, a man whose name, rightly or wrongly, has lived on in infamy.

Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn Gent., as he signed himself, first arrived in the area that became known as Old Braintree and later Quincy in 1622 as secretary to Andrew Weston, founder of the Wessagusset colony in nearby Weymouth.

The Wessagusset colony did not survive but Morton, a lawyer and sportsman as well as a merrymaker, could not forget the clear streams that teemed with fish and the forests that abounded with game in the new land.

He was back again in 1625 as a minor partner in a trading venture led by a Captain Wollaston, a man so obscure that his first name has been lost in nearly 400 years of history, although modern research by historian Hobart Holly has indicated it was probably Richard.

Captain Wollaston was so disappointed by the lack of business opportunity in New England that he packed up his partners and most of their indentured servants and left for greener fields in Virginia, leaving Lieutenant Fitcher in charge.

Morton stayed behind, too, and it wasn't long before Fitcher was ousted and Morton, who was described by the Pilgrim's Governor William Bradford as a man with "more craft than honesty," became The Man, and immediately proclaimed himself "Lord of Misrule."

In the words of Governor Bradford, he maintained "a school of atheism," his people spent their time "quaffing and drinking – in great excess" and they were "inviting Indian women for their consorts, dancing and frisking together – and worse practices."

And, worst of all, Morton and his men were trading guns and rum to the Indians in exchange for pelts and were training said Indians in the use of firearms so they could hunt for more pelts, a move that frightened the wits out of the Pilgrims.

Could it be that, far from the "Lord of Misrule" as he claimed, Morton was just a sharp businessman, the Sam Walton of his day, who cut into Plymouth's profits by treating the Indians more or less like equals and joining in their fun and games. Either way, it was plain that Morton had to go.

Thus is was that in the spring of 1628, Captain Myles Standish – an angry little man of unimposing stature whom Morton derided as "Captain Shrimpe" – and an army of eight men were dispatched to Merrymount to solve the problem once and for all. It turned out to be an easy task.

Morton knew they were coming and prepared to resist. But the night-long preparations soon turned into a party and when Standish and his soldiers arrived at dawn, the defenders of Merrymount were too drunk to resist and surrendered without firing a shot.

That was the Pilgrims' version. In his memoirs, Morton insisted he was ready to fight but his men turned out to be a cowardly lot and he had to give up the struggle in order to avoid bloodshed and was beaten up for his pains by the victorious Pilgrim army of eight.

Whatever, Morton was arrested and taken to Plymouth where Standish wanted him hanged. But gentler heads prevailed and he was put aboard a ship for England, an action that so enraged the captain that he had to be restrained.

Back in London, Morton was charged with disturbing the safety of the Plymouth colony but the charges were dropped when he presented himself to the Crown as a good Anglican who was persecuted by those dissenters from Plymouth.

The trading post at Merrymount was allowed to remain but, in 1629, a sterner opponent arrived on the scene in John Endicott and the Puritans, who established the Massachusetts Bay Colony in Boston, a scant 10 miles from the hill beside the bay.

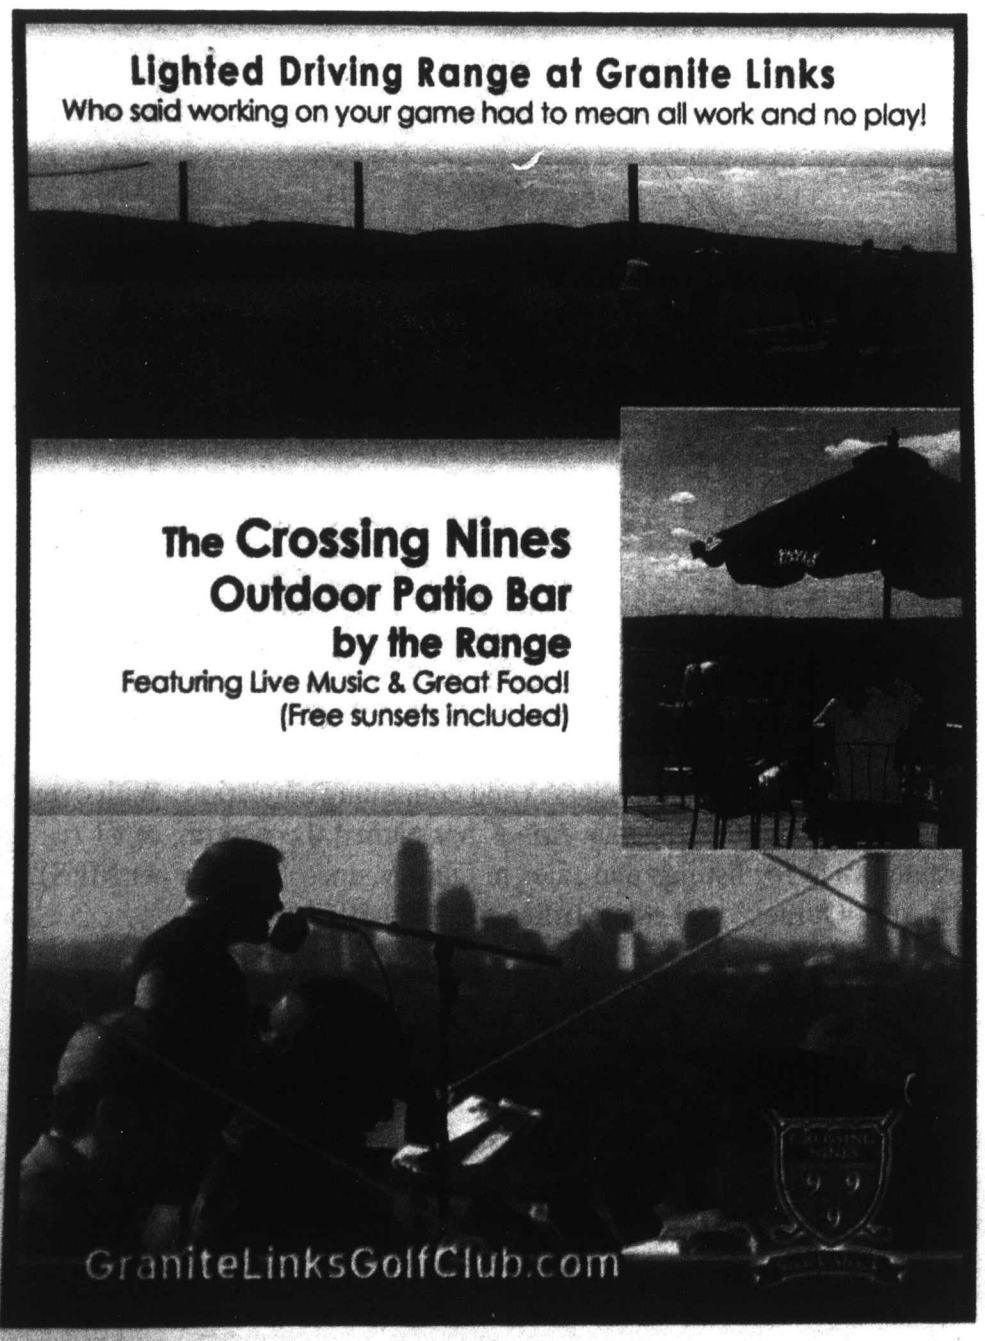
Endicott ordered Morton's Maypole cut down, which it was, and the name of his trading post changed from Merrymount to Mount Dagon after the Biblical sea god of the Philistines, which it wasn't.

Morton's brief episode of saturnalia is recalled today in a section of Quincy and a park called Merrymount.

Fog Halts Mail

An attempt to deliver mail by air from the Squantum NAS to the SS Leviathon, nearly 400 miles out to sea, failed in 1927 when the fliers couldn't find the ship in the fog.

Lt. Clarence H. Schildhauer and his crew of three searched for three hours before giving up.



U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

John Adams 'Father'

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did harass the Redcoats in a number of local skirmishes during 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a Quincy company of 300 men put out in whaleboats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whale-boats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

USS Lexington Led Search For Amelia Earhart

When Amelia Earhart, once the part-owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on the around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three-week search for her.

She has never been found.

Nation's First Commercial Railroad Was Here

The Granite Railway

It was the darnedest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned woodcarver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today, much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Avenue in West Quincy. It is open to the public until dusk year round. There is no admission charge.

Quincy Granite Famed The World Over

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks

There was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the old Quincy granite quarries – many of them filled today – swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just growed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the "Stone Age" of American architecture. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

SOLOMON WILLARD GRAVE SITE (right) is located in Hall Place Cemetery, off Crescent Street in West Quincy. The monument made from Quincy granite reads: "A public spirited and patriotic citizen, an accomplished architect whose memory will always be associated with the monument on Bunker Hill." Willard designed the Bunker Hill Monument in 1825, and construction began in 1827. Willard discovered satisfactory granite quarries for the stone in Quincy, and the granite for the monument came from there. Willard revolutionized the techniques to cut and handle the slabs of stone in what became known as the Bunker Hill Quarry, which evolved into a major industry for the town. Willard was also the architect for Quincy's "Town Hall" which today is the Mayor James R. McIntyre Government Center or Old City Hall. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

QUARRY – For over 100 years, beginning early in the 19th century, Quincy's leading industry was centered on its vast deposits of very unique and high-grade granite. The granite was prized for use in building and large structures and later for monuments. Over 50 quarries were opened – this one provided granite for the Bunker Hill Monument.

Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

By AL BINA
Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

For years it has been talked about having a museum to preserve the rich granite history of Quincy and the surrounding towns, which also had quarry operations. There have been several attempts, but all have faded in the past. There was a glimmer of hope to establish a museum when the capping operation of Quincy's land fill and the construction of Granite Links Golf Course moved forward. A portion of the tipping fees for allowing Mass Highway to bring in fill from the Big Dig Tunnel Project was to be set aside to construct a museum. Unfortunately these funds evaporated into the construction of Ricciuti Drive and the golf course project.

In 2009, the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum was formed and incorporated in Massachusetts and received its 501c(3) designation from the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit organization and has received all the state required certificates for a non-profit. What started as a small group of Quincy residents has grown to a membership of over 175 – all dedicated to saving the history of the granite industry. Membership ranges from Maine to Florida and west to Ohio, with most having a connection through generations of family members who had some part in the granite industry.

The Museum has received many family artifacts connected to the granite industry including tools, equipment, photos, drawings, maps, books, granite salesman samples, and extensive written information and family photos of individuals who worked in the industry.

At the turn of the century a large portion of the inhabitants of Quincy worked in the granite industry or worked supporting the industry in transportation, in tool making and in the manufacturing of machinery for the industry. The granite industry played a large role in the growth of Quincy bringing many ethnic groups to the city. The first group of immigrants who worked in the granite industry were the Irish followed by the Finnish and Swedish and then the Scottish and finally the Italians. The ethnic history, cultures and customs that were brought to Quincy will be an important part of the Museum.

Many descendants of these granite workers have donated family photos related to the granite industry. These photos are not found in any collection of historical photos of Quincy. Two examples are shown here. The first is an original photo of the Clark & Pearce Granite Company stone shed, owned by George Clark, far left. The photo was donated by George Clark's granddaughter, Marion Colclough of Quincy. The second photo is another original photo of the Sampo Granite Company stone shed that was owned by Andrew Nisula. Photo given by his grandson Paul Nisula formerly of Quincy. The two donated photos are examples of individuals who want to save our rich granite history.

The goal of the Museum is to construct a 3,200 square foot museum adjacent to the historic Lyons Turning Mill on Quarry Hill Drive, West Quincy. The mill site was chosen because of its historical building remains and also the site has one of the few remaining quarries that has not been filled in.

MARKER COMMEMORATES the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace as the first commercial blast iron furnace in the United States. The remains of the blast furnace – located near Hall Cemetery at 61 Crescent St. in West Quincy – has been designated an Historical Landmark by the American Society for Metals and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The blast furnace produced iron from bog ore dug from the bottom of brooks and swamps. Photo below shows the historic site from Crescent Street.

First Iron Works

America's Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony (Did someone cry "Nepotism?"), went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworkers in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop 1,000 pounds in capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of who ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America.

Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the ironworkers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest industrial magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy Iron proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England; cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Remains of the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace are located at 61 Crescent St., West Quincy. The site is open and free to the public.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

AMELIA EARHART

HARRIET QUIMBY

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 20,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast-developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant, became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

" . . . Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

AMELIA EARHART exhibit at the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. displays this bright red Lockheed 5B Vega. Earhart set many of her aviation records flying this plane that she affectionately called her "Little Red Bus." In 1932, she flew it alone across the Atlantic Ocean, then flew it nonstop across the United States – both firsts for a woman. Earhart flew some of her aviation training exercises out of the former Dennison Airport in 1927 - later the Naval Air Station - located in Quincy's Squantum section.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where, for the next seven years, thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

The national ensign was hauled down for the last time on the morning of Dec. 23, 1953, and the training of Weekend Warriors moved to the South Weymouth Naval Air Facility, home base of anti-submarine blimp patrols since 1942.

Reserve Capt. Harry Sartoris, the last commander of the NAS Squantum, flew the last plane out of the old base and landed the first plane at the new NAS South Weymouth, where he was to become the first commander.

The NAS South Weymouth was an operational U.S. Navy airfield for 55 years. It closed in 1997.

BETHLEHEM'S FIRST GREAT vessel was the battleship Nevada, launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946.

THE 35,000-TON battleship Massachusetts was launched Sept. 23, 1941 – a full 15 months ahead of schedule. The Quincy-built battleship sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

Quincy Shipyard: Thomas Watson's Other Invention

7-Masted Schooner To Nuclear And Super Ships

It began with a 50-horsepower marine engine painstakingly constructed by the new firm of F.O. Wellington & Co. for a small passenger steamer out of Damariscotta, Maine, in the early 1880s.

In the 1970s, the yard produced 939-foot super tankers built by General Dynamics Quincy Division for Burmah Tankers Ltd of England, capable of transporting 125,000 cubic meters of liquefied natural gas across the Atlantic Ocean. In the intervening 90-odd years, more than 1,000 ships, including one of the mightiest battlewagons of them all, USS Massachusetts, were built at what was known locally as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy, with its more than 27 miles of waterfront and deepwater channels, had been in the forefront of American shipbuilding since 1696 when the ketch "Unity" was built at Ship Cove, the site of the present shipyard.

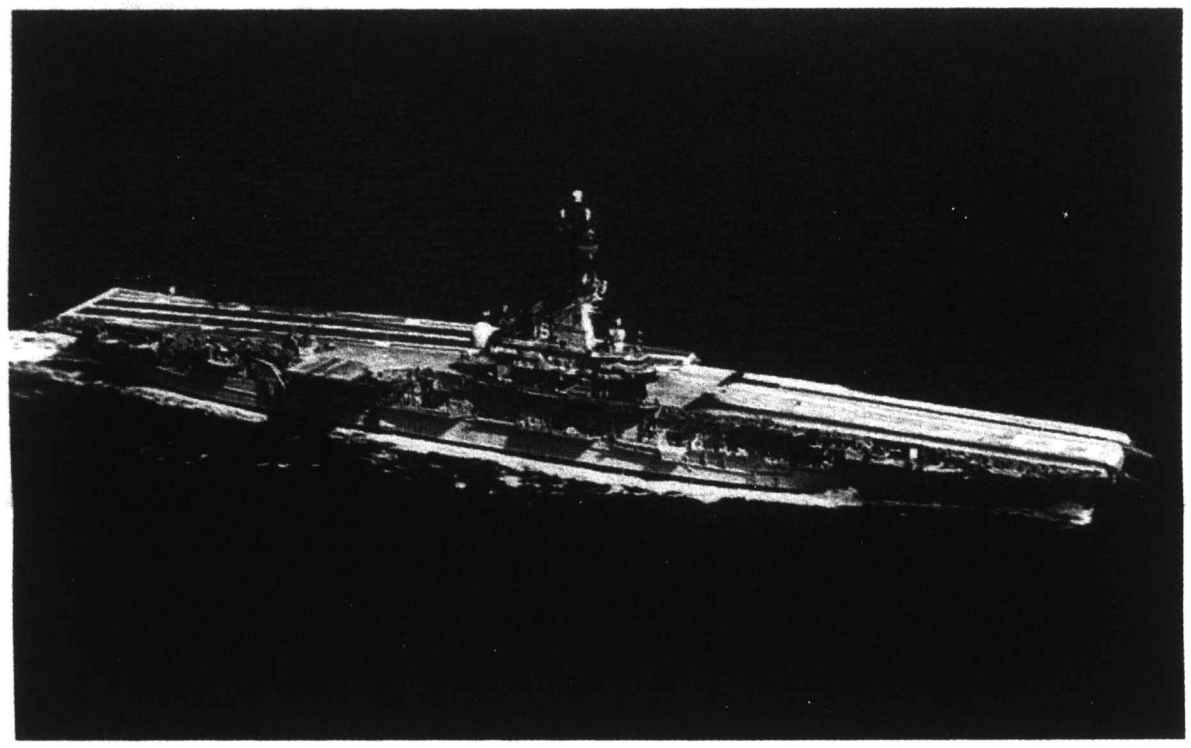
The 116-foot "Massachusetts," in its time the largest merchant vessel built in North America, was launched for the China trade in 1789 at the shipyard of Daniel Briggs in Philip's Head at Germantown.

Unfortunately, she started a life as a jinx ship when a soothsayer, Moll Pitcher of Lynn, forecast that the ship and all her crew would be lost. It took three tries to fill her complement for her maiden voyage.

Massachusetts reached Canton without mishap, Moll Pitcher notwithstanding, and was sold for $65,000 to the Danish East India Co.

Deacon George Thomas turned out 32 clipper ships over 23 years from this shipyard at Quincy Point, the last of them the graceful 2,200-ton "Red Cloud," launched in 1877 when Thomas was 82 years old.

It was in the early 1880s that Thomas A. Watson, relaxing from his labors with Alexander Graham Bell on the telephone, began making marine engines in a little machine shop on the Fore River in Braintree in partnership with Frank O. Wellington.



USS LEXINGTON (CV/CVA/CVS/CVT/AVT-16) was an Essex-class aircraft carrier built at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy during World War II for the United States Navy. The ship - nicknamed "The Blue Ghost" – was the recipient of 11 battle stars. She was the fifth U.S. Navy ship to bear the name Lexington in honor of the Revolutionary War Battle of Lexington. The aircraft carrier was decommissioned in 1991 with an active service life longer than any other Essex-class ship.

It was struggling along as the Fore River Engine Co. until the USS Maine blew up in Havana Harbor and the Spanish-American War of 1898 placed a premium on naval vessels.

Fore River Engine Co. landed contracts to build the torpedo boat destroyers "Lawrence" and "MacDonough" and, late in 1899, the 3,100-ton cruiser "Des Moines."

In order to launch "Des Moines," the Fore River Engine Co. moved two miles north on the river to Quincy Neck where the stream was wider and deeper. That's where the shipyard remained until it closed in 1986.

It became the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. in 1901, the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. in 1904, and a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co. in 1913.

Bethlehem's first great vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946. She had to be sunk by naval gunfire.

At the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. during World War I, the Yard and its affiliate, the Victory Plant in Squantum, turned out more destroyers than all the other shipyards in the country combined.

But it was in World War II that the Fore River Shipyard won its international spurs.

On a visit to Quincy in the summer of 1941 as war clouds gathered on the Atlantic and Pacific horizons, Admiral Ernest J. King exhorted workers at the Yard: "You build 'em and we'll fight 'em!"

And build 'em they did!

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), the Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena," were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944). HMS Reynolds was built in a record 24 ½ days.

At its peak of wartime employment on Jan. 15, 1943, the shipyard employed 32,000 men and women in Quincy and its auxiliary yard in Hingham. The U.S. Navy gave it five consecutive "E" (for excellence) awards.

Among the ships launched at Fore River:

The battleship Massachusetts, 35,000 tons, launched Sept. 23, 1941, a full 15 months ahead of schedule; sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

The aircraft carriers Lexington II, Wasp II, built in 20 months from keel to launch; Bunker Hill, John Hancock, built and delivered in a record 14 ½ months; and Philippine Sea, which went to Antarctica with Admiral Richard E. Byrd in 1947.

The cruiser Quincy II launched June 26, 1943, which supported the invasions of Normandy on D-Day, 1944, and southern France, and transported President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the summit conference at Yalta in 1945.

The Yard also claimed to have originated that most mysterious of World War II graffiti, "Kilroy was here!"

Seems there was a checker named Jim Kilroy, whose job it was to go around and count the number of holes filled by each riveter, who was paid by piece work. Each rivet Kilroy counted was checked off so that it would not be counted twice.

Some wily riveters discovered that if they erased Kilroy's check mark, the counter on the next shift would credit them again. So, instead of a mere check, he would scrawl on the ship "Kilroy was here!"

The Yard was turning out ships so fast that there was no time to paint over the words and Kilroy's name began popping up in the most unlikely places all over the world, to the delight of soldiers and sailors everywhere.

After the war, the Fore River Shipyard turned out an amazingly diverse number of ships.

There were the twin passenger and cargo vessels, Constitution and Independence, for American Export Lines; the nuclear subs Sunfish and Whale; the Apollo tracking ships Vanguard, Redstone, and Mercury.

There was the world's first nuclear-powered surface vessel, the Long Beach; and the 108,500-ton super tanker, SS Manhattan, the largest merchant ship built in the United States, capable of carrying 38 million gallons of oil at 18 knots.

The Shipyard was purchased by General Dynamics in 1964 and, after a brief slump in the shipbuilding market, began a comeback with the recent launching of the first LNGs designed to transport liquefied natural gas from Algeria to the States.

General Dynamics ceased shipbuilding operations in the mid-1980s and closed the yard in 1986. Today, several non-shipbuilding businesses operate at the location which is still referred to as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy Won Bet

Shipyards in Quincy and San Francisco made a $10,000 bet in 1918 on which could build the most destroyers in that year.

Quincy not only won, building 18 destroyers to San Fran's six, but added 10 submarines and six merchant vessels as well.

Quincy-Built Ships Played Prominent Role In World War II

USS Quincy Took FDR, Churchill To Yalta

The President and the Prime Minister met on the ship's deck and went on from there to the conference that would decide the future of a world at war.

The President was Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister was Winston Churchill and the ship was the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Quincy, the second of that name to perform heroically in World War II.

The first time was 70 years ago – Feb. 2, 1945 – and the place was the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, where the President met the Prime Minister and together they flew on to the Yalta Conference in the Russian Crimea.

After that brief respite for diplomacy at Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II 70 years ago.

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, with great fanfare, was one of scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, which employed 32,000 men and women in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak Jan. 15, 1943.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935, was on peacetime convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 to shell Japanese installations on the Solomon Island of Guadalcanal and offer protection to the Marines who landed there in the first American offensive of World War II in August.

She was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy force and sunk after taking many direct hits in what became known as the Battle of Savo Island.

The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're going down between them – give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles up river in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone: "Watson, come here; I want you."

The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U.S. Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and two more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll, and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

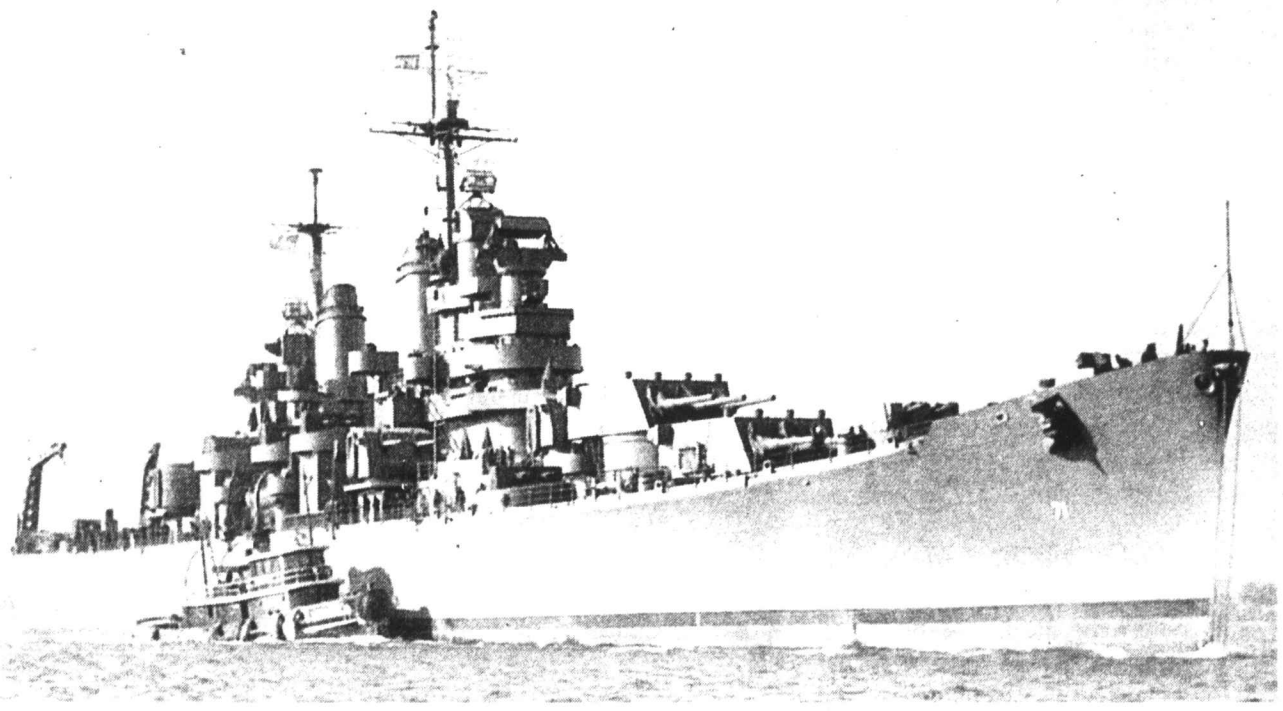
An adjunct facility, called the Victory Plant, had to be built to handle the U.S. Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 and a half days from keel-laying to delivery.

A Naval officer named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the yard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl – Catherine Vance Freeman – daughter of a former city councillor.

When, shortly after Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated him on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue once again to roll up its collective sleeves and get busy.



THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

Starting on Dec. 7, 1941, for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landship ships tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 and a half days.

It was in a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set the world records by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 and a half working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the mighty Vichy-French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she could be turned over to the Germans.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and the assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the U.S. Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

WINSTON CHURCHILL

CHESTER NIMITZ

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "The Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional Navy contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship – the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan – launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful supertanker, which was later converted into the world's largest ice-breaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circled the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge, in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts undertaken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a landmark at the yard, but was dismantled in 2008.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-year-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

Quincy Shipyard History At Battleship Cove

By JAMES GAY

In 1938, the Fore River Yard was awarded the contract for building one of the newest battleships in the Navy, the USS Massachusetts (BB-59). Construction began on July 20, 1939 and due to the skill and craftsmanship of her workers, she was launched seven months ahead of schedule. On September 23, 1941, over 7,000 people were on hand to witness Mrs. Charles F. Adams christen the 3,500 ton battleship. With the world at war, she was commissioned on May12, 1942.

In October she joined up with the Western Naval Task Force and fought in the naval battle of Casablanca during the invasion of North Africa. Firing what is believed to have been the first 16 inch shell of World War II, she destroyed the Jean Bart along with several other ships.

Arriving in the Pacific in March of 1943, she steamed with the fast carrier task forces as they attacked the Japanese in the Gilbert Islands. In January of 1944 she protected the carriers of Task Force 58 as they drove the Japanese from the Marshall Islands. After she blasted Kwajalein Atoll at the end of the month, she next turned her guns on Truk. For the next several months she steamed with the fast carrier task forces in strikes against the Marianas and Caroline Islands. In May she headed to the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard for overhaul and repairs.

The veteran battleship returned to the war zone and was with Admiral Halsey during the Battle of Leyte Gulf. In December she survived a typhoon that sank three destroyers with the loss of almost 800 sailors. Alternating with the famous 3rd and 5th Fleets, she protected the carriers from kamikazes as she steamed off Iwo Jima and Okinawa in 1945.

After steaming through another typhoon in June, she shelled Kamaishi, Honshu. Two weeks later she destroyed factories on Hamamatsu and then returned to bombard Kamaishi on Aug. 9. It was in this action that it is believed she fired the last 16 inch shell of World War II.

From her commissioning in 1942, the Massachusetts had steamed more than 225,000 miles, took part in 35 engagements, sank several enemy ships, shot down 18 enemy aircraft, saved the lives of seven pilots and never lost a man. The Massachusetts was decommissioned in 1947 and placed in the mothball fleet in Norfolk, Virginia.

In 1963, old and technically obsolete, the Navy planned to scrap the old battleship. When former crew members learned of the Navy's plan, they began the fight to save their beloved 'Big Mamie.' Through tremendous effort, hard work, and perseverance, the committee raised enough money and support to bring the veteran battleship back to her home state in1965. Quincy school children raised over $1,000.00 to help save her. The Massachusetts became the commonwealth's official World War II Memorial in 1968.

The destroyer USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. (DD-850) was named in honor of the oldest son of Joseph and Rose Kennedy. Construction began in April 1945 and she was launched by Jean Kennedy on July 26, 1945. Commissioned at the Boston Navy Yard in December 1945, she was based in Newport, Rhode Island, and spent the next several years making deployments with the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

During the Korean War, she provided direct fire support to the troops ashore,

BATTLESHIP MASSACHUSETTS was among the many ships that were built at the former Fore River Shipyard for the U.S. Navy during World War II. This photo was taken on Sept. 22, 1941. Hull number 1478 would wait one more day until she officially received her name at the time honored christening ceremony. Just in front of the bow can be seen the launch platform from which Mrs. Charles Francis Adams would christen her the next day. Her husband was the former Secretary of the Navy and a member of Quincy's most famous family. Today, the Massachusetts is among the attractions at Battleship Cove in Fall River. The Cove is the subject of a recently released pictorial book "Battleship Cove," written by Quincy resident James Gay. Photo Courtesy James Gay

ANOTHER QUINCY-BUILT, the destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., is also part of the Battleship Cove Museum in Fall River. This photo, taken July 3, 1945, shows an aerial view of the destroyer at the Fore River Shipyard. By July 3 of that year, all of her machinery, such as boilers and engines, had been installed and her hull was almost finished. The turrets of her two forward guns, Mount 51 and Mount 52, can be seen directly in the middle of the picture. Over in the left hand corner is the Fore River Draw Bridge which leads out to Boston Harbor's south channel.

Thomas Watson Wins New Shipyard Bridge

The narrow wooden bridge that spanned the Fore River at its mouth proved to be an early impediment to building large ships at Thomas A. Watson's Quincy yard.

So Watson not only lobbied for a new bridge but won the contract to build it in 1902 in time for the cruiser Des Moines to get out for her sea trials.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

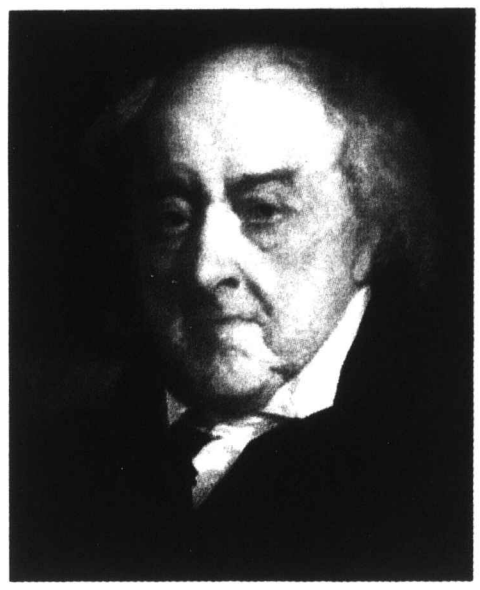
Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannons roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.



JOHN ADAMS

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

One Notable Church Visitor

UNITED FIRST PARISH Church has attracted visitors from all the world, including historical figures. On July 25, 1951, General Douglas MacArthur visited the church and placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. With him are Mrs. MacArthur, Mayor Thomas Burgin and City Historian William Edwards. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine." Charles Flagg Photo screened aircraft carriers, and provided plane guard duties. She served a stint in the Formosa Patrol and helped bombard the City of Wonsan. With the other destroyers of Destroyer Squadron 8, Kennedy steamed west to complete a circuit of the globe and returned to Newport on August 9, 1951.

In 1961 she was modernized with the latest technology and upgraded with two new weapons systems, Anti-Submarine Rocket (ASROC) and Drone Anti-Submarine Helicopter (DASH). After serving as a viewing platform for President Kennedy and First Lady Jackie during the America's Cup Races in 1962, she left Newport to defend America during the Cuban Missile Crisis. With the world on the brink of nuclear war, she stopped and boarded the freighter Marucla on October 26, 1962.

In 1970 Jackie Kennedy, Caroline and John were once aboard her again to watch the America's Cup races off Newport. Decommissioned in 1973, she opened to the public in 1974 and is the official Massachusetts memorial to those killed in the Korean and Vietnam Wars. The Kennedy is the last Massachusetts-built Destroyer in existence.

Located on the waterfront in historic Fall River, Massachusetts, Battleship Cove is a nonprofit maritime museum and war memorial that is home to the largest and most diverse collection of preserved US Navy ships in the world. It is the Commonwealth's official memorial for September 11th and the official veterans' memorial for World War II and the Korean, Vietnam and Persian Gulf Wars.

In addition to the Massachusetts and Kennedy, visitors can tour the World War II Submarine USS Lionfish (SS-298) and view two historic World War II PT-Boats. Through the museum's 'Nautical Nights' program, Boy and Girl Scouts can sleep aboard the Battleship and learn what it was like to serve aboard a Navy ship in World War II.

Last May, Quincy resident James Gay published a book about Battleship Cove that is part of Arcadia Publishing's Images of America Series. The work includes over 200 photographs of the museum's exhibits and is available in the museum's gift shop and on amazon.com.

The opening in August 2011 of the only outdoor multimedia reenactment of Pearl Harbor anywhere marked the beginning of an exciting new phase at Battleship Cove. The dynamic "The Pearl Harbor Experience" brings to life this seminal moment in American history with archive film, state-of-the art special effects and surround-sound. As a leading historical and cultural destination for visitors from all over the world, Battleship Cove is providing the opportunity to relive the lessons of the 1941 surprise attack on Pearl Harbor in a way that speaks to the technologically sophisticated audience of today...and tomorrow.

Sea St. Intersection Improvements Eyed

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will spend $1.2 million to design improvements for a portion of Sea Street, including the road's busy intersection with Quincy Shore Drive.

The City Council on Monday night authorized the city to borrow up to $1,215,000 for the project – $765,000 for completing the design and $450,000 for acquisition of rights of way needed for the improvements.

The council also approved a $950,000 bond to pay the city's share of the cost to improve the intersection of Hancock Street and Squantum Street in North Quincy; that project will be completed by this fall.

Designs for the Sea Street project are almost at the 25 percent stage; the money approved Monday night will allow the designs to be brought to the 100 percent stage. The project will include improvements to other intersections along Sea Street in addition to the one with Quincy Shore Drive.

"Quincy Shore Drive – long rated a failing intersection – is a key part of this project," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said. "The other area that is a chronic problem for us is the Braintree Ave., Riverside Ave. intersection as it connects to Palmer [Street] and also the Curlew Road bump out in Adams Shore between the Hofbrau and Dunkin' Donuts.

Personal Property Tax Exemption Raised To $10,000

By SCOTT JACKSON

Nearly half of Quincy's businesses will no longer be required to pay personal property taxes after the City Council approved a tenfold increase in the personal property tax exemption.

The council on Monday night approved raising the personal property tax exemption from $1,000 to $10,000 in a 7-1 vote. Businesses pay the personal property tax on the value of all equipment they own – items subject to personal property tax include computers, phone systems, furniture and utility poles. Personal property is taxed at the same rate as commercial and industrial property.

Peter Moran, chairman of the city's Board of Assessors, said 2,192 business owners received

Abigail's Daffodils In Full Bloom At Peace field

More than 3,000 daffodil bulbs blossomed this spring at the Adams National Historical Site, a colorful sign of a joint effort between the Adams National Historic Neighborhood Associaton and the Park.

Last fall, the Adams National Historic Neighborhood Association (ANHNA) donated funds to purchase more than 3,000 replacement bulbs for the Adams National Historical Park Orchard at Peace field. ANHNA has long been interested in preserving, protecting, and enhancing the neighborhood's historic areas and open spaces.

Traditionally, the back lawn at Peace field displayed a variety of spring flowers, especially daffodils. In recent years, however, the number of blooms and the visual effect of these flowers had diminished.

Directed by Facility Manager Kevin Kelly, the groundskeepers at the park spent more than 150 man-hours on the project. Bob Mackenzie, Chris Blood, Steve McCarthy, and Bruce Beck planted a total of 3,200 Yellow Trumpet Daffodils and 500 Crocus bulbs on the northeast side of the Orchard, visible from Adams Street, Newport Avenue and Furnace Brook Parkway.

Now, Quincy residents and visitors to the Adams National Historic Site at 135 Adams St., Quincy can once again see the Orchard full of Abigail's "Daffys."

7-1 Vote OKs $3.5M City Hall Bond

Includes Funding For Foundation, Waterproofing Gutro Opposes, Says Info Submitted Insufficient

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night approved a $3.5 million bond to complete the ongoing renovation project at Old City Hall, which is on pace for completion in August.

Nearly half the money in the new bond – $1.6 million – is for work in progress, some of which began without having a funding source in place, according to Diom O'Connell, the project architect from Holmes and Edwards. Included in that $1.6 million is $520,000 for foundation work and waterproofing; $180,000 for structural work on the new link between Old City Hall and the glass annex building; $208,000 for underpinning/shoring up the nearby Hancock Cemetery; $161,000 for soil work; $94,000 for sanitary work related to the annex; and $75,000 for reuse of historic granite.

Approximately $255,000 is for scheduled work to bring the project to completion, including $103,000 for granite/stone; $39,000 for carpentry; $39,000 for structural work; $25,000 each for code upgrades and mechanical work; and $23,000 for site/civil.

Additional project costs total $898,000. Among those are $200,000 for media build out, $100,000 for the first floor exhibition space, $180,000 for electrical, $175,000 for telephones and security and $145,000 for flooring as well as $65,000 for interim landscaping.

Work at the annex building, including the building of new space for the City Clerk's Office on the second floor, is estimated to cost $303,000. Architectural fees for the remaining work total $50,000 and $355,000 is being borrowed as contingency in case there are additional cost overruns.

The council approved the new bond in a 7-1 vote, with Councillor Doug Gutro opposed and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci absent.

Gutro said the information submitted to the council on where the money would be spent was insufficient. The council was provided a one-page breakdown of the costs; Gutro had requested additional backup when the council approved repurposing $1.2 million from completed capital projects to the City Hall work on April 27 and said he did so again after councillors were provided the one-page list last week.

"I thought I was pretty explicit. I wanted a detailed breakdown of what we were spending the money on, not just a conceptual one-pager on where the money was going to go," Gutro said. "I'm pretending it's my house. I'm going to write a check for

SEAL THE DEAL

Ancient royalty used signet rings to seal important documents. By pressing their ring's flat top surface down on hot sealing wax, they were able to make an impression of the design, coat of arms, or initials that were engraved on the top surface of their rings. While signet rings have remained a popular form of masculine jewelry, more women are choosing to make an impression of their own with signet rings. In addition to being very upscale in their look, signet rings worn by women look edgy. Signets with oval shapes decorated with initials and coats of arms are most popular, while round shapes are a close second. Rectangle, square, and shield shapes are less common but make bigger impressions.

Signet rings are a perfect way to add a personal touch to your jewelry box. Just like an ID bracelet, a signet ring looks even better engraved than it does plain, and it's the sort of piece that has instant heirloom potential. If you're looking for a lovely selection of gemstones, earrings, wedding bands, engagement rings, pendants, and watches, you will find it at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. Happy 90th Birthday, John Gillis

John M. Gillis has been many things during his life.

The lifelong Quincy resident and World War II Marine Corps veteran has worked as a Quincy firefighter, a state auditor, Quincy assistant city clerk and city clerk and Norfolk County commissioner. You could also call John a political trailblazer since he was the first Democrat elected city clerk by the city council in Quincy history.

But more than anything else, John, who celebrated his 90th birthday May 16, has been a loyal friend to all walks of life.

A true-blue champion of the "little guy."

"He's helped a million people and for all the right reasons," says close friend Joseph Shea who succeeded Gillis as city clerk in 1992. "John's never hurt anybody. He's only done things for folks that were positive."

A political "who's who" of past and present federal, state, county and city officials celebrated John's 90th birthday May 7 at the Common Market Restaurant. An estimated 250 well-wishers attended. The guest list included Cong. Stephen Lynch, former Cong. William Delahunt, former state attorney general and lieutenant governor Frank Bellotti as well as Mayor Thomas Koch and former mayors Walter Hannon, Frank McCauley and James Sheets.

As a gift to John, a chair was dedicated in his name and donated to the Thomas Crane Public Library.

John Martin Gillis was born in Quincy and grew up in Quincy Point. The son of Nora and John (Jack) Gillis, he attended the Adams Elementary School, Point Junior High School and Quincy High School, Class of 1943. He enlisted in the U.S. Marines and served during World War II in Hawaii, Midway and Saipan.

Although John has spent most of his life in the public eye, it was public safety that first caught his eye.

After the war ended, John returned home to Quincy and became a Quincy firefighter in 1946. He decided to go to college on the GI bill and left the department to become an auditor with the the state.

But after a few years as auditor, his good friend, Jim McIntyre, then a city councillor at-large and a future mayor, encouraged John to apply for the assistant city clerk's job when there was a vacancy in 1957. John took the job and figured he'd stay in that post for maybe 10 or 20 years.

But two years later, City Clerk Allen Cole died unexpectedly.

And John was called upon to fill another vacancy. And then Quincy political history was made.

John's appointment as city clerk was unanimously approved by the City Council. He became the first Democrat to serve as city clerk in Quincy. At that time, the city was a Republican stronghold.

John would go on to serve the next 33 years as clerk. He calls the city clerk's position the best in municipal government.

"You did favors and you were good to people," he says simply and matter-of-factly.

That's really an understatement.

John Gillis has befriended everyone wherever he goes.

He recalls the woman who used to bring her income taxes for him to file. She was on a very fixed income and couldn't afford to pay him in cash so she brought home-made pizzas to City Hall as payment. "All the girls would be waiting for her stop by. They'd tell me, "Do her taxes. Do her taxes.'

"She'd come in with big, thick pizzas. Boy, were they good," he says with a hearty laugh.

Then there are the helping hands that few would see.

Like the poor who passed away without family or the finances for a proper funeral. But there was John – ready, willing and able to step right in and defray some or all of the funeral expenses.

"As city clerk you know the poor side of everybody," he says. "I had some great times as clerk but I also saw the tough times with some people."

Sit down with John and it doesn't take long to reminisce about the good old days. His stories seem to outnumber grains of sand in an hourglass.

He remembers attending the Inauguration of President John F. Kennedy in 1961. He and his wife, Violet, drove to Washington, D.C. with their good friends Henry and Dorothy Bosworth – my father and mother.

At the Inauguration, they sat in different sections in the stands at the Capitol. Before the new President took the oath of office, a guy next to John had an unusual request.

"His wife was wearing these shoes that were just little straps. Her feet were freezing. He says to me, "Hey pal, would you do me a favor and rub my wife's feet?' I say, 'Yeah' but I didn't know who he was. I'm rubbing her feet. At the end of the Inauguration, he says to me, 'If you ever come to Hollywood, look me up.'

The guy turned out to be screen legend Gene Kelly.

"He gives me his card and I said 'Hey, thanks a lot.' He was a nice guy."

As city clerk, John served during the administrations of seven mayors: Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Frank McCauley and for a few years during Jim Sheets's tenure.

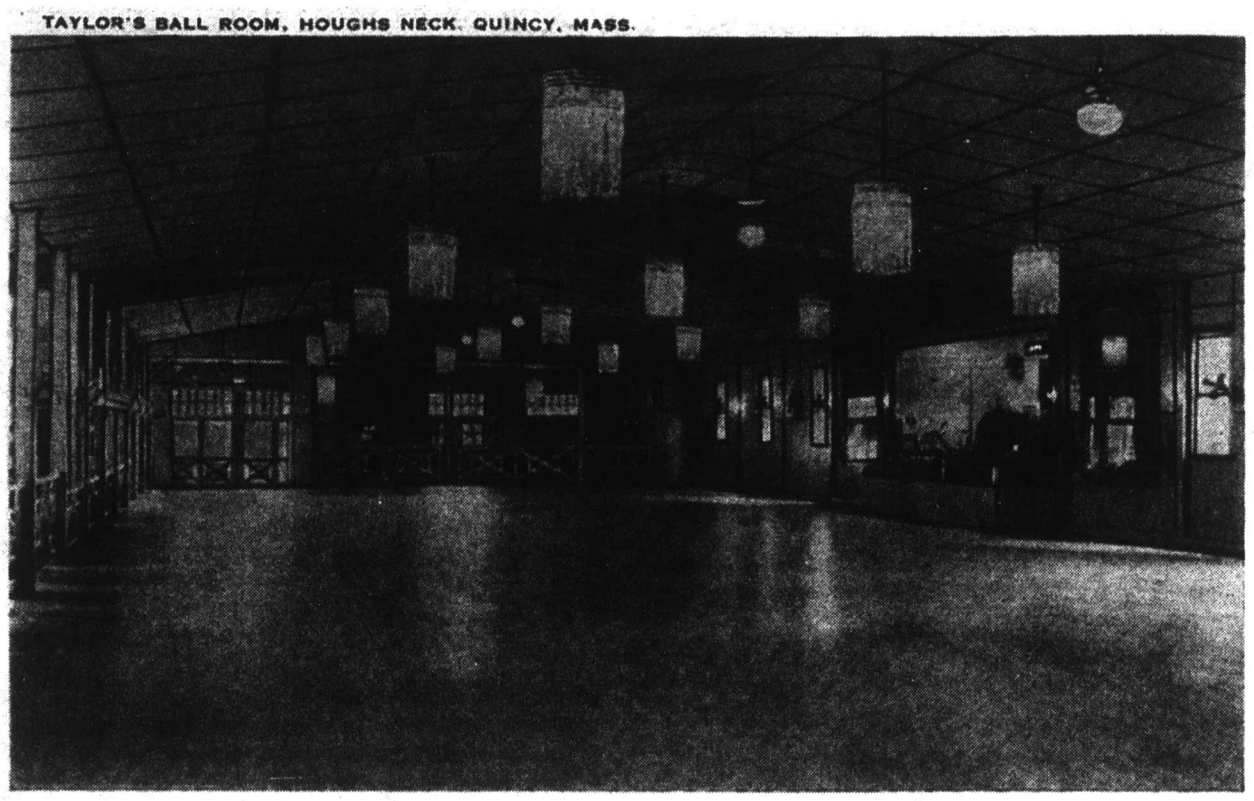
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS EARLY 1920's postcard is a view of the inside of Taylor's Summer Ballroom at the end of Sea Street in Hough's Neck. You can only imagine this popular dance hall filled wall-to-wall with a band and young people dancing together as couples, not individually as they do today. Earlier this was known as Moore's Summer Ballroom but was later annexed by the Taylor Hotel and resort complex behind it. This and many other summer attractions drew thousands of tourists and day-trippers to Hough's Neck early in the 20th century. The dance hall was later converted into Taylor's Bowling Alleys and then it became DiMarzio's skating rink. Today, this is an empty lot. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

City Council OKs Parking Project

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said that he will expedite the half million-dollar Quincy Center Development project authorized by the City Council.

By a vote of 7 to 2 the council approved taking and loan orders that will provide for both the expansion in off-street parking facilities and the opening up of the traffic bottleneck at the easterly end of Granite Street at the northerly approach to the Ross Parking area.

Only Councillors George G. Burke and Richard W. Barry voted against the proposal.

The project included the addition of 161 parking spaces between Granite St. and the Hancock Cemetery as well as the widening of Granite St. between Hancock St. and Upland Rd. (Editor's note: The parking area would be named after Walter Albert Della Chiesa, Mayor Della Chiesa's son, a graduate of West Point, who was lost when his plane crashed off Okinawa on the first day of the Korean War.)

COUNCIL APPROVES CHANGES IN PARKING REGULATIONS

Changes in parking regulations recommended by a special parking meter committee headed by Councillor George Burke and including Councillors Carl W. Anderson and James S. McCormack, were passed by the city council and sent to the mayor.

The committee recommended that parking meters be retained in the parking areas for the time being.

Other recommendations included increasing the cost of all day parking in the Upland Rd. and Adams Academy lots from 25 to 50 cents, as well setting up the 100 meters in the Hancock Parking lot for three hour limits to assist shoppers.

Thank You North Quincy HS Drama Club

Hi! My name is Abigail Bradbury Coughlin and I am a 4th grader at Squantum Elementary School.

I wanted to write to you because I want everyone in the City of Quincy to know how great the North Quincy High School Drama Club is and the teachers that were in charge.

I was lucky to be in "The Sound of Music" with them. And they were the nicest group of kids, they were just so nice to me and super funny. It was an opportunity that I will never forget, it was so so so much fun. I am sad it is over and I miss all of them.

I would like to say there was only one sad experience and that was finding out that they can only do a musical every other year because it costs so much money. Well, that made me sad.

I know a lot of people came to all the performances and were very happy with the show. So I guess if there is anyone out there with lots of money and don't know what to do with it and are looking for a good cause to donate to please donate to the NQHS drama club so they can do a musical in 2016. It is a great bunch of kids and you will be greatly appreciated!

Thank you NQHS Drama Club (Cast and Crew), Mr. Innis, Mrs. Phelan and Mrs. Smith for a wonderful experience.

Keep Above-Level Learners Challenged, Engaged

(Editor's note: The following letter was read by the author at the School Committee meeting May 11. A copy was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

For elementary school students across the City, there are a plethora of resources available through the Quincy Public Schools for students having difficulty meeting grade-level benchmarks. There are reading specialists, language development specialists, English as a second language specialists, and math specialists. There is the Stars program, the CARES program, the Transitional Learning Center, and the Special Needs Learning Center. All of these programs and specialists are designed to help below grade-level learners achieve the same level of success as their at-grade level learning peers.

What about our students across the city who are above grade-level learners? We have the LAB program for our 5th graders, but what about Kindergarteners up through 4th graders? Children aged 5-10 are sponges. They absorb volumes information. They have endless curiosity about how things work and why things are the way they are. But like a sponge, if they are not given water, they will shrivel up. If these students who enter a grade already knowing that grade's curriculum are not challenged, kept engaged, or opened to new concepts and ideas, then they may become complacent and lackadaisical. We are doing a disservice to those students by not having any resources available to help them achieve just as great academic strides as their below-grade and at-grade level learning peers.

In truth, above-grade level learners are just as much in need of "special education" as those below.

In my opinion, it should not be left to classroom teachers to develop new and creative ways to keep these students engaged. There should be well thought out and well planned out ways to assist these students that is universally used in a school and across the city. There should be specialists that are tasked with keeping these kids challenged and engaged.

In South Plainfield, NJ, the SEEDS program (Successful Enrichment and Educational Development of Students) was formed for kindergarten through grade 4. In Gwinnett County Public Schools in GA, the FOCUS program addresses elementary students performing above grade level. In Virginia Beach City Public Schools there are two programs – one for kindergarten and first grade that involves a gifted resource teacher working with classroom teachers to enhance the regular education curriculum and another program for grades 2-5 that involves a pull out program that teaches students about dance history and appreciation and visual arts history and appreciation. In Howard County Public Schools in Maryland, there is at least one gifted resource teacher in every elementary school not only to enhance the curriculum but also to address the social and emotional needs of advanced level learners.

I also took this off of the NYC, Department of Education website:

"Our Gifted and Talented programs for Kindergarten to grade 3 aim to deliver accelerated, rigorous, and specialized instruction aligned to Common Core Learning Standards."

There are many ways we as a city can address these students that currently are just being kept busy until their at-grade level learners catch up to them or until they are old enough to be eligible to join the LAB program. I urge this committee to please add this topic as an agenda item soon to be discussed and perhaps incorporated into the next budgetary season that is on the near horizon.

Apple, Pecan Cake

By MARIE

After baking so many apple pies and turnovers, I found a great recipe for an apple, pecan cake, which I served with freshly whipped cream.

I used a combination of Granny Smith and empire apples, but any kind will work.

APPLE, PECAN CAKE

4 cups apples (diced)
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
2 beaten eggs
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 cup chopped pecans (walnuts can also be used)
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
1/4 teaspoon salt

Mix the apples, pecans, eggs, sugar, oil, cinnamon, nutmeg and vanilla until well blended. Stir in all the rest of the ingredients, and place in a greased cake pan.

Bake in a 350-degree oven for 50-55 minutes. Delicious served with cream or ice cream.

Dairy-Free Chocolate Banana Shake

By SUZIE

When it becomes "ice cream time" (which is now, my teenagers have informed me) and you feel like something "bad" but know that you won't feel good about it after, try upgrading and making your own chocolate banana healthy shake!

Flaxseed has a multitude of nutritious benefits, and has been linked to lowering your risk of heart disease, stroke, cancer, and diabetes. It is also packed with fiber, antioxidants and Omega-3 fatty acids.

Cacao powder has a greater number of antioxidants than any other food tested so far. It beats out red wine, blueberries, acai and green tea. It is rich in iron and potassium, which can also reduce the risk of heart attacks. .

This recipe is by Danielle Walker (AgainstAllGrain.com) who healed herself from autoimmune disease by adjusting her diet and eliminated many things that were causing inflammation. Here is one of my favorites from her. Enjoy! I have adjusted it a bit.

SERVES: 1

INGREDIENTS:

1-1/2 cup almond milk or other non dairy milk of choice (like coconut or the new cashew milk that is out)
1/4 cup crushed ice
1 tablespoon ground flaxseed
2 tablespoons creamy natural peanut butter (unsweetened)
1/2 tablespoon honey (or sweetener of your choice)
1/8 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 frozen banana (very ripe)
1 tablespoon raw cacao powder

INSTRUCTIONS:

Blend all of the ingredients in a blender or vitamix. It's as easy as that.

Enjoy immediately!

RICOTTA PIE

"Jim McIntyre was the smartest mayor. He'd ask you a question but he already had his mind made up," he smiles.

Before he stepped down in 1992, John helped bring the city's voting method to modern times. It was during the administration of Frank McCauley in the 1980s that he advocated replacing paper ballots with punch-card machines. Gillis sold the idea to McCauley as a cost-savings to the city cutting down on police overtime and election workers.

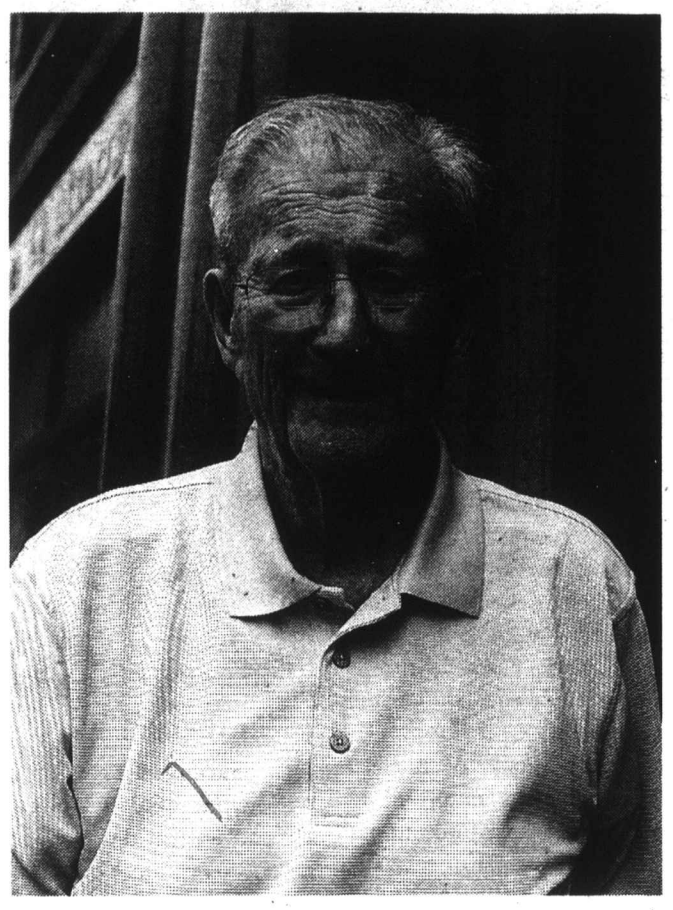
Gillis even flirted with the idea of running for mayor himself back in the 1970s and given his popularity as clerk, would have been a formidable candidate.

But John says he isn't made of mayoral timber.

"You have to be someone who can make hard decisions and that's just not me," he says.

John started the next chapter in public service in 1992 when he resigned as city clerk and was elected a Norfolk County commissioner that fall.

Like city clerk, being commissioner has allowed John to help a lot of folks. He's been re-elected five times and is up for re-election next year.



JOHN GILLIS

"I don't think I'll run in 2016 but at the moment I'm still undecided," he says.

How does he sum up nearly 60 years in public service?

"I've had a great life. I've done a lot of favors for a lot of people in this city. I always tried to be honest and good with them. As chairman of the License Board if you were from Quincy, you got the break. That's the truth.

"I figured I had to be good to the people of Quincy because they were good to me."

Happy 90th Birthday, John Gillis.

And many, many more.

Developer To Revise Stormwater Plan For Old Central

To Alleviate Concerns About Impact On Nearby Butler's Pond

By SCOTT JACKSON

The company planning to convert the former Central Middle School into a residential building with 46 condos will revise its original plan for stormwater management to alleviate concerns about the impact on nearby Butler's Pond.

Plainville-based Edgewood Development has reached an agreement to purchase the 121-year old former school at 1012 Hancock St. from the city for $3 million; the company submitted the highest bid for the site. Under Edgewood's proposal, the building would be preserved except for a small, one-story addition in the rear that would be demolished and replaced by a terrace overlooking the pond.

Edgewood went before the Planning Board on May 13 for a review of the project; the company could appear before the board with new plans for stormwater runoff as soon as June 10. The developer will also go before the Zoning Board of Appeals on May 26 and the Conservation Commission on June 3.

The original plan called for three ways of treating stormwater, according to Bill Buckley, an engineer working with the developer. Water in the front parking lot would be collected in catch basins treated in stormceptors to remove suspended solids – sediment and oil, for example – before sending it out into the city's drain system. Water in the rear of the site likewise would be treated in a stormceptor before draining into Butler's Pond. Runoff from the roof would be collected and deposited into the pond untreated, which is permissible under state environmental regulations.

Buckley told the Planning Board, however, that the applicant would change those plans to allow more water, particularly runoff from the roof, to be recharged into the ground after meeting with city officials, a peer reviewer, and residents prior to the May 13 hearing. The developer, for example, agreed to remove five parking spaces in the back to create more green space for the water to seep back into the ground.

"We understand the sensitivity of Butler's Pond, so we'll be going back and looking at that and specifically looking at recharging as much of this roof runoff as we can. We've done soil testing throughout the front, the side and a little bit in the rear," Buckley said at the start of the meeting.

"We will look at that again. We'll come back. We've heard the charge from neighbors and staff to improve the water quality beyond the standard and we've agreed to do that."

Residents did have a chance to comment on the proposal after Edgewood's presentation.

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, who resides on Merrymount Road across the pond from the former school and a member of the Friends of Butler's Pond, said the organization is in favor of the project but has concerns about how stormwater would be treated on site under the original proposal.

"I speak for most if not all of us in saying we are in general support of the proposal for the redevelopment of the former Central Middle School as residential condominiums. We view it as an appropriate use of the property and a benefit to the local community. Plans for the building itself represent an attractive improvement, particularly at the rear of the building as it faces the pond," Bennett said.

"We do have major concerns and we do want to make recommendations regarding the proposed stormwater treatment system."

Bennett noted the initial proposal to use stormceptors to remove suspended solids from stormwater before releasing it into the pond wouldn't block other pollutants, like nitrogen and phosphorus, from entering the pond. The original pond also called for a single discharge point, which Bennett called unsightly and a potential hazard to the pond's fragile ecosystem.

Instead, he suggested using other means to treat stormwater.

"This site represents an excellent opportunity and a critical opportunity for environmentally treating stormwater through ground filtration using a combination of scattered rain gardens and leaching fields," Bennett said. "Such systems would dramatically reduce nutrient pollution of the pond...such systems would also eliminate the need for the unsightly and damaging single-point discharge at the pond's edge."

The Friends of Butler's Pond also submitted a four-page letter outlining their concerns about the project to the Planning Board. The letter included a list of ten recommendations to protect Butler's Pond, including the use of rain gardens and leaching fields.

Among the other recommendations is the installation of a stormceptor for the catch basins the developer plans to replace on Butler Road; the catch basins on the road drain into Butler's Pond.

The letter also recommends that the hillside above Butler's Pond be cleaned up, including the removal of broken asphalt, dirt and fallen trees; improving the gravel ramp leading down to the pond from Marginal Road to prevent erosion and control runoff of silt and sand; minimizing paving and through traffic on Marginal Road; making on-going annual proper maintence of the stormwater system part of the deed for the site; and coordinating long-term planning for the pond, such as the installation of new nature trails and benches, with the developer's landscape design team.

The letter further requests the pond be protected during construction at the former school.

A detailed 2013 report on the pond that included recommendations for conserving it was also submitted to the Planning Board by the Friends of Butler's Pond.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest thanked the Friends of Butler's Pond for their work, adding that it is time to make sure the pond is taken care of.

"It's the city's pond and the city has a responsibility to care for this pond and to care for its ecology as it does for Manet Lake in Houghs Neck and as it does for the marshland that is overgrown with phragmites and other invasives elsewhere throughout the city," Laforest said.

"Now is the time to make sure Butler's Pond is taken care of."

Edgewood's presentation also touched on other issues, including traffic. Jack Gillon, a traffic engineer representing the developer, noted 618 students attended the school the year it closed; a school that size would generate more than 1,000 vehicle trips a day. Edgewood's plan, on the other hand, would generate about 200 vehicle trips each weekday.

Gillon added that the entrance to the parking lot on Butler Road will be made a one-way for entering vehicles only because of its proximity to Hancock Street. Two-way traffic in and out of the site will be accommodated on Marginal Road in the rear of the building.

Eighty-five parking spaces will be included on site, according to Edgewood Vice President Tim Higgins.

The parking lot in front of the building will be lowered by two feet as part of the project. The lot sits about two feet above Hancock Street currently, according to landscape architect Phil Hresko, and reducing its height will prevent vehicles in the lot from shining headlights directly onto traffic on Hancock Street.

Hedges and trees will be planted along the edge of the lot abutting Hancock Street; more will be planted up against the building.

"There is a lot more green than we're presently seeing there," Hresko said.

Willard Street Subdivision Plan Topic May 27

A proposal by 510 Willard Street Realty Trust to subdivide the 17,231 Sq. ft. lot located at 510 Willard Street which is split zoned Residence C and Residence B will be the focus of a neighborhood meeting Wednesday, May 27 at 6 p.m. at the Sterling Middle School Auditorium.

All neighbors are invited and encouraged to attend and participate.

The 510 Willard Street Realty Trusts intention is to subdivide the property into four lots. The lots of Willard Street would consist of the two existing dwellings. The two other would consist of two new two and a half story single family homes that will be accessed through Loring Street.

Quincy Fire Department Adopt-A-Hydrant Raffle Winners

By MIKE SLADE
Quincy Fire Department

The 2014-2015 record breaking winter in Quincy has certainly been a season that will be difficult to forget. The season broke all records, making the 2014-2015 winter season the snowiest season in Quincy ever recorded.

From a fire department standpoint, the continuous winter snow that accumulated in Quincy was an incredible challenge. Day after day, and week after week, Quincy firefighters spent their mornings and afternoons locating and shoveling out hydrants while still responding to hundreds of emergency calls throughout the city.

Every time the snow would seem to pass, another storm would follow, which would require the fire department to shovel out once again, all of the hydrants that were previously cleared. The National Guard was deployed to Quincy to assist firefighters with clearing hydrants. Teams of firefighters attached to special service units were deployed with front end loaders to clear hydrants as well.

During this past winter, in an effort to clear as many hydrants as possible, the Quincy Fire Department launched the Adopt-a-Hydrant program. Many Quincy residents responded to the Adopt-a-Hydrant program and the Quincy Fire Department is grateful to all of the citizens that participated in the program.

The Quincy residents who participated in the Adopt-a-Hydrant program were entered into a drawing to win five, fifty dollar gift certificates to the following restaurants in Quincy:

1. Bistro Chi, 37 Cottage Ave.
2. Fuji Restaurant and Bar, 1546 Hancock St.
3. Shabu Restaurant, 387 Hancock St.
4. B Café located, 405 Hancock St.
5.) Yo Cha, 406 Hancock St.

Quincy Fire Chief Joseph Barron recently pulled the names of five lucky Quincy residents from the Adopt-a-Hydrant drawing. The five winners from the Adopt-a-Hydrant program are:

Bruce Patten
James Brockman
Christopher Carroll
Libby Soo
John Byrne

Congratulations to the winners. If you would like to adopt a hydrant within your community, email mslade@quincyma.gov. Include in your email name, address, telephone number, and the hydrant location that you would like to adopt. The Quincy Fire Department is dedicated to the safety of the citizens of Quincy. Competitive Bidding, Marketplace Determines Who Gets The Work

The stalled redevelopment of downtown Quincy is now underway thanks to the efforts of Mayor Koch and others at City Hall who have worked with a major local employer and the largest project investor, Quincy Mutual Insurance to begin construction on what promises to be a vibrant cityscape.

Sadly, one special interest group is standing in the way – literally and figuratively. The action taken by 200 union workers to block traffic in downtown Quincy, demanding a monopoly on the construction work, was both unproductive and a danger to the public. As they did with the YMCA project, another private construction project undertaken to improve life in Quincy, organized labor is again engaging in disruptive protests to demand that all construction jobs go to union members. Their demand ignores the fact that a majority of qualified, responsible construction workers choose not to join labor unions, yet share the same desire to work hard and provide for their families.

The union's insistence that only its members be allowed to work on the project is unlawful and union leaders know it. It's telling how quickly organized labor turned on Mayor Koch, who put up a vigorous defense of the city's union-friendly hiring policies when our organization challenged the local ordinance in federal court.

The mayor and the Merit Construction Alliance took the matter to the First Circuit Court of Appeals, settling once and for all the legal questions surrounding the very policies the unions are now demanding be reinstated solely for their benefit. The court ruling was clear: competitive bidding and the marketplace determines who gets the work, not policies that favor unions. The fact is, there is nothing government can do anymore to tilt the playing field in favor of organized labor and the sooner the unions accept this, the better for all workers and taxpayers.

The city learned this lesson, but not organized labor. Its bosses are not satisfied and want the city to engage in illegal policies and risk further lawsuits - which Mayor Koch has wisely determined he will not do. Union leaders also criticized Quincy Mutual Insurance, a homegrown success story that has done nothing but create jobs, contribute to the local economy and support important causes throughout the city and the region. Attacking Quincy Mutual – which is investing $23 million in the downtown revitalization project and wants only to bid the work under fair and open competition – shows how misguided the union position is.

Instead of engaging in offensive behavior and demanding handouts, unions should sharpen their pencils and submit competitive bids. Bidding competitively is how our members are awarded work and it is the only plausible way the new downtown Quincy will become a reality and a source of pride for everyone.

The Merit Construction Alliance is a non-profit association that advocates for fair and competitive bidding among all qualified, responsible contractors on both public and private construction projects.

Entrance Fees Rising At Adams National Historical Park

As part of a nationwide initiative, Adams National Historical park will begin charging increased entrance fees June 1 - the first increase in nine years.

The entrance fee for the park, $5 for a seven-day pass, and the $10 annual pass, had remained unchanged since 2006. The new entrance fee for a seven-day pass will be $10 and the annual pass will be $40 beginning June 1.

"The fee program, established by the National Park Service, is critical to park operations," said ANHP Supt. Marianne Peak," because the fee program supports preservation of historic structures, conservation of museum collections and promotes park interpretive and educational programs."

The increase follows a review of entrance fees and public comment period that began last fall.

The National Park Service began a review of entrance fees charged throughout the National Park Service, in part, to bring greateer consistency to fees being charged at parks of similar size and complexity. To solicit public input, Adams National Historical Park launched a civic engagement campaign this past February which included a public comment session, press releases, and information on the park Facebook page; aimed at discussing the increase needed to bring the park's fees into compliance with other similar parks in the nation.

The park received comments which were generally favorable; however, some suggested the fees be increased in smaller increments.

Entrance fees have supported a wide range of projects that improve the park conditions and visitor experience, including historic tree preservation, restoration of the John Adams Birthplace chimney, restoration of the hardscape in the Beale Formal Garden, and the production of the first park film, "Enduring Legacy: Four Generations of the Adams Family," which provides visitors with an orientation to the ideas and contributions of the Adams family to the history and development of the United States.

History Of Adams Birthplaces Topic At Adams Academy May 28

The history of the Adams Birthplaces, an assessment of their condition, and recommendations for their future preservation will be the subject of a joint program by Adams National Historical Park and Quincy Historical Society on Thursday, May 28, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy.

Guest speaker Margie Coffin Brown, Senior Project Manager and Historical Landscape Architect at the National Park Service's Olmsted Center, will discuss the recent NPS Cultural Landscape Report for the Adams Birthplaces. The report is a vital tool for the documentation and preservation of this nationally significant site. In addition to assessing the site as it exists, the report gives valuable insight into what features that once existed but have since been lost.

Adams Park Superintendent Marianne Peak said, "We are excited to share this report with the community, most especially because it documents in detail both the evolution of the places that John Adams and his son John Quincy Adams called home during the American Revolution as well as the larger Penn's Hill farm once owned by multiple generations of the Adams family."

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

7-1 Vote OKs $3.5M City Hall Bond; Gutro Dissents

this so I want to understand what the breakdown is, the independent cost estimates –whether it was put out for bid or it was subcontracted – some backup material on each of these, because $3.5 million is a pretty significant chunk of change."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall questioned the $355,000 set aside for contingencies, which represents more than 10 percent of the total bond approved.

"That's 10 percent of the overall ask. Does that seem a little high to you?" Croall asked O'Connell.

O'Connell responded that he didn't want to come before council for money for the project again.

"We didn't want to be in a position where we were coming back again for something so we wanted to make sure we had enough in there – 10 percent would adequately cover it and maybe it is a little bit extra, but at this stage we wanted to be a little guarded on the estimate," he explained.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, who also requested details on where the $3.5 million would be spent at the April 27 meeting, said the breakdown provided was sufficient for him.

"This is what I had in mind. This is sufficient for me to get a comfort level with the order," McNamee said. "Short of seeing invoices, I don't know what more detail you could produce."

McNamee also questioned the money set aside for contingencies, asking O'Connell if he would be comfortable if that amount were cut in half. O'Connell said his concern is the ongoing Adams Green transportation project, which also includes replacement of utility lines.

"There is an ongoing project, the DOT project out on Hancock Street that involved utilities. Water lines are being replaced. There are other machinations involved in that with utilities and [National Grid] and all that stuff," O'Connell explained. "If we start getting into utility work we start getting into fairly significant numbers. That's primarily where I'm more concerned."

McNamee replied that he understood that concern and could live with the 10 percent contingency.

If money is borrowed by not spent, it could be repurposed for other capital improvement projects with council approval. Under state law, it can't be used to pay down the debt.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked O'Connell when the project should be completed. O'Connell responded the target is early or mid August.

269 Apartments Proposed For Quarry Hills

By SCOTT JACKSON

A public hearing on a proposal to build a 269-unit apartment complex in Quarry Hills will be held on Tuesday, June 16, at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

The City Council, acting as the city's special permit granting authority, will review the proposal by Quarry Hills Development LLC to build the new apartment complex at 00 Ricciuti Drive. The council has jurisdiction because the project site exceeds 100,000 square feet.

Details of the proposal will be presented at the June 16 SPGA meeting, as will a review from a peer reviewer.

The property's current owner, Marian Manor of South Boston, purchased the 359,000 square feet property for $5 million in 2005, according to the city assessor's online database. The site was never developed. The site is in an industrial B zoning district.

In addition to approval from the council, the Zoning Board of Appeals must approve a variance for the site as it exceeds the maximum density. The Quincy Conservation Commission must also weigh in on the project.

The project is subject to the city's Tree Preservation Ordinance. The applicant will be required to work with the Park Department on how to comply with the ordinance; the department's recommendation will be included in the special permit issued by the council.

The project is subject to the Affordable Housing Ordinance, and the applicant will have to contact the Affordable Housing Trust Committee for its recommendation, which would also be included in the special permit.

New Owner For Hospital Site Sought

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city and the owner of the former Quincy Medical Center reached a second agreement that will allow the company more time to find new users for the site.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins told the City Council on Monday night that for-profit Steward Health Care had agreed to a second tolling agreement, which freezes each side's legal rights. The first such agreement was reached in January and expired in mid-April. The new agreement expires in September and will let Steward market the site over the summer.

"They're trying to find uses that might go up there and come back to us with a proposal for what they want to be doing with the site," Timmins said.

When asked if new hospital company to over the site and reopen Quincy Medical Center, Timmins said that would appear unlikely.

"I don't know if anyone really anticipates that, however, because I don't think they're going to allow a competitor to come in. I'm not sure, given the dynamics that have occurred in the region, whether a competitor would wish to," Timmins replied when asked about a new hospital chain taking over by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

"There are some other uses that could go in up there. I think they're analyzing those and whether there is a market for those kinds of uses."

Timmins appeared before the council seeking $125,000 from free cash to pay outside counsel to continue negotiations over the closure of the hospital. The expenditure was approved in an 8-0 vote; Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci did not attend Monday's meeting.

The city retained the law firm of Eckert Seamans shortly after Steward announced plans to close Quincy Medical Center last fall. To date, Timmins said Eckert Seamans has racked up legal bills totaling $65,000. That will be charged to the $125,000 allocated Monday.

Peter Carr, an attorney with the Boston-based law firm, previously told the council the city has a right of reverter to take back the Whitwell Street site if it were no longer used as a hospital. The reverter clause was initially included in a deed for the site granted to a non-profit in 1999 when the city gave up ownership of the hospital. Carr said the clause remained in effect after Steward bought Quincy Medical Center out of bankruptcy in 2011.

In December, Quincy Medical Center closed though an emergency department affiliated with Carney Hospital in Dorchester remains open on site. Timmins, in response to another question by Laforest, said residents would have more than adequate notice if the emergency department there closes; Steward has also opened an urgent care facility at 54 Miller St.

"We believe we're going to have proper urgent care facilities in the city and if we transition away from [the Whitwell Street ER], the public is going to have more than adequate notice of the transition period, how things are going to play out – and they wouldn't have had that back in December," Timmins said.

James Connors Candidate Ward 2 City Councillor

James M. Connors of 124 Martensen St. announces he is a candidate for Ward 2 city councillor.

In his announcement, Connors said:

"I am a single parent with four children, Stephen, Erin, Caitlin and Kristen. I have been a city employee for over 25 years. I am committed to advancing the opportunities of working people. I have served for seven years as President of my local union. And for many more, I've been an active advocate for my fellow workers in Quincy and beyond.

JAMES CONNORS

"Decision-making roles, like my seat on the Executive Board for the Mass. Public School Custodians, have given me the chance to make lives and livelihoods better for hard-working families. I'm proud to have the honor of representing workers in our communities, and it's my hope to bring that same commitment to the residents of Quincy."

Connors described himself as a working man who stands for working families.

"I will advocate for jobs for Quincy residents. I am concerned for our senior citizens' safety and security. We should expect the very best care for our elderly and I will fight for the quality and accountability Quincy's seniors deserve," Connors said.

Continuing, he said, "I am also very concerned with the drug epidemic in our community and support expanding treatment programs. I consider Narcan to be a life-saving tool that should be readily available to anyone who worries for their loved ones. Education is essential to a prosperous community and we must support our schools. With current development plans we must be sure we have adequate space for our incoming students."

If elected Ward 2 councillor, Connors said he would be a good listener for residents and a strong voice in City Hall.

"There are many issues affecting our community. I know that Quincy's residents need both a good listener and a strong voice in City Hall. I will make constituent services a priority. My focus is on good jobs and better opportunities for Quincy residents.

"I hope that you, my neighbors, will give me the chance to represent you and fight for what your family needs. Together we can rebuild Quincy the right way. And so I am asking you for your support and your vote this fall. Thank you for your consideration," Connors added.

Ally Graf Woodward Award Recipient

Alexandra (Ally) Graf of Quincy, a student at the Woodward School for Girls Class of 2016, was recently awarded the Anne Starr '27 Art Award, presented to a rising senior who has shown a strong interest and emerging proficiency in the fine arts,

The award also recognizes a student whose academic achievements and character in the school community are exemplary.

The scholarship was established by Marjorie Starr Myers, Carole Starr Schein and Barbara Starr Wolf, the daughters of Anne Starr, a 1927 Woodward graduate and outstanding alumna. Soon after Ms. Starr graduated from Woodward, she married and by the age of 25 was widowed with three daughters.

Anne immediately went to work and later founded the well-known women's specialty shops in Quincy and Wellesley that carried her name, Anne Starr, Inc. Throughout her life she maintained an active interest in the fine arts and music and she cultivated this same passion in her daughters.

Ms. Starr passed away in December of 2007 and her daughters established the Anne Starr scholarship in her memory to recognize and promote art education at The Woodward School.

This year's award recipient, Ally Graf, is passionate about photography and has steadily and more deeply explored her interest and become accomplished and creative in her photography during her years at Woodward. She has developed her craft through multiple classes at Woodward and through work and projects outside of the school. Being ever community minded she has donated photographs to Woodward's annual Women of Distinction Gala and over her years at Woodward, she has submitted wonderful photographs to Woodward's Greenleaf Arts Magazine.

She is also a freelance photographer for The Quincy Sun.

Sea St. Improvements

"This is a large stretch of Sea Street when we're talking about this appropriation. Wherever we are able to make improvements, it serves thousands of neighbors traversing it daily. We've had some issues in the past. This is really taking a hard look at making some improvements to those intersections."

Frank Tramontozzi, an engineer for the city, said Quincy would be able to leverage $6.5 million in federal and state funds to complete the project. The project will include new roadway surfacing, curbing, signals, ornamental lights and landscaping. Bike lanes and a new median are also included in the conceptual design for the project.

Tramontozzi explained that it could take up to a year for the final design to be completed. Construction, which will be overseen by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, would likely take two whole construction seasons to complete.

"We have to complete the 25 percent [design] and have a design public hearing, which is an official hearing that is required by the state and federal governments. There will be several other informational type meetings for the public to participate in and to help shape the project. So what we're saying is about a year," Tramontozzi said.

"Once it is advertised and given a notice to proceed to a contractor, you're looking at two construction seasons to construct this project... if we could get it into construction for a spring start, then it's probably fall of the next year that it would be completed."

The public hearing on the design for residents, he noted, would likely be held sometime this fall.

Before work on Sea Street begins, Tramontozzi said utility companies would be given a chance to upgrade underground infrastructure. Once the street is resurfaced, utilities would be prevented from opening up the road for five years except in emergency circumstances. In that case, the company would need to repave the entire width of the street.

"We notify the utilities companies. We give them the ability to get in there and upgrade their infrastructure. Sometimes they choose not to," Tramontozzi said. "When the new surface is in place they cannot open it up for five years. If there happens to be an emergency and they do open it up, then they are responsible for resurfacing curb-to-curb."

The $1.2 million for the Sea Street work was approved in an 8-0 vote; Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci did not attend Monday's meeting.

The $950,000 in borrowing for the North Quincy was also approved in an 8-0 vote. That project, which is likewise being overseen by MassDOT, has a total cost of $5 million and should be substantially completed by the time nearby North Quincy High School re-opens in the fall, according to Tramontozzi.

"The goal here is to complete it before North Quincy High is back in session," he said. "The contractor is making very good progress on it. I do believe they'll be able to get substantial completion and then we can do punch list items after that."

Solarize Program Passes Milestone

As of early May, Solarize Quincy, a state- and city-sponsored program providing discounted solar panels to Quincy residents, has contracted to install a total of 147 kilowatts of solar panels at 26 Quincy residences, with the smallest installation consisting of nine panels, or 2.3 kilowatts, and the largest consisting of 52 panels, for over 14 kilowatts.

Because the program has surpassed 100 kilowatts, homeowners will get 10 percent off the program's already discounted price, said Dan Barnett, residential sales manager for SolarFlair, the Ashland-based contractor that won a competitive bidding process to be Solarize Quincy's exclusive installer. He predicted the program will soon hit 200 kilowatts, at which point all participants will enjoy an additional 3 percent discount. Installation of the panels will begin in early June and continue through the summer, said Barnett.

"It's exciting to see so many Quincy households enroll in Solarize, and take advantage of the discounted pricing," said Shelly Dein, the city's energy manager. "The payback for residential solar systems is often about five years, and through Solarize Quincy, it will be even quicker, making solar a smart financial decision and making Quincy a more environmentally sustainable community."

"Solarize Quincy has moved along very quickly compared to similar programs that SolarFlair has participated in," added Barnett. "Without the help of the City and Solarize Quincy volunteers, we wouldn't have reached 100 kilowatts this quickly."

To get discounted solar through Solarize Quincy, homeowners must sign a contract before the end of June.

Rebecca McWilliams, the program's chief volunteer, encourages all Quincy residents to learn more about solar by attending a solar open house May 30 at 52 Chickatabot Road between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

"Come and see solar panels in action and speak with homeowners who have installed solar systems, Solarize Quincy volunteers, and SolarFlair," McWilliams said.

Support Our Veterans, Attend Memorial Day Parade

All all Quincy residents I ask all of you to come out this year to support and remember the men and women who have given us freedom by laying their life on the line for our freedom.

This Monday, May 25 will be Quincy's Memorial Day Parade. It will kick off at 10:30 a.m. at Quincy Avenue at the Quincy Credit Union and proceed to Hancock Street and Coddington Street before resting at Mount Wollaston Cemetery on Sea Street.

The veterans of this wonderful city take pride in what they have done for their country. But more importantly they remember their fellow veterans who have gone before them.

So this Monday, May 25 please come out to let them known that they are not alone or forgotten. Please bring the kids to watch a wonderful parade and to wear their red, white and blue and to thank and remember those who are no longer with us.

Quincy is a wonderful city and it takes pride in their veterans. So let's show our support and let these veterans be reminded how important they are to us. Let's remember what Memorial Day is all about.

So please put aside a couple of hours on Monday for those who gave the ultimate sacrifice so we may have holidays like Memorial Day.

Thank you in advance,
George Bouchard

Veterans' Sacrifice, Service Remembered At Sons Of American Legion Memorial Day Observance

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

An emotional crowd of onlookers paid homage to veterans Sunday at the Flags for Veterans Island at Fort Square, School and Pleasant Streets, where 330 American flags are on display, each bearing the name of a veteran on its pole, with one exception.

That one flag represents the Prisoners of War and the Missing in Action soldiers who have not returned home. The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 294, Cyril P. Morrisette Post conducted the Memorial Day Observance.

A proud Commander Paul Moody, whose wife Karen explained that Paul's dream for the Veterans Island of nearly five ago "was today a reality" remarked in his welcoming notes:

"The traditional observance of Memorial Day has diminished over the years. Many Americans nowadays have forgotten the meaning, the tradition of Memorial Day.

"Many cemeteries and graves of the fallen are increasingly ignored or neglected. People no longer remember the proper etiquette for the day Some people think it's the day honoring all those who have fallen in service...but, the day is to remember, also, those who have served.

"The flags on this island represent those who have served, are still serving, and those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice for our country. Always remember, if there were no veterans, there would be no America--freedom is not free."

In his greetings to the memorial observers, Mayor Thomas Koch spoke of the many veterans who had returned from service and literally built our nation . . . "veterans who had served the nation in harm's way, and then come back and built this country and the community in which we live.

"Today is certainly an honor for me to be with you, to thank our veterans, those who have come before us, as we enter the week of Memorial Day when this nation will pause all across the country – every city and town and hamlet across the nation will pause and remember their own, and we do it well here in Quincy."

Other city government representatives In attendance were Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, Councillor-at-Large Douglas Gutro, Brad Croall from Ward 2, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, state Rep. Tackey Chan and state Sen. John Keenan, as well as School Committee members Noel DiBona, Anne Mahoney and David McCarthy.

Sgt. at Arms George Bouchard escorted World War II Army veteran Robert Noble and past commander of Post 294 Robert LaFleur to the center of the island. Noble is also a past commander of the American Ex-POWs Massachusetts Department, a non-profit service organization advocating for former prisoners of war and their families.

Military guidelines governed the raising of the United States flag, the POW/MIA flag, and the flag of The Sons of the American Legion. This American flag raised was the burial flag of Salvatore Puglisi, USN, who was a decades-long member of the Morrisette Post. Post 294 member Naseeb "Mo" Morad led the crowd in the singing of the National Anthem as the flags were raised.

Master of Ceremonies Guy Ferris introduced Noble before his keynote remarks.

"During the height of Word War II, Bob enlisted in the U.S. Army and after training, was deployed overseas. His unit, the 87th Infantry, known as the 'Golden Acorn' as a symbol of its strength, trained in England and arrived in France in December, 1944.

"Swept up in the surge that later became known as the Battle of the Bulge, Noble was captured and held for 122 days, losing a dangerous amount of body mass and, temporarily, the ability to walk. Bob had just attained the ripe age of 19.

"Bob's family members who are here today include son, Bob Noble Jr., Alicia Gardner, Nancy Noble McClaughlin, Andrea White and their spouses and an assortment of grandchildren."

Described by his fellow Squadron 294 member as "Quincy's own Favorite Son, hero of the United States and just a humble and genuinely all-around nice guy, Noble took the podium to warm applause.

"Paul and his squadron are to be commended for the effort they have expended over the years to have this island dedicated in memory and honor of those who have served our country," Noble said.

"Engraved on the Memorial Tower at Marina Bay is a quote from President Kennedy: 'A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces but also by the men it honors and the men it remembers.'

"Quincy does more than its share in honoring and remembering those who served our country – many who made the ultimate sacrifice – by observing significant anniversaries in our country's history.

"We veterans of Massachusetts are fortunate to be living in a state that leads the nation in supporting veterans and providing them with due benefits."

To that end, Noble cited two organizations, the Vision One Health Care System, and the VA Boston Health Care System, which leads the nation in most measures of health care for veterans.

Three flags were raised for Noble's relatives in honor of WWI veterans, one for his deceased wife Gloria's father, USN, and two for relatives who were charter members of the Bessie Edwards American Legion, the first all-women American Legion Post.

In April, Noble was invited by Major General Jeffrey Buchanan, Commander, U.S. Army, to lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia. He referred to that day in his remarks:

"I was able to select the date...I chose April 9th. It was National POW Recognition Day. It was also the date of the fall of Bataan and the start of the Bataan Death March."

Noble was referring to the April 9, 1942 U.S. surrender of the Bataan Peninsula in the Philippines, when approximately 75,000 American and Filipino troops were forced to make a 65-mile march to prison camps. Under severe conditions and harsh treatment by the Japanese, thousands perished.

Noble referred to a post-ceremonial Washington event, when the next day a colonel was able to retrieve that same wreath he had laid, and accompanied by his family and friends, Bob was able to place it in front of the WWII Memorial.

"I placed the wreath in front of the wall with over 4,000 stars representing the 400,000 plus Americans killed during that war. It was next to the engraving, 'Here we mark the price of freedom.'

"It was especially meaningful to me because I was surrounded by school children from Indiana who were interested in why I was there. I am sure they did not expect to meet a World War II veteran. I got a lot of hugs and kisses.

"I was greatly honored by being selected to represent my generation in Washington. I was doubly honored by all my family and friends, 37 in all, who took the time and expense to be there with me.

LEATHERNECK HONORS SOCIETY Marine Corps veterans fire a volley in tribute to all honorees including those who have flags placed in their memory at Flags for Veterans Island. The island is decorated with some 330 memorial and honor flags representing veterans who served, are still serving and those paid the ultimate sacrifice defending this country's freedom.

"I am continually being honored by those who greet me with congratulations since I have come home. I know you are thinking of your veterans when you do so."

Wreaths were placed at two memorial granite benches being dedicated at the square as part of the day's events. One of the previous benches was dedicated to deceased members of Quincy High School class of 1966, five of whom where killed in Vietnam.

Ferris: "Today we dedicate two new benches, at which passers-by may take their rest and contemplate the true beauty of the site. The first is dedicated in memory of Joseph W. Koch, a veteran of the U.S. Army and a dedicated public servant to our city of Quincy. This bench is a gift from our partner, Manet Contracting, LLC.

"The second bench is in memory of the five Dunn brothers of Quincy, who served in World War II and are now deceased. James ,Matthew and John Dunn of the U.S. Army, and Paul and Robert Dunn of U.S. Navy. This is also a gift from Manet Contracting, LLC."

A military roll call of Deceased Honorees was held, followed by the Placing of Flags by Commander Moody, Robert LaFleur and Pam Norton, all Post 294 members.

Color guards from the Quincy Police and Fire Departments took part in ceremony, as did ROTC from North Quincy High, and the Morrisette Combined Color Guard with Ladies Auxiliary. A three-volley salute was fired by the Leatherneck Honors Society of Mass and Robert LaFleur played taps.

Longtime Quincy resident and public servant John 'Jake' Comer took the podium in an impromptu moment to speak to the day's events: "Bob Noble, because of what you did, the sacrifice you gave to this nation, for the 122 days held behind prison walls, we will never forget you Bob...your remarks here today were well said, and to honor the Koch family and the Dunn family reminds us to remember all of those who have done so much."

Comer concluded by honoring all the volunteer color and honor guards who had participated in the ceremony. "To have them all stand here with us to represent the greatness of this nation, because when we hear, we forget, but when we see, we remember. It's when we do, we understand."

NQ Baseball Bows To Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

Errors lead to unearned runs, give extra outs to opposing hitters, and present problems for any baseball team who commits them.

North has had trouble with errors all season, and the Red Raiders had trouble with them against Scituate. The Sailors took advantage, scored eight unearned runs and dropped North, 10-3 in a Patriot League Fisher Division game on Senior Night at Adams Field Thursday night.

"We haven't been able to support our pitching with good defense. The errors have hurt us all season," said coach Matt Edgerly. "At this point in the season, you have to make the plays."

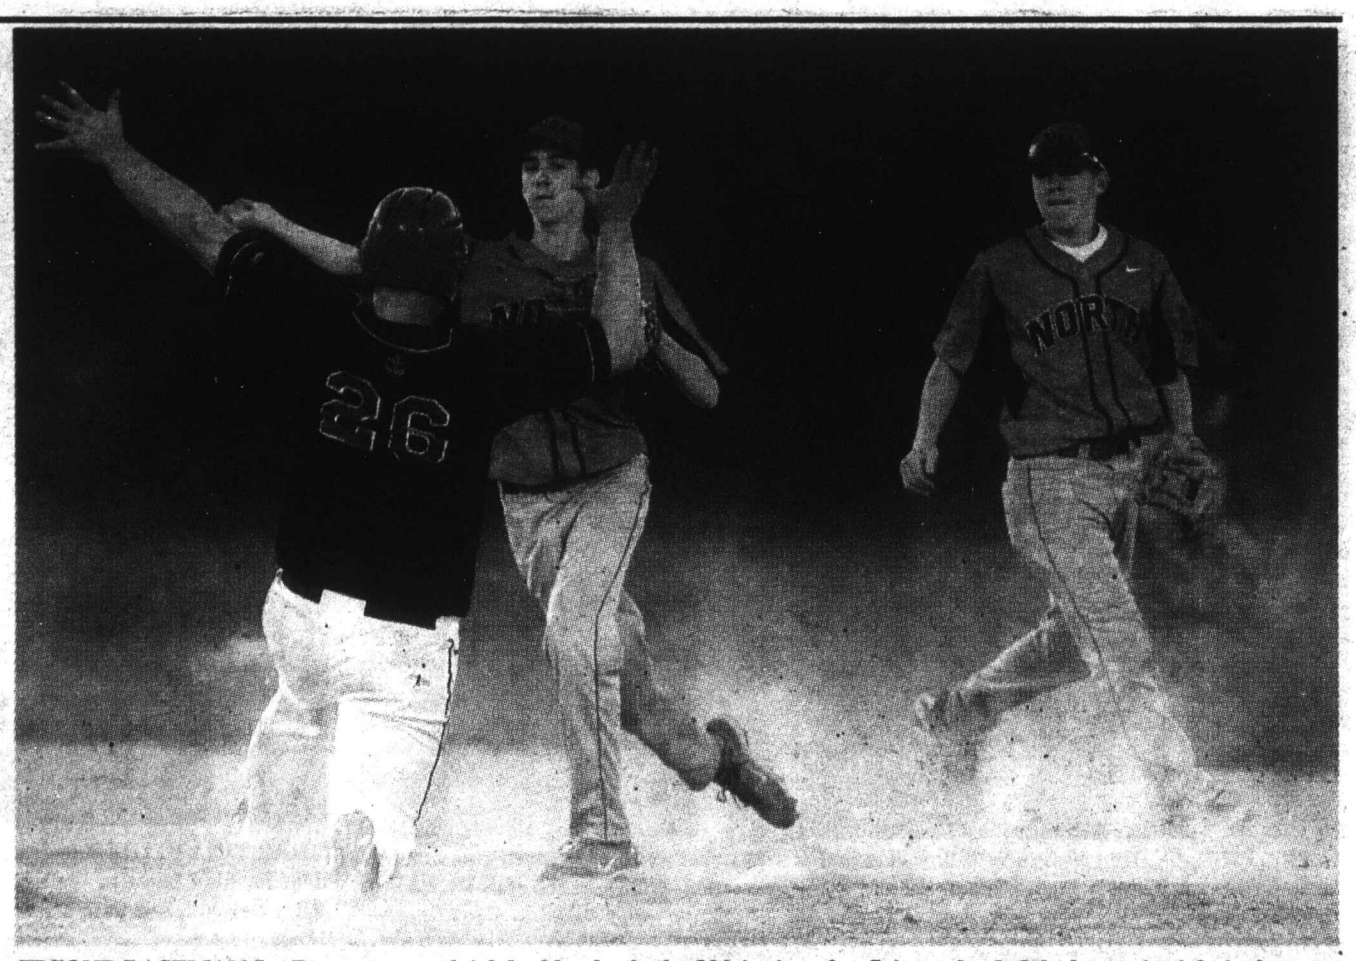
Despite the final score, the pitching was actually pretty good. Lefty Joe Cochrane threw the first four, allowing six hits, one earned run while striking out four. He had a good fastball and when he kept it down, he had Scituate pounding the ball into the ground.

Dom DiPalmo featured a good curveball and gave just one earned run in 1 2/3 innings of work. Junior Tom Whooley finished up in the seventh and showed an excellent fastball while giving up an unearned run.

"I know the score doesn't show it, but I liked our pitching," said Edgerly. "I thought Cochrane was dealing early, but we opened up a big inning for them with an error. We asked Dom to help us in relief and he has owned the job. He's appeared in six of our 14 games and done a good job. Whooley has a good arm and throws hard."

North had six hits and Josh Helfrich had two of them. The junior first baseman has been ripping the ball all season and entered the game batting over .400. Both hits were line shots right off the sweet spot of the barrel.

"Josh has had a great year at the plate. His development as a hitter has been phenomenal," said Edgerly. "I just wish we gave him more opportunities to drive in runs."



SECOND BASEMAN Joe Dwyer turns a 6-4-3 double-play in the fifth inning after Scituate loaded the bases. At right is shortstop Matt McDonald who started the play by fielding a sharply hit ground ball. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

LEFTY JOE COCHRANE scattered six hits and one earned run in four innings while striking out four for the Red Raiders against Scituate.

Junior Nick Kelly had a double and three RBI for North. Sean Egan and Timmy Glynn each had a hit and scored a run. Catcher Cam White added a double while Shawn Kelly scored a run for the Red Raiders.

"Nick has worked hard and it was good to see him get a hit and the RBI," said Edgelry.

The defensive star of the game was Shawn Kelly in center field. He handled four chances cleanly. In the second, he roamed into right center for a nice running catch. In the third he read a deep shot perfectly and made a fine grab going back in dead center. In the sixth, he held a runner at third after catching a fly ball with a laser of a throw which reached White on the fly.

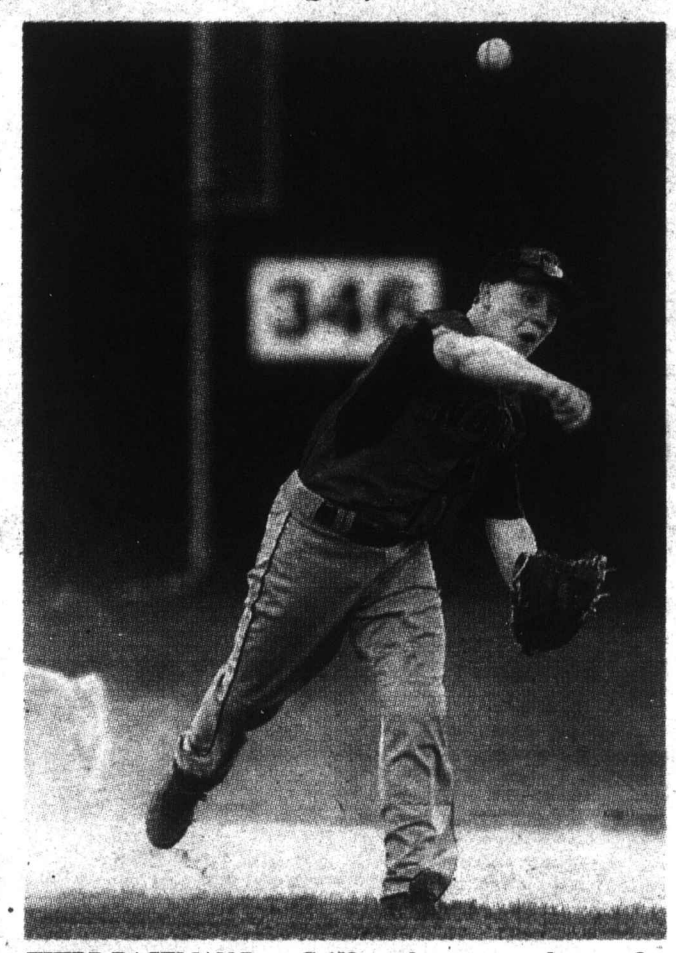
"Shawn has been excellent great all year in center," said Edgelry. "He can track down any fly ball. He has a great arm. We clocked him at 80 MPH throwing from the outfield."

Shortstop Matt McDonald also had a good night in the field. In the third, he made a diving grab of a liner to end the inning with two runners in scoring position. In the fifth with the bases loaded, he started a 6-4-3 double play with Joe Dwyer and Helfrich to end the inning.

"Matt had a good night at shortstop," said Edgerly.

Scituate scored five in the second, two in fifth, two in the sixth, and one in seventh for a 10-0 lead. North answered with three runs in its final at bat.

Egan singled with one out. After a popout, Glynn drilled a line drive for a single. Shawn Kelly reached on an error to load the bases. Nick Kelly then pinch hit and blasted a drive to deep center for a three-run double which finished the scoring.



THIRD BASEMAN Dara Griffin makes a strong throw to first base for an out against Scituate.

In other action last week, North fell to Hanover, 6-4. Shawn Kelly had a two-run double. White drove in a run with a double. Middleboro stopped the Red Raiders, 7-0. Matt Monahan pitched well in the defeat.

North's six seniors were honored before the game. Family members received flowers. The players and their families were introduced as they walked onto the field. North's six seniors are: Bryan Turner, Dwyer, Egan, Monahan, Cochrane, and DiPalmo.

The loss dropped North to 3-11. The Red Raiders host Hull Saturday at 11 a.m. at Adams Field.

A-Team Fundraiser Takes U.S. One Step Closer To World Championship

A successful Spring Fundraiser Party held recently at The Nickerson Post in Squantum brought The U.S. A-Team one step closer to competing at the 2015 World Hydroplane Championships this summer.

The team, which is based in Quincy but involves members from across the country, is in the planning stages of preparing for the race which will be held in Nottingham, England in August. The biggest challenge to the team isn't the intense international competition but the ability to get their equipment to the race venue.

"The expense of shipping a container to Europe each year continues to be our largest financial obstacle," said Squantum's Billy Allen, the team captain, "so we are always exploring new sponsorship opportunities and creative ways to raise funds."

The contest will feature the best racing teams from across Europe and the world. Usually 50 boats from 15 different countries compete during qualifying. This year the Americans will once again attempt to qualify three boats for the 22 boat feature final. Last year at the Championship Race in Poland, the team managed to qualify all three of their boats in the top ten and just missed the podium with a fourth place finish by Allen. The other two U.S. Drivers, Todd Anderson from Northlake IL., and Mike Akerstrom from Westford MA., finished 7th and 12th respectively.

MEMBERS OF THE U.S. A-Team will be competing in the World Hydroplane Championships this summer. The team is captained by Billy Allen of Squantum.

The World Championships are sanctioned by The Union of International Motorboating (UIM) and are recognized by The International Olympic Committee (IOC). Quincy's U.S. A-Team continues to be the only United States representation at these World Championship races.

The party featured a beautiful race boat display, barbeque by Smokie Joe's along with music and dancing with D.J. Mike Tucker. The event was attended by many members of The South Shore Outboard Association, past and current racing champions as well as several elected officials including Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Norfolk County Sheriff Mike Bellotti, Quincy City Councillor Doug Gutro and Quincy School Committee member Anne Mahoney.

"We were very excited about the local turnout of neighbors and elected officials," said Team Executive Administrator Rachel Warnock. It is very important to us that the local community is aware that the American Team is right here in Quincy. The fundraising went well but it is just as important to our team to have the local community behind us.

Race fans and fast boat enthusiasts can follow the team at AteamBoatRacing.com or at SouthShoreOutboard.com

After Presidents No-Hit By Silver Lake's Maddy Barone

Softball Sensation Saxon Bresnahan Hurls Two Consecutive No-Hitters

By BILL GRIFFIN

Ho-hum. Another no-hitter.

With Saxon Bresnahan we are entering uncharted territory where truth is stranger than fiction, where no-hitters have come to be what is expected. If somebody made a movie about what she has played out over the past two weeks, there would be one problem. Nobody would believe it.

Monday afternoon, Bresnahan pitched a no-hitter, struck out 16, came within one walk of a perfect game and led Quincy to a 2-0 win over Duxbury. For most pitchers, this would be the thrill of a lifetime. For Bresnahan, it wasn't even her biggest thrill of the last 14 days.

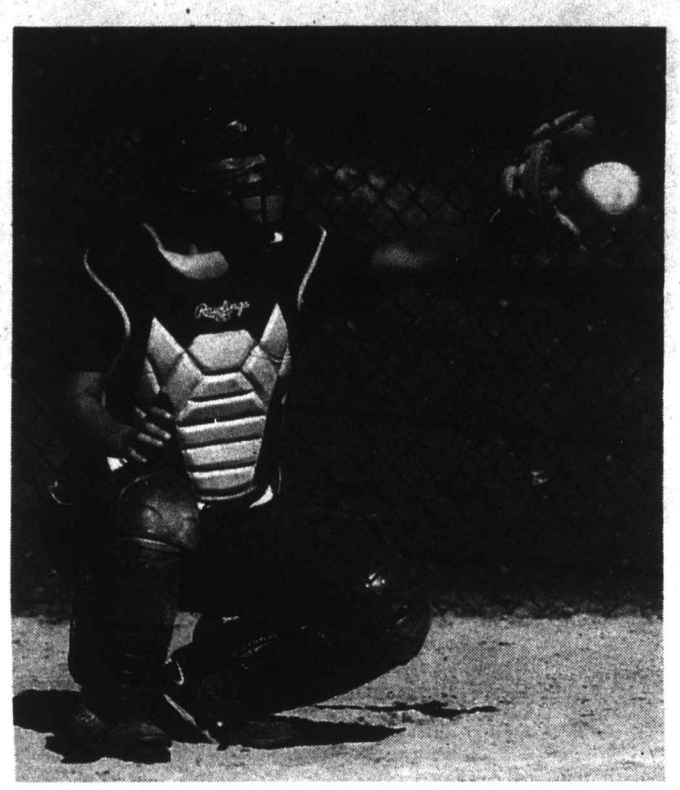
Consider the following and keep in mind that it is all true.

• On May 4 she pitched a perfect a game against Duxbury in which she struck out all 21 batters she faced. People who have been around the game for 35 years said they had never seen it happen. She'd only just begun.

• Last Friday, she pitched a no-hitter and struck out 19 to carry Quincy past Plymouth North, 6-0.

• Let's add it all up. She pitched three no-hitters in two weeks. She pitched two consecutive no-hitters. She was perfect Monday until there was one out in the seventh. That means she came within two outs of pitching a perfect game against the same team in a span of 14 days.

• She is doing this against good teams. These are not cupcakes. Duxbury and Plymouth North are above .500 teams who can hit and who have a chance to make the tournament.



QUINCY CATCHER Angelina Avitabile has caught a perfect game and two no-hitters this season - all thrown by Presidents' fireballer Saxon Bresnahan – and had been rock solid defensively behind the plate.

• She has struck out at least 16 batters in six of her last seven games. There are 21 outs in a softball game. How dominant has she been? Do the math.

• In the middle of all this, not only her talent, but her will, was tested. She dropped a 7-0 decision in a showdown with Silver Lake and Maddy Barone last Wednesday. It was a game she wanted to win badly. Many pitchers would have struggled with this. They would have doubted and slumped. Bresnahan pitched two straight no-hitters.

Quincy has a fine tradition of great softball pitchers. Names like Kori Sorensen and Nicole Parry come to mind. But right now, Saxon Bresnahan, class of 2015, is playing a game with which others are not familiar.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "Off the field, Saxon is this quiet, almost shy, girl, but she gets on it and she wants to dominate. She wants to be up there with any elite pitcher and she deserves to be."

She has pitched four career no-hitters. She pitched one against Pembroke junior year. Bresnahan has started since was a sophomore. Her stuff has always been good. Her low fastball has been a wipeout pitch from her first game sophomore year. This year the difference is the riser and her maturity.

The riser has been become her strikeout pitch. She showed her maturity with the way she reacted to the loss to Silver Lake.

"The riser is especially good with two strikes on a hitter. The way she came back from Silver Lake shows how much she has grown as a pitcher and a competitor," said Sommers.

Her defense helped her in No Hitter Part Two Monday against Duxbury. In the fifth, centerfielder Emma Kelly tracked down a hard line drive. In the same inning, Alicia Walker caught a tough popup and shortstop Clare Doherty ranged far to grab a low liner.

Dana Varmahmoodi also made a fine running catch in left to keep the no-hitter intact.

Angelina Avitabile, Bresnahan's catcher and best friend who has guided her through this magical mystery tour, had two hits, scored a run and had an RBI for the Presidents.

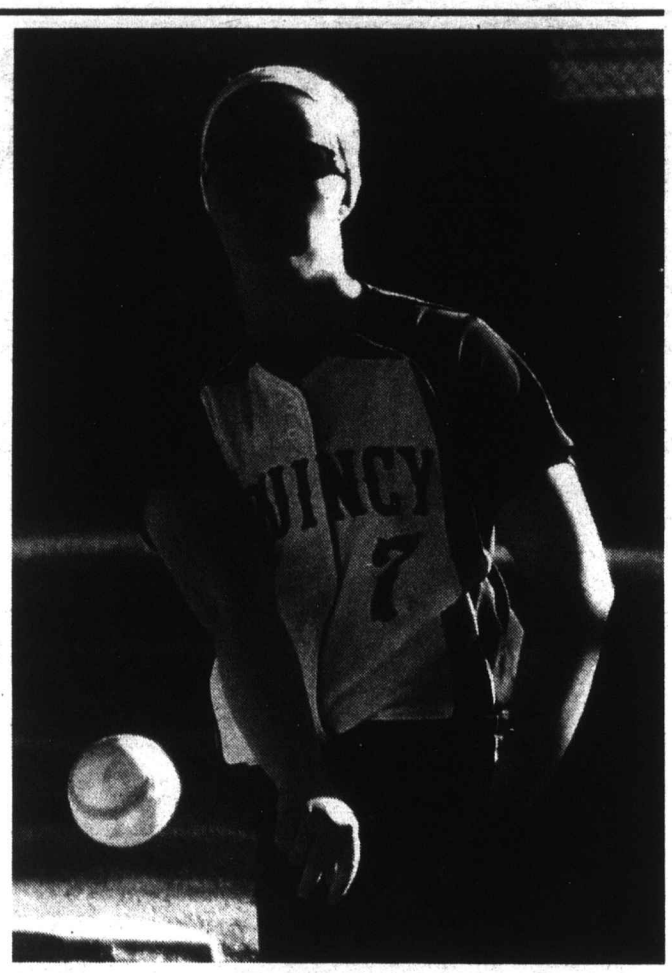
Against Plymouth North, Varmahmoodi made another saving grab catch in the seventh to turn back the Eagles' best chance at a hit. Varmahmoodi also went 3-3 at the plate.

Barone, a junior fireballer, threw a no-hitter, struck out 19, and walked none in the Silver Lake win over Quincy before a large crowd at Mitchell McCoy Field.

The win gave Silver Lake a two-game lead over Quincy in the Keenan Division of the Patriot League. Quincy is 12-2 overall and 11-2 in the league Silver Lake was 14-0 overall and 11-0 in the league. The Lakers have won their last 13 games by an aggregate total of 92-8.

Barone, who pitched five no-hitters, one perfect game and 16 shutouts over her first two years at Silver Lake, came close to a second perfect game. The only base-runner to reach against her was Walker who took first following a passed ball on a strikeout in the fourth inning.

One thing which pleased Sommers was the improved play of his defense from Quincy's first meeting with Silver Lake which the Lakers won, 12-0. The Presidents had problems with defense in the first loss, but committed just one error and played a clean game behind Bresnahan.



AFTER BEING NO-HIT by Silver Lake's Maddy Barone last Wednesday, Quincy senior pitcher Saxon Bresnahan (above) answered with two consecutive no hitters of her own silencing Plymouth North and Duxbury. Bresnahan also pitched a perfect game against the Dragons earlier this month.

QUINCY SHORTSTOP Clare Doherty fields a grounder off the bat of Silver Lake's Leah MacKiewicz in action last week.

"We were much improved over the first game. We had the one error, but other than that we made all the plays in the field," said Sommers.

Quincy made three fine plays. In the second, third baseman Angela McDonald charged a bunt by Ashley Galandi and a made a quick, strong throw to first for the out thanks to a good stretch by Nicole Jorgensen.

In the fifth, Avitabile made the play of the game. She reacted instantly to a short pop by Galandi behind the plate. She read the short flight of the ball perfectly, dove and made a tumbling catch.

In the sixth, Avitabile made a strong, accurate throw, and McDonald made a tough tag to catch Emily Critch trying to steal third.

"Angelina has made those plays the entire year," said Sommers. "She's a dirt-dog. She'll do anything to make the play. Angela is the same type player at third. She's very emotional about the game. She wants to do well and like Angelina, she'll hustle and do what she has to do to make the play for us."

Bresnahan pitched well. She matched Barone into the top of the third when Silver Lake scored three runs. The Lakers added three in the fourth and one in the sixth. Barone had a double and three RBI.

Bresnahan was also Quincy's most impressive hitter. She hit a long foul to left which nearly cleared the concession stand. She drilled another shot to left which would have been a double, but fell foul by no more than a foot or two.

In other action last week, Quincy dropped Hingham, 14-6 behind a triple, home run and three RBI from Madison Synan. Bresnahan struck out 19 in the win.

Quincy travels to Archbishop Williams Thursday (3:30) and is at Middleboro Saturday (11:00 a.m.)

STANDING UP TO ARTHRITIS

It may seem counterintuitive to tell arthritis sufferers to go out and exercise, but that is precisely what they are being told. While conventional wisdom used to make the case for slowing down and resting in bed, new research and clinical findings show that putting the body through its paces increases strength and flexibility, reduces joint pain, and helps combat fatigue. By strengthening the muscles around joints and helping to maintain proper weight, exercise helps relieve stress on arthritic joints. The chiropractor can help get arthritis sufferers on their feet by increasing their body flexibility and improving joint mobility with manipulations and range-of-motion exercises. Chiropractic treatment can be the first step in alleviating arthritis pain.

"Arthritis" describes many different diseases that cause tenderness, pain, swelling, and joint stiffness. At Family Practice of Chiropractic, we can help you. For exceptional chiropractic treatment we invite you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Swimming is an especially suitable form of exercise for arthritis sufferers because it exercises muscles and joints without subjecting them to harsh impact forces.

The game lacked just one thing. A winner.

North Quincy played with heart. The Red Raiders went without two of their top forwards. They trailed by four goals twice. They trailed by three goals with 8:00 left in the match. They never gave in and rallied to an exciting finish.

There was drama. There were four goals scored in the final 1:53 of the match and two in the last 42 seconds. The final goal, the tying goal, came with 20 seconds left on the clock.

There was the fine play of a four-star player. Senior Ciara Forde stepped up for her short-handed team. She battled and battled for faceoffs despite giving away nearly a half foot to her opponent. She scored five goals, parted the Hull defense with quicksilver rushes through the middle, found open mates with crisp passes, rifled home the go-ahead goal with 42 seconds left, and lifted North with the sheer quality of the her play.

But. It all ended in a 12-12 tie between North and Hull in a non-league contest at Veterans Stadium Saturday afternoon. No overtime. No winner. A tie. It all felt a bit empty. If ever a game deserved a winner, this was it.

"I would have liked to have had an overtime," said North coach Meg Therrien "The coaches in our league

There was an exciting win, a career scoring record, and a difficult loss for the North Quincy's boys lacrosse team last week.

Mike Finn scored five goals and Joey England delivered a clutch performance in overtime to lead the Red Raiders to a satisfying 8-7 win over Silver Lake in a Patriot League contest.

Finn not only scored the game-winner in overtime, but he also broke the career school record for goals. Finn has 174 goals in his four-year career at North.

Saturday night at the stadium, Anthony Marcella had eight goals and Ian McDonald added seven to lead Hull to a 20-8 non-league decision over the Red Raiders.

"The win over Silver Lake was a good one. The kids played great," said coach Jimmy Finn. "I was hoping the momentum would carry over to the Hull game, but I was a little disappointed in our play. We had trouble in our defensive zone especially in the first half."

Finn scored the deciding goal against Silver Lake with a good rush down the right side and a low finish. England turned back four shots in overtime to give his team a chance to win. He also stood in there against the Hull attack and posted 23 saves.

"Joey came up big for us in the Silver Lake. He kept it tied and gave Mike a chance to get the game-winner," said Finn.

Freshman Chris Donaghey had a goal and two assists for the Red Raiders against Silver Lake. Junior Jake Peterson scored his first goal of the season in the win. Austin Lee also scored for the Red Raiders. Rob Hines had a strong game, especially on faceoffs, in the victory.

"I was happy for Chris. He played an excellent game. He should be a good player for us over the next three years," said Finn.

Finn also liked the the work of his defensive line of Cornelius Koch, Ryan Moreschi and Fred Barsamian.

"We were solid in the defensive zone," said Finn

It was a satisfying achievement for Finn. He is easily North's best player. He has been the focus of opposing defenders all season. He has taken countless stick checks to the arms and hands. Two and three players run at him wherever he has the ball. It is the type of constant checking that can exact a physical and mental toll on a player. There is never an open patch of turf or an easy opening. Few of his goals have come without a hard hit.

Despite the coverage, he has buried his chances and found open cutting teammates with accurate passes. He richly deserved his achievement.

Finn, who was also a first line standout for the hockey team, will play college lacrosse at St. Joseph's in Maine. He has the tools and work ethic to be a good scorer on the next level.

"Mike has the natural touch of a goal scorer," said athletic director Mike Joyce who also coached the lacrosse team at North before assuming his duties as AD. "It's all in the hands. A scorer has to have strong and soft hands. He has to be strong to keep possession despite being hit with stick and body checks. He also needs that soft touch around the net. Mike also has the quickness to get open and the power and technique to deliver a hard shot. He is also aware of where everyone, both opponents and teammates, is around him. A scorer must have that."

Finn had three goals against Hull to boost his season total to 47. He started the scoring in the first period with a tough rush through several checks down the middle of the offensive zone.

Later in the period, he picked up a loose ball, made a rush which covered two-thirds of the field and rifled home a shot to the far corner. Before halftime, he took a nice feed from Chris Gorman and clicked with a hard drive from the left wing with North enjoying a man-advantage situation.

However, Hull took control with eight goals in the first and six in the second for a 14-6 lead which was not threatened.

"Mike is our best player and teams that slide extra coverage over to him give us trouble. That's what Hull did tonight," said Finn. "I thought our defense im proved in the second half. I wasn't so much adjustments We concentrated better an did a good job sticking wit our man in the zone."

Hines scored two goals had several strong, quic rushes through the middl and worked hard on fa ceoffs. Lee finished a terrifi passing play with Moresch and Hines which covere the entire field. Gorma connected from in close i the third period and fresh man Luca Smith scored hi first varsity goal late in th fourth period.

"Luca's goal was a high light. He worked hard and i was good to see him get hi first one," said Finn.

North (3-13) is at Rock land Thursday.

By JOE REARDON

The scenario was a dramatic one, the kind players, coaches and fans talk of around the dinner table, in neighborhood bars and at class reunions for years to come.

Quincy, battling for its tournament life, had an opportune chance to wreak some havoc on Braintree High's home field in the matchup between the two teams Monday evening. On an evening where the Wamps were holding their Senior Night, the Presidents had the opportunity to put a damper on the festivities and take a step closer to the tournament in the process.

The tournament-bound Wamps (11-5), though, weren't just going to let Quincy roll into Memorial Stadium and make a statement. Braintree overpowered Quincy from the start, running out to a 9-1 first half advantage on the way to a decisive 16-3 win.

"The first half we were a little bit shocked I think," said Quincy head coach Martin Bowes. "We knew this was a good team coming in. We got down early and that kind of defeated us. Braintree's a very good team. If we were to improve on one thing I think it would be our shot selection. I think we put the ball in places to allow the goalie to make saves and I think that's where we could have improved the most."

The loss marked the end of the Presidents' playoff hopes as they dropped to 7-11 with two games left to play. Still, Quincy has plenty to play for in its final pair of games, most notably the chance to score a huge upset victory over Hingham, a team the Presidents have never defeated.

"I think going in against Hingham - a team these guys have never beaten - that's kind of our championship game," said Bowes. "It's loose because we have nothing to lose. So why not go back and put them on their heels and try to get the upset of the year?"

Quincy was put on its heels early as the Wamps got early goals from Tom Costello, PJ Devane and Johnny Cleggett and scored five more times before Quincy finally got on the board. Steve Ross, who finished with two goals on the night, snared a pass in close and fired it past Braintree goalkeeper Marty Dinane to make it an 8-1 game with 6:03 left in the first half. Mike Calnan was denied on a strong bid a minute later and Dominic Duke, who was back in goal for the Wamps, robbed Ross' point-blank bid with just over a minute to play until the break.

The Presidents tightened up their play in the second half and were far better defensively, while mounting strong offenses rushes on the other side of the field. Sean Brennick gave Quincy its second tally when he whipped home a shot in close with 10:57 left to make it 9-2.

Bowes believed the Presidents were playing without a whole lot of confidence in the first 24 minutes and reminded the Presidents that they played far better when they loosened up.

"The message at halftime was we got guys out here that have been playing for 2-1/2 months and where's the confidence," said Bowes. "Right before we went back out we said we play best when we have fun. Let's go out there and have fun. I think that's what the change of pace was."

Connor Grehan had a great bid midway through the third and a Tom Pugsley chance was just wide of the post with 4:48 remaining in the quarter. Ross scored his second goal later in the quarter to make it 11-3 heading into the final 12 minutes.

Bowes believes the next couple of games could be intriguing for the Presidents and they're approaching them as they would posteason one-and-done situations.

"This put us out of chance for the tournament, which hurts," said Bowes. "This is an incredible group of guys. We have Hingham next and Hanover. We're looking to battle in those two games. There's so much more unity and it's a more disciplined lacrosse team than it's been in the past."

Presidents Baseball Stuns First-Place Plymouth North

By BILL GRIFFIN

Many teams would have given up on their baseball season. Quincy did not and, as a result, the Presidents earned two wins last week that they will always remember.

Last Friday, they went on the road and stunned first-place Plymouth North, 3-1 behind a masterful three-hitter from junior lefty Cody Desmond.

Saturday afternoon, freshman righty Mike Tomlinson pitched six strong innings, and Quincy rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to edge Scituate, 4-3.

Monday afternoon, Duxbury ended Quincy's two-game run. Lefty Kevin O'Rourke pitched a complete game three-hitter and the Dragons avenged a loss to Quincy earlier in the season with a 6-1 Patriot League Keenan Division decision.

"This team never packed it in. They kept battling. No matter how difficult the circumstances, they never got too low. It paid off for us with a couple of good wins," said coach Pat Bryan.

Desmond was the story of the week. Plymouth North is not only an annual league power, the Eagles have won multiple state titles. They entered the Quincy game with an 11-3 record, including an 11-2 decision over the Presidents in the first meeting of the season.

Desmond was brilliant. He struck out four, walked one and was in complete control of a good hitting club for seven innings. He was not awestruck by Plymouth's reputation or record. He went mostly with his fastball and mixed in just the right amount of curveballs. Most importantly, he threw strikes.

"That's the best game I've seen Cody pitch. The key was control. He put the ball where he wanted to," said Bryan.

"We had played them earlier and I knew some of the kids on their team, so I wasn't intimidated by them," said Desmond. "It's the best game I've pitched in a long time."

One important factor in his performance was the mound at Plymouth.

"It's a flat mound and for some reason, I'm more comfortable throwing off flat ground," said Desmond. "I was able to get in a groove right away, and my defense really helped me. There were a lot of ground balls and we made all the plays."

Third baseman Bobby Salvucci, shortstop Tyler Beach, second baseman David Cooper and first baseman Greg Paulo all had fine defensive efforts.

"We made a lot of good plays," said Bryan. "It was a great baseball game. We made a lot of good baseball plays and we beat a good team."

Quincy jumped out early in the first. Salvucci and Paulo walked. Joe Ferracane drove home a run with a double. In the fourth Curtis Frazier was hit by a pitch and scored on a double by Brendan Collins. Collins scored on an error.

That built an early 3-0 lead, and that was all Desmond would need.

Tomlinson was impressive in his varsity debut against Scituate. He gave just four hits, struck out four, and pitched with unusual composure for a freshman. He mixed his fastball and curve and was in the strike zone all afternoon.

"He has a lot of promise. Most freshmen would be nervous in that situation, but he showed a lot of poise," said Bryan. "He pounded the strike zone and competed against a good lineup."

Quincy trailed, 3-1 entering the top of the seventh. Desmond walked, stole second and scored on an error, Paulo walked. Ferracane and Alex Linskey delivered RBI hits to score a pair of ruins for 4-3 lead.

Paulo pitched the seventh. He allowed one base runner, but struck out the side to preserve the victory.

Monday, Duxbury scored two in the second, two in the fourth and two in the seventh. Quincy scored in the seventh on a double by Salvucci and a single by Paulo. Paulo had a pair of hits for the Presidents.

Paulo blanked the Dragons, 3-0 on a two-hitter in the first meeting, and Duxbury came ready to even the season series. The Dragons were especially sharp on defense, robbing Quincy of at least four hits.

In the third, center fielder Jake Reagan roamed into right center and made a diving catch of a sinking liner by Cooper. In the fourth, second baseman Pat Molampy grabbed a hard shot by Ferracane with a runner at second. In the fifth, Desmond and Linskey scalded infield grounders which the Dragons turned into outs.

"They came ready to play. They wanted to make up for the first game, and they played excellent baseball," said Bryan.

Quincy made just one error, and played good defense as well. In the third, Linskey made a terrific play, going deep in left for an over-the-shoulder grab on a drive by Brendan Kates. Peter Sac-coach made a good play in right on a hard-hit ball by Sean Lena in same inning. Cooper, Beach and Paulo turned a crisp 4-6-3 double play in the sixth.

"That was a nice catch by Linskey. He's played good defense four us," said Bryan.

Quincy (4-13) hosts Archbishop Williams Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Andrew Jaehnig On N.E. All-Rookie Baseball Team

Quincy's Andrew Jaehnig, a former Boston College High and Morrisette Post star, was named to the New England 10 Conference All Rookie Team this spring at Assumption College.

Jaehnig earned a starting job at catcher and designated hitter midway through the season. He had 29 hits and batted .279.

Jaehnig finished near the top of his team in several hitting categories. He had six doubles, three triples, three home runs, and 17 RBI.

He finished the season with a slugging percentage of .462.

Marina Bay Apartment Project To Start

By SCOTT JACKSON

Work on a 352-unit apartment complex in Marina Bay is set to commence within the next 90 days.

The Planning Board on May 13 approved a 90-day extension for the Boardwalk Residences at Marina Bay project. The board awarded a special permit for the project in May 2013 and under state law it would have expired this month had the extension not been granted.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington noted the project had to be revised after FEMA's 2014 flood maps placed the project into a flood plain. The state's Building Code Appeals Board also had to approve the plan.

Peter Tamm, an attorney representing Hines Interest Limited Partnership, which acquired the project in early 2014, said work would begin within the next 90 days.

"A demo permit has been issued. As Mr. Harrington explained a variance had to be sought under the state building code and we're down to issues of revisions due to fire code issues," Tamm said. "We're very anxious to get going."

The project includes two residential buildings with 352 units and 18,500 square feet of retail space between them. Each of the buildings will include two levels of podium parking and will be wood framed above.

The project will be located at the west end of Marina Bay, where the Ocean Club and boat warehouses are presently located.

The Planning Board approved a proposal to construct a five-story, 16-unit residential building at 60 Newbury St as well as a plan to construct and extension of Newbury Street to the site of the new building, which is located next to the Neponset River.

The new building, proposed by Bromfield Development of Quincy, will include a garage on the ground level and four floors of condos above – each floor will have four condos. The garage will have room for 32 vehicles through the use of 16 parking lifts. The lifts are designed to accommodate one average size car and an SUV each.

"Each condominium unit owner will have a deeded parking space, which will be their space on the ground on the concrete. They will each have a mechanical lift that is part of their condominium unit," Michael Joyce, an engineer working with Bromfield, explained.

"Each one will have the opportunity to park two cars in one space if they choose to. If they only own one car they won't have to use the lift and they can leave it up. If they do own two cars they can have one on the lift up in the air and the one car they use more often than the other, they can come and go in that automobile."

"We're planning on building valuable, luxury level condominiums and we wanted to have two parking spaces per unit. That will allow all the spaces outside to be guest parking."

Six spaces will be provided outside the building for visitors.

Newbury Street connects Hancock Street to the Neponset River. About half the street – the paved portion – is city owned while the unpaved portion is private. Bromfield will pave the unpaved portion of the road and construct a sidewalk along one side of that part; that work must be completed before of the building itself begins.

The Conservation Commission approved the project with an order of conditions in October 2009; the developer will need to determine whether an amendment to that order is necessary. The Zoning Board of Appeals must also approve the project.

The board gave approval to a preliminary subdivision plan for 12R and 29 Hoover Ave.

The plan calls for demolition of the existing commercial buildings on site and construction of four new houses. As part of the project, Hoover Avenue would be extended and a new cul-de-sac created at the end of the street, around which the houses will be built.

The board must approve a final plan for the subdivision, which will be presented at a future meeting. Residents will have a chance to comment on the proposal during that meeting.

The Planning Board granted continuances for two projects without hearings to the board's next meeting on June 10.

The first project was a proposal to construct a 21-unit, four-story residential building at 133-135 Hancock St. The parcel the project is planned for includes 19,841 square feet of land and is located in a Business C zoning district.

The second project is a plan to construct a three-story, eight-unit residential building at 65 and 57 Rear Cleverly Court. That project would be sited on an 11,552 square foot parcel in a Business B zoning district.

Meeting May 27 On Flood Maps

By SCOTT JACKSON

City officials will hold a public meeting for residents affected by revisions to the Federal Emergency Management Agency's flood maps at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, May 27, in the auditorium of Quincy High School.

FEMA submitted the revised flood maps to the city in recent weeks. The new maps can be viewed online by going to the city's website – quincyma.gov – clicking the link to "GIS Property Viewer" on the right sidebar, and selecting "2015 Quincy's Proposed Flood Zones" in the "Thematic Overlay" dropdown menu. The flood maps that went into effect last July can also be viewed by selecting "2014 Effective FEMA Flood Zones" under the same dropdown menu.

Hard copies of the maps are available for viewing at the city's Engineering Department, 55 Sea St., during normal business hours.

Under the revised flood maps, some 500 properties would be removed from designated flood plains. Homeowners must purchase flood insurance if they reside in a flood plain and have a federally-backed mortgage. An additional 1,500 homes in flood plains will be placed in lower-risk zones, which carry less costly premiums.

Days after the July 2014 flood maps went into place, the city filed a letter of map revision (LOMR) with FEMA to challenge those maps; the updated maps were released as a result of that appeal. The July 2014 maps placed 1,400 homes into flood plains and another 2,700 that had been in flood plains were re-mapped into higher risk zones.

The City Council will need to accept the revised maps by August, according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker.

Representatives from insurance companies and engineers will be on hand to field questions from residents at the May 27 meeting.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, May 9, 2015, at approximately 6:45 p.m., Quincy Police Drug Unit Detectives Cassidy, Duran, Keenan, O'Brien, Powers and Glennon were working in plain clothes and operating unmarked police vehicles in the area of Roche Brothers parking lot.

Detective Duran was parked in the lot and observed a Nissan pull into the parking area far away from the entrance. Within 30 seconds, a Toyota backed into the spot adjacent to the Nissan. Due to an obstructed view, Detective Duran pulled out from his spot and drove by the two vehicles. As he passed by, he observed the operator of the Toyota get out and approach the driver's side of the Nissan. He then observed the Toyota driver remove his hands from the Nissan's open driver's side window. Detective Duran further observed the Toyota driver place his closed hand into his front pocket.

At that time Detective Duran, through his training and experience, recognized these actions to be consistent with a street level drug transaction. Detective Duran then alerted all members of the Drug Unit to his observations. He informed the other Detectives that the Toyota had exited right onto Falls Boulevard.

Detectives Glennon and Cassidy picked up surveillance as the Toyota turned right onto Quincy Avenue. Detective Duran followed the Nissan as it drove northbound on Southern Artery. Detectives Powers and Keenan then picked up surveillance on the Nissan. The Toyota continued on Quincy Avenue into Braintree. Detective Duran caught up to the Toyota to confirm that it was the same person who removed his hand from the Nissan.

The Detectives stopped the Toyota at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Cotton Street. Detective Duran escorted the driver (suspect 1) from the vehicle and read him his Miranda Warning to which he replied he was willing to answer questions. Detective Duran asked suspect 1 where the drugs were and he said, "In the cup holder." Detective Duran then entered the vehicle and removed one plastic bag of heroin from the cup holder. Detective Duran asked how many more bags there were and suspect 1 said that he bought two bags and there should be one more. Detective Glennon Mirandized the passenger (suspect 2) and he volunteered to answer questions.

Suspect 2 stated that they met up with a male in the parking lot of Roche Brothers and purchased two bags of heroin for $60. When asked where the second bag was, suspect 2 said he spotted the Police trailing him so he threw it out the passenger's side rear window. Detective Glennon then opened the rear passenger's side door and located a plastic bag of heroin.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Glennon then notified Detective Keenan that heroin was recovered and that suspect 1 and 2, ages 39 and 42 years and both from Weymouth, would be summonsed to Quincy District Court for Possession of Class A as well as Conspiracy and then sent on their way. Detective Keenan notified Quincy Communications that he was on Southern Artery and requested a marked cruiser to stop the Nissan.

Shortly thereafter, Officer Dan Parisi stopped the Nissan by Broad Street where the lone occupant/operator/suspect 3 was removed from the vehicle and placed under arrest without incident. An inventory search of the vehicle revealed $310 in the glove compartment as well as a thermos. A subsequent check of the thermos by Detective Cassidy revealed it to have a false compartment containing 11 plastic bags of heroin. The $315 was seized as it is believed to be proceeds from drug sales, along with two cell phones. Suspect 3, a 40 year old Mattapan resident, was charged with, "Possession of Class A With The Intent To Distribute, Conspiracy to Violate The Controlled Substances Act and Distribution of Class A. Nice Work!

Refund and Recovery Scams (excerpts from FTC) Scam artists buy and sell "sucker lists" with the names of people who already have lost money to fraudulent promotions. These scammers may call you promising to recover the money you lost or the prize or merchandise you never received — for a fee in advance. That's against the law. Under the Telemarketing Sales Rule, they cannot ask for — or accept — payment until seven business days after they deliver the money or other item they recovered to you.

The very first question you should ask yourself is, How did the caller know that you supposedly won something in the first place and now offers to recover your prize that you never received?

Many consumers might not know that they have been scammed by a bogus prize promotion, phony charity drive, fraudulent business opportunity or other scam. If you have unknowingly paid money to such a scam, chances are your name is on a "sucker list." That list may include your address, phone numbers, and other information, such as how much money you've spent responding to phony offers. Dishonest promoters buy and sell "sucker lists" on the theory that people who have been deceived once have a high likelihood of being scammed again. These scammers lie when they promise that, for a fee or a donation to a specific charity, they will recover the money you lost, or the prize or product you never received. They use a variety of lies to add credibility to their pitch: some claim to represent companies or government agencies; some say they're holding money for you; and others offer to file necessary complaint paperwork with government agencies on your behalf. Still others claim they can get your name at the top of a list for victim reimbursement.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC), the nation's consumer protection agency, says claims like these often are false. Although some federal and local government agencies and consumer organizations help people who have lost money, they don't charge a fee and they do not guarantee to get your money back.

Don't believe anyone who calls offering to recover money, merchandise, or prizes you never received if the caller says you have to pay a fee in advance. Under the Telemarketing Sales Rule, it's against the law for someone to request or receive payment from you until seven business days after you have the money or other item in hand. If someone claims to represent a government agency that will recover your lost money, merchandise, or prizes for a fee or a donation to a charity, report them immediately to the FTC. National, state, and local consumer protection agencies and nonprofit organizations do not charge for their services. Before you use any company to recover either money or a prize, ask what specific services the company provides and the cost of each service. Check out the company with local government law enforcement and consumer agencies; ask whether other people have registered complaints about the business.

Sheriff Seeks New Sign-Ups For 'Are You OK?'

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti is urging Norfolk County residents to take advantage of his lifesaving "Are You OK?" program, which he runs in conjunction with Fallon Ambulance Service.

"This program is so beneficial, especially to older people who live by themselves. We check on their wellbeing every day, and in doing so, we provide those enrolled in the program with a sense of security and peace of mind," Bellotti said.

Each day, 365 days a year, an officer from "Are You OK?" places a phone call to the homes of everyone enrolled in the program at an agreed-upon time. If a program enrollee does not answer or otherwise indicates he or she is not OK, the officer contacts the police to check on the wellbeing of that person.

Initiated in Norfolk County in 2001, the program, which is free of charge to the public, faced extinction in 2009 due to budget constraints until Fallon Ambulance offered to help keep "Are You OK?" up and running.

"Fallon Ambulance really stepped up to the plate when we needed them most," Bellotti said. "They recognized the importance and value of the program and offered us office space in their building and assistance from their professional personnel when our staff is on vacation or days off. They never asked us for anything in return, and we continue to be grateful for their partnership in the program."

Bellotti said "Are You OK?" has come to the aid of more than 100 area residents when they needed it most.

"We've had a number of cases where people have fallen in their homes and not been able to get up and, more importantly, not been able to let anyone know they need help. That's where we come in," he said.

The program allows older people to maintain their independence while still feeling secure. It also provides a great measure of peace of mind to young people who are concerned about their elder relatives living alone.

For more information or to sign up for "Are You OK?" visit www.norfolksheriff.com and click on "Programs for the Community" or call the Norfolk Sheriff's Office at 1-866-900-7865.

Get Into The Act With Older Americans Month

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

In May, we recognize Older Americans Month to acknowledge older Americans and their contributions to the nation.

More than 40 million people in the United States are 65 or older. By 2035, the U.S. Census Bureau projects this number will double, which makes improving the quality of life for older Americans even more important as we look to the future. It is Social Security's priority to provide a safety net for older Americans. You can learn more about Social Security at www.socialsecurity.gov.

The main reason Social Security was established 80 years ago was to help older Americans. For many older Americans, Social Security benefits are their only source of retirement income. Social Security payments continue for life and are adjusted to keep pace with inflation. The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) estimates that these benefits help keep 35 percent of older Americans out of poverty.

A great tool for people of all ages is the my Social Security account. With a personalized my Social Security account, you can:

- Get an estimate of future benefits, if you still work;
- Get an instant letter with proof of current benefits; and
- Manage your benefits.

Visit www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount and join the millions of people who have already created accounts to help them plan for retirement.

This May also marks the 50th anniversary of the Older Americans Act. Congress passed the Act in 1965 in response to a lack of community social services for older persons. Medicare, in effect since July 1, 1966, will also celebrate its 50th anniversary soon. Medicare provides health insurance to more than 42 million Americans age 65 and older. If you aren't familiar with the four parts of Medicare, they are:

Part A (hospital insurance): Hospital insurance helps pay for inpatient care in a hospital or skilled nursing facility (following a hospital stay), some home health care, and hospice care.

Part B (medical insurance): Medical insurance helps pay for doctors' services and many other medical services and supplies that hospital insurance doesn't cover.

Part C (Medicare Advantage plans): If you have Medicare Parts A and B, you can join a Medicare Advantage plan. Private companies offer Medicare Advantage plans approved by Medicare. These plans generally help you pay the medical costs not covered by Medicare Part A and B.

Part D (prescription drug coverage): Prescription drug coverage helps pay for medications doctors prescribe for treatment.

To learn more about applying for Medicare, read our publication Applying For Medicare Only—Before You Decide. To learn more about Social Security, read Understanding the Benefits. Both are available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

Personal Property Tax Exemption Raised To $10,000

forms asking them to list personal property in 2014. From those lists, the city issued personal property tax bills totaling $8.65 million.

By raising the exemption to $10,000, Moran said the personal property tax would no longer apply to 1,042 businesses in the city; they would still be required to submit lists of personal property but wouldn't receive a tax bill. He said the city would only lose $130,956 in revenue as a result.

Moran added the increase in the exemption would make Quincy more attractive to small businesses than neighboring communities that don't have one.

"It makes the city a little more attractive to do business in as a small business. Milton, Braintree, Weymouth have no exemption," he explained.

"In terms of lost revenue you're only taking about $130,000 and for the small businesses that would be a tremendous impact," Council President Joseph Finn said.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee opposed increasing the exemption.

"You said it is $130,000. It's not a lot of money and I don't see how it's going to help the small businesses. It's not a significant amount of money for a small business. I don't understand the change," McNamee said.

"I know you say you track the businesses, but I don't think that there is a better way to verify whether you have a going concern than somebody paying an excise. I think that's a very, very strong piece of evidence there is a business there."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci did not attend Monday's meeting.

North Quincy Girls Lacrosse Battles Hull To 12-12 Tie

have never voted to have an overtime, so we couldn't play one. It was disappointing."

The tie also did not help North in its chase for its first tournament berth since 2007. The Red Raiders finished the week at 6-7-1. Entering the Hull game, they had to win four of their last eight. After the Hull game, they had to win four of their last seven. The game was wonderful, the tie was not.

"We're trying not to think too much about the tournament," said Therrien. "We want to stay in the moment and play every single second as hard as we can. We did that tonight."

North was without Marissa McGue (28 goals) and Kiera Clifford (four goals in a win against Silver Lake earlier in the week). Clifford is an excellent player. McGue is one of the best players in the league. She is money as a finisher in front of the net and she is dynamite on faceoffs which decide possession and control of the game.

Enter Forde, Sarah Tsan, and Savannah Flynn. North struggled against Hull's tall center Grace Ryan on faceoffs in the first half. Therrien went to Forde. Forde gave away inches, but she did not give away the fight. She won a few cleanly, but mostly she created 50-50 chances because she simply wouldn't give up the ball. She jumped high, she went to the turf, she gave her mates a chance at control and a rush up the field.

The Red Raiders were down 7-3 when Forde took her first faceoff early in the second half. They then outscored Hull by four goals. It was not a coincidence.

"I tried some different combinations, but I went to Ciara because she is so tenacious. She just wants the ball so much," said Therrien.

Tsan scored four goals, two in the second half including a go-ahead score which put North up, 11-10 with 1:53 left. She was swift covering ground in the open field. She crashed the net and finished with hard, accurate shots. Flynn was a leader in the rally. She won a fistful of ground balls and applied steady pressure in the scoring zone in front of the Hull cage.

"What I liked about Sarah was she went in very hard and she finished. She played a great game," said Therrien. "Communicating and talking to each together is so important. I could hear Savannah all over the field, and that gave us a lift."

The second half was like the stretch of a great horse race. The lead was wide. The lead narrowed. The lead stretched out again. The lead changed. The horses were tied, tied in a photo finish at the end. Hull started ahead, 7-3. Forde scored twice, Charlotte Chretian and Kara Carchedi added singletons. It was tied at 7-7.

Hull lengthened it out to 10-7 with eight minutes left. Forde simply would not let North lose. She scored twice. Kerin Coleman added a goal and it was tied at 10-10. Tsan scored on a free shot and North edged ahead, 11-10. Ryan tied it for Hull with 1:25 left. Forde made a beautiful move, sweeping from left to right along the fringe of the defense before finding a crease and firing home a rocket for a 12-11 North lead with 0:42 left.

They were in the home stretch and North was up by one. However, Ryan scored again and they were even with 20 seconds left. It was great stuff, a great race. They hit the finish line tied. There was not an inch between them. There would be no overtime, no winner, no loser. A tie.

"I think what pleased me the most was the way we played hard despite being down for almost the entire second half. The kids gave maximum effort every second they were out there. That's all a coach can ask," said Therrien.

Marguerite Belcher backed North with another excellent showing in goal. She turned away 18 shots. Junior MollyKate Cannon was terrific in midfield. She was the key player in North's smooth transition from defense to offense. She also won most of the 50-50 balls Forde created with her grit on the faceoffs.

"MollyKate was great," said Therrien. "She is such a smart player. She knows when to pass, when to rush, and when to get off the ball."

In other action last week, Clifford and Forde each scored four goals to lift North past Silver Lake, 15-5. Flynn scored three while Coleman, Cannon, Molly Minton and Aislinn Collins added singletons. Belcher had 19 saves.

North is at Abington Friday at 4:00.

IN THE MIDST of a rain storm last spring volunteers Patti Hogan, Melissa Pond and Ben Pond planted the Food Pantry Garden at Interfaith Social Services' offices in Quincy Center. Keohane Funeral Home Donates Free Vegetable Seedlings To The Community

Available May 22-29; Produce To Benefit Local Food Pantries

When you plant your garden this spring consider planting a little extra for your hungry neighbors.

Keohane Funeral Home, Interfaith Social Services, and the Weymouth Food Pantry are kicking off the fifth annual Harvest Helpers program by distributing free vegetable seedlings to area residents. Between May 22nd and May 29th free seedlings will be available to anyone willing to raise them and then donate the produce to either pantry once harvested.

"These two food pantries feed thousands of South Shore residents every year," said John Keohane, funeral home co-president. "Everyone here at Keohane wanted to do something to help. So we planted a vegetable garden at our location in Quincy three years ago and we started this seedling giveaway.

"This year we're adding a garden in Weymouth as well. Each year more and more people are participating. It's great to see fresh, healthy produce going to those who need it the most," Keohane said.

Interfaith Social Services operates a variety of programs designed to help the community. Each year their food pantry serves over 18,000 local residents. "Our food pantry wants to do more than feed our clients, we want to nourish them with healthy food," said Interfaith Social Services' executive director Rick Doane. "It doesn't matter to us if the vegetables from Harvest Helpers go to Interfaith's food pantry in Quincy, the Weymouth Food Pantry, or any other emergency food program.

"The important thing is that fresh local produce is being donated to feed our hungry neighbors who live right here on the South Shore," Doane said.

The National Garden Writers Association estimates there are 84 million backyard gardeners in the United States.

"We're hoping the Harvest Helpers program will inspire backyard gardeners living here on the South Shore to mobilize around this issue and provide hungry area residents with locally grown food," adds Cas Casados, director of the Weymouth Food Pantry which provides food to 350-600 families each month. "Hunger is a community issue and this is an opportunity to get involved in a way that's fun for the whole family."

If you would like some free seedlings, you can stop by either food pantry between May 22nd and May 29th.

Interfaith Social Services' food pantry is located at 105 Adams St. in Quincy and seedling pick-ups are from 9:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. weekdays.

The seedlings at Weymouth Food Pantry, located at 1189 Commercial St., Weymouth, are ready for pick-up between 8 a.m. and noon Tuesday through Friday.

Seedlings will also be available at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St. in Quincy and the McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, 809 Main St. in Weymouth from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. May 22nd – 29th.

Those who don't have the room to grow a garden at home or an apartment can help by volunteering to help tend the Interfaith Social Services' Food Pantry garden or the new garden Keohane Funeral Services is planting for the Weymouth Food Pantry at their South Weymouth location.

Donations are also welcome to help support the Harvest Helpers Food Program at www.interfaithsocialservices.org or www.weymouthfoodpantry.org.

To volunteer, or for more information, contact Rick Doane at 617-773-6203, rdoane@interfaithsocialservices.org; Joe Reardon, 617-773-3551, joe@keohane.com; or Cas Casados at 781-331-7682, cas@weymouthfoodpantry.org.

The show will feature extraordinary visualizations created through juggling, lighting, and large-scale metaphors that explain the mysteries of matter — including atoms, molecules, and nanotechnology.

For more about the Bros, Google The Amazing Nano Brothers.

This free and 8th annual family fun event is hosted by Christ Church Quincy and the Office of Congregational Development of The Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries self-esteem level is high, as is your impatience to see more action come your way in the workplace. Good news, Lamb: It could start to happen sooner than you think.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Changing things now could upset a lot of people. But if you feel you're acting because you believe it's the right thing to do, others will understand and even come to support you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A change of mind might not necessarily be a change of heart. You still want to go ahead with your plans, but you might see a better way to make them happen. So go for it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An old business dispute could re-emerge and possibly affect upcoming negotiations. Consider opening up the situation to include suggestions from others on both sides of the issue.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some Leos and Leonas might find it somewhat difficult to get their ideas accepted or even considered. But that's only for a while. Things will soon return to the way you like them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The pace seems to be slowing down from the hectic on-the-job run you recently enjoyed. But be assured that you're still in the race to pick up new workplace-related goodies.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Seasonal changes create opportunities for busy Librans. However, be sure to balance your workload with your personal life so that you don't overdo it on one end or the other.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former critic could make a surprise turnaround and become a supporter. But if your Scorpion sense suspects a questionable motive, who are the rest of us to doubt it?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Data on a new project seems less than dependable. But it might turn out to be just the opposite. Consult with someone who knows how you might best be able to check it out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Capricorneans face many decisions this week, with the Sea Goat's kids rating high on the consideration scale, especially regarding vacations and upcoming school matters.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Showing that you care is what Aquarians do so well. It's your very special skill. And this week, you'll have several chances to show off that gift for a very special person. Good luck.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) That streak of Piscean wariness should serve you well this week should you be among those who come up against a slippery character offering a fishy deal with nothing to back it up.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an artist's sense of how to help others see, as you do, the beautiful things about the world.

DOVE, Inc. (DOmestic Violence Ended) would like to recognize our guests, sponsors and volunteers who helped to make the Divas Dance for DOVE "THE ultimate girls night out"! We are grateful for your unwavering support of our programs and services and for your dedication to furthering our mission to end domestic violence in our communities.

John Neal II Jr, EMT; Kristen Kehoe holding baby Thomas, and Jen Fallon, Call Taker

No two emergencies are exactly the same; each has its own reach. There are those emergencies that affect a single individual or an entire family, while others have a wider reach, affecting our entire community and beyond. In all instances, Fallon Ambulance is there for families, like the Kehoes who needed specific help and fast, and for all of Quincy when a blaze threatens our citizens and our downtown. No matter the scale or reach of the situation, Fallon responds with promptness and readiness, committed to successfully addressing the emergency at hand.

An Unexpected Home Birth

Sometimes emergencies result in a miracle, and that was the case with the Kehoe family, residents of Quincy, in March. Kristen Kehoe was at the end of pregnancy and beginning to show signs of labor on a snowy March day, so she packed her hospital bag as her husband, Ron, was on his way home from work. Ron arrived at home, but the couple's plan to get to the hospital was suddenly unrealistic. Kristen's rapidly progressing labor, the rush-hour time of day, distance to the hospital, and snowy road conditions kept them put at home. Their baby was coming and soon.

Kristen's father, Rich O'Connell, was already there at the family's home, helping out with their 2-year-old but he was soon called on to be more than a caretaker. It became apparent that he'd be assisting in the delivery of his grandson. Rich called 911 and was connected with Jen Fallon, Call Taker in Dispatch for Fallon Ambulance. Rich recalls relying on Jen, as she stayed calm and in control while his adrenaline took over. The baby was born 15 minutes later, and Jen provided support and direction during and after the delivery.

> "If it wasn't for the 911 operator, I don't know how the situation would have turned out. She was terrific, stayed calm and walked us through the whole thing."
> Rich O'Connell
> Father to Kristen, Grandfather to Thomas

Moments after baby Thomas was born, the Quincy Fire and Police Departments and Fallon Ambulance responded to the snowy scene. Fallon provided care to the mother and baby, transporting the healthy pair to South Shore Hospital. The Kehoes were thrilled to welcome their beautiful son, who will have quite the memorable birth story!

Quincy Shipyard Roof Collapse

When the Quincy Shipyard roof collapsed in January 2005, Fallon responded with four ambulances, three supervisors, one Rehab unit and activated its Incident Response Group to support this regional catastrophe. There were multiple injuries requiring on-scene treatment from Fallon and additional support was provided to Fire Fighters on scene to ensure their safety.

Masonic Temple Building Fire

In September 2013, a four-alarm blaze ravaged the historic Masonic Temple building in downtown Quincy. Over 70 emergency personnel fought a fire that risked lives, safety, and property. While responding to this incident, Fallon ensured that the EMS operations in the City were enhanced, as Quincy was divided due to the emergency apparatus on Hancock Street. Fallon deployed additional ambulances to the north and south parts of the City, so that advanced and basic life support ambulances were available should another emergency arise simultaneously.

Preparation Related to Ebola

As the international community faced the threat of Ebola, Fallon prepared for a public health emergency at home. Fallon hosted training on donning and doffing of protective gear for patients suspected of Ebola exposure in October of 2014. Attendees included Fallon employees, Quincy Fire and Police, as well as administrators from Manet Community Health.

Ruptured Gas Line at Quincy Medical Center

In February 2015, a falling icicle ruptured a gas line at Quincy Medical Center, forcing an evacuation of the building. This generated eleven transports out of the medical center to other area hospitals. Fallon responded with ten ambulances within minutes, ensuring that all needs of the neighbors and hospital were met. At the same time, Fallon maintained an additional three ambulances dedicated to the community.

Always Here in an Emergency

When Faced with an Emergency of any Scale, Quincy Can Always Count on Fallon

As the municipal ambulance provider in Quincy, Fallon addresses emergencies every day—that's our line of work and that's where we thrive. Having served the City for nearly two decades, we've seen emergencies on a larger scale than those we experience regularly: building collapses, gas line ruptures, evacuations, and natural disasters. Whether we're responding to a routine medical call or a larger scale emergency, we are proud to be there for the residents and visitors of the City of Quincy.

Emergencies Can Take Many Forms. And Fallon is Here for All of Them.

Flag Day Parade, Celebration June 13

The annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration – a local tradition dating back to 1951 – will take place Saturday, June 13.

Started 64 years ago by Koch Club founder, the late Richard J. Koch, the Quincy Flag Day parade is the longest-running parade of its kind in the nation.

"It is a great testament to our community that this wonderful tradition not only continues, but continues to grow each and every year," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who has been Flag Day Chairman for more than 25 years.

The parade consists of specialty units ranging from fire units, Army National Guard vehicles, and the 2014 Miss Massachusetts. Some of the best marching bands throughout the state march the parade route

Kids Walk To Cure Juvenile Diabetes Saturday

At Beechwood Knoll School

STUDENTS PARTICIPATING in the fifth annual Kids Walk to Cure Diabetes at Beechwood Knoll Saturday were recognized by the City Council May 18. The walk has raised $160,000 for the JDRF over the past four years. Front row (from left): Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, Carly Amendolare, Ciara Golden, Alyssa Gonzales, and Cate Demopoulos. The City Council proclaimed Saturday, May 30, as 'Juvenile Diabetes Day' in Quincy in recognition of the fifth annual Kids Walk to Cure Diabetes being held that day at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

The walk begins at 9:30 a.m. at the school, located at 225 Fenno St., and will be held rain or shine. Proceeds from the walk benefit the JDRF, an organization dedicated to finding a cure for type 1 diabetes (also known as juvenile diabetes), with some funds going back to the school system. Donations can be made to any of the 13 Quincy schools participating in the walk, through JDRF.org, or at the walk itself.

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes and Councillor Doug Gutro presented the proclamation on May 18 to organizers of the event and students who will be participating in it.

"It's certainly something that has afflicted millions of Americans – juvenile diabetes – and something worth raising awareness about. The fact that they partner with the schools and give some of the proceeds back is really great. It gets the kids involved in not only raising awareness about the disease but also participating in the community," Hughes said.

"[This is] just recognizing the families who not only deal with this – juvenile diabetes – on a daily basis but also those who bring their children to participate in helping to rid the nation and our kids of this terrible disease."

"I've had the privilege over the last five years to participate in the walk," Gutro added. "In my neighborhood, like many neighborhoods across the city, the elementary schools create a lot of the best activists and down at the Beechwood Knoll School the Amendolares, the Gonzaleses and Goldens have done a terrific job bringing awareness to an important issue.

"I'm proud as always to participate, recognize them and support them on their big day. I hope folks throughout the city will come down to the Beechwood Knoll School on May 30 and join in."

The previous four walks have raised $160,000 for the JDRF, including $43,000 in 2014.

"We've been recognized as one of the largest JDRF kids walks and one of the most successful in New England," said John Amendolare, one of the walk's organizers.

Alyssa Gonzales, a seventh grade student at Central Middle School, was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes when she was six years old. She has participated in the annual walk since 2012, and said it has changed her life tremendously.

"I have had type 1 diabetes since I was six-years-old. I first heard of the Quincy Kids Walk in 2012 from a friend and fellow diabetic. I attended the JDRF Walk to Cure Diabetes and realized how much money and awareness we could raise. The next year we got my school, Montclair Elementary, involved in the walk. I was able to raise a little over $6,000 and combined all the schools raised around $40,000. Last year, Central Middle School participated in the walk and raised over $4,000. Right now, I have raised around $2,000 in two weeks," Gonzales said.

"This walk has changed my life tremendously. More people are learning about type 1 diabetes and raising money for the JDRF. People can become inspired or moved by the people with this disease and spread the word to others – it becomes a chain reaction…the JDRF Quincy Kids Walk to Cure Diabetes has changed many kids' lives, including mine and it has gotten us closer and closer to finding a cure. Let's make type 1, type none."

City To Purchase 48 Cleaves St. To Mitigate Flood Concerns

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will purchase an undeveloped Wollaston parcel to mitigate flood concerns in the neighborhood.

The City Council on May 18 authorized the purchase of 48 Cleaves St. for $105,000. The parcel includes 10,000 square feet of land, according to the city assessor's online database, and its assessed value is the same as the sales price. The property is located in a residential A zoning district and a federally designated flood plain.

The council approved the purchase in a 7-1 vote, with Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee casting the dissenting vote. (Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was absent from the May 18 meeting.)

"It's a very small parcel. I don't know what kind of mitigation you're going to get. I'm not going to support this," McNamee said. "I don't think it's a good use of money."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, who represents Wollaston, backed the purchase.

"There are great flooding problems in that particular area on that street, so utilizing it for flood mitigation does make sense," she said. "I respect Councillor McNamee's position, but I have to disagree in this particular instance and support this."

Councillor Doug Gutro, who previously represented Ward 5, also backed the acquisition, citing concern about possible development on site.

"When I was a ward councillor they came at us many, many times on properties that chronically flooded and at some point gets victorious after three or four or five bites before the Zoning Board and the Conservation Commission and it has an adverse impact on the whole neighborhood," Gutro explained.

"These orphan lots down the line are going to be important for flood storage capacity. I know there are probably dozens of such lots and we can't afford them all, but to look at them strategically. This is in a spot that has a history of issues behind the Strand."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall asked about plans for the lot once the city purchases it. James Fatseas, the chief of staff to Mayor Thomas Koch, said keeping the lot undeveloped would mitigate flooding in the area even if the city did not build a pump station or other flood control measures on site.

"If we were to not build on the property, it's a water displacement lot. This is an area we wouldn't have to dig a retention pond at this space. Just the surface not having a house, foundation, driveway, etc. on it would help the flood situation in that particular area," Fatseas said.

"It's a low lying area in the city and it's a flood plain area that we feel that at this time we can get at a reasonable price."

CAGING A CANARY

Before budget-minded individuals look to colored gemstones as alternatives to diamonds for engagement rings, they should give careful consideration to "fancy yellow" or "canary" diamonds. Within a spectrum that has very expensive colorless diamonds on one end and exceedingly rare and valuable "Fancy Vivid Yellow" diamonds on the other resides a range of very affordable yellow diamonds of varying color intensity. These diamonds occur naturally and are not heat-treated. Yellow diamonds not only hold up the tradition of engagement diamonds, but their color is also enhanced with the use of yellow gold shanks and prongs. Orange, yellow, and pink gemstones of all kinds are expected to be very popular this year, with canary diamonds leading the way.

Our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. Select the perfect jewelry to suit your taste at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. For more information, please call 617-773-3636.

Park Service Report Recommmends Visitors Center At Adams Birthplaces

the Quincy Historical Society and the Adams National Historic Park scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight (Thursday) at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., in Quincy Center.

The Olmsted Center identified 20 recommendations – called treatments in the cultural landscape report – for the birthplaces, located at 133 and 141 Franklin Street. Brown said the goal of including the recommendations in the report is to get the conversation about them started; more planning would be needed before anything could be implemented.

"We're planting the seed and hopefully getting the conversation going," she explained in a phone interview. "Nothing in the report will happen without more planning."

The new visitor center is included in a 1996 general management plan for the Adams National Historic Park. The park does have a visitors center in Quincy Center, but the recommendation in the general management plan and the recent cultural landscape report includes a new one at the birthplaces themselves.

The report says the visitor center should be located on an adjacent parcel if a willing seller could be found; if not, the center could be located on the existing property. The recommended building would include restrooms, a ticket office, a gathering area to orient groups, and a sales or educational area. The new building could be designed to resemble one of several outbuildings – such as barns and sheds – the Adamses once owned on site.

In addition to serving as a visitors center, the new building would also allow the park service to move programs currently held at Peace Field to the birthplaces.

The plan to reconfigure the intersection of Franklin Street, Presidents Avenue and Independence Avenue would need to be done in collaboration with the city. That would allow for the restoration of the front lawn of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace and make the intersection more pedestrian friendly. The report recommends the removal of parking spaces on the west side of Franklin Street, adjacent to the birthplaces, as well. Additionally, the stop for National Park Service trolleys could be moved further north on Franklin Street or to Presidents Avenue.

Like the creation of a new center for visitors, the reconfiguration of the intersection was also included in the 1996 general management plan.

Another recommendation is to create new programming to interpret the evolution of the landscape around the site, including the 200-acre farm the Adams family once owned on Penn's Hill. That could be done using graphics or other digital media, 3D models, maps or narrative descriptions of the land.

A related recommendation is new walking tours of the neighborhood, including stops at the Abigail Adams Cairn on Penn's Hill, which is included on a current NPS walking trail; the Bradford Street Playground, formerly owned by Charles Francis Adams; and Faxon Park, a site that was not owned by the Adamses, but which the cultural landscape report says "provides an undeveloped landscape setting that harkens back to the early Quincy landscape known by the Adamses."

Other recommendations include the rebuilding of missing portions of a stonewall around the John Quincy Adams Birthplace; construction of a wooden or recycled material fence along the north side of the site; removing invasive plants and replacing them with historically accurate shrubs; addition of ramps to improve accessibility; replacing the pines around the northern property line; and working with the city to install new street trees.

In addition to the recommendations, the report also details the history of the Adams Birthplaces and the surrounding land in South Quincy and Penn's Hill, much of which the Adams family once owned. The report begins in the 1600s, before the Adams family purchased various parcels in the area, and runs through the current day.

That information was compiled from land records held by the Quincy Historical Society and maps from the Thomas Crane Public Library. Brown said she plans to highlight how those records were used to compile the report at tonight's program.

"I plan to highlight how we were able to use the collection," Brown said. "If you're a resident of Quincy you can see if John Adams owned the land where you live. It really shows the evolution of what the Adams family owned at Penn's Hill."

The report also includes a number of photos showcasing the birthplaces over the years. Those photos come from a number of different sources.

The Olmsted Center has authored cultural landscape reports for other historic sites and throughout the country, including the Charlestown Navy Yard, the North Bridge in Concord, and Angel Island in San Francisco.

The Olmsted Center is also compiling a cultural landscape report for Peace Field in Quincy, which is also part of the Adams National Historical Site. That report is currently in the draft stage; there is no timetable for its completion.

"We didn't want to rush through it," Brown said. "We're making sure we give it all the detail it deserves."

Josiah Quincy House Free Tours June 6

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 6, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

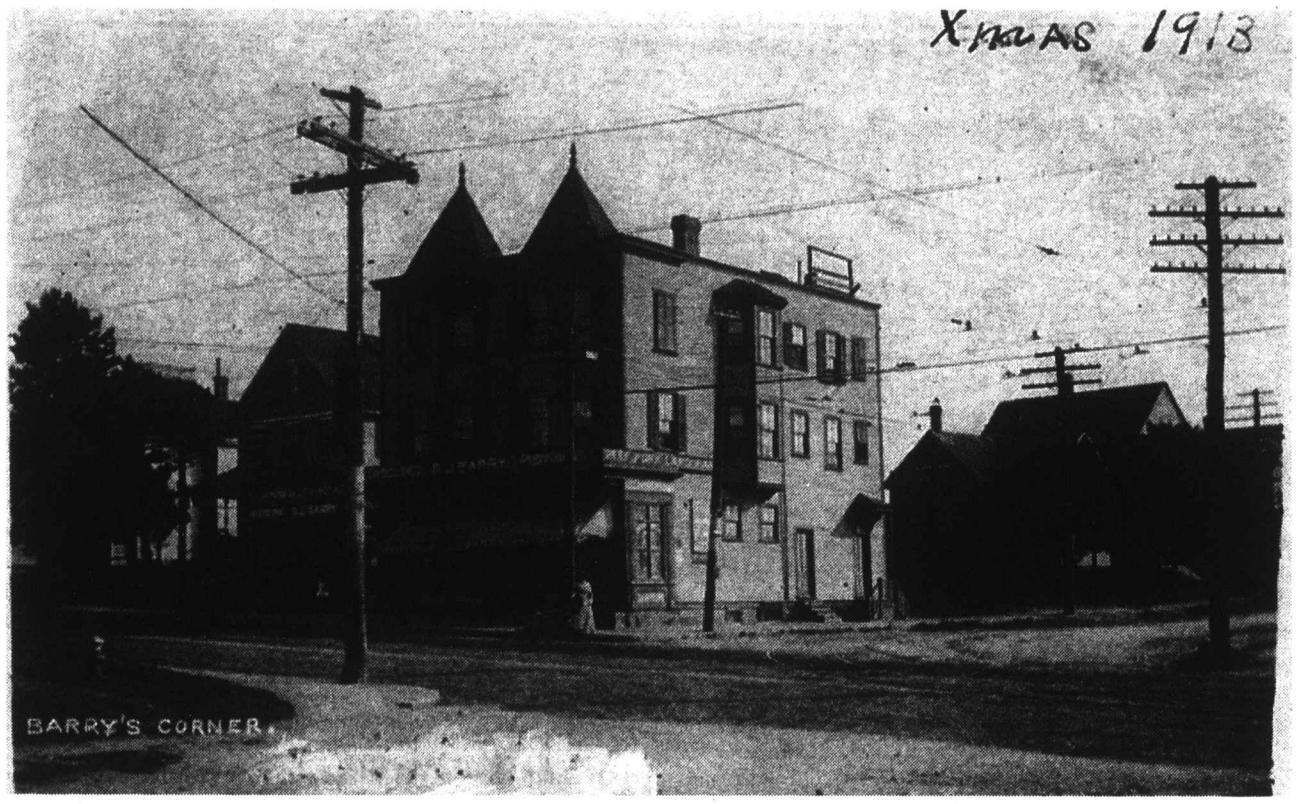
For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

HISTORIC NEW ENGLAND'S Josiah Quincy House will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 6, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The house is located at 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston. Quincy Sun Photo/Bob Noble

The Quincy House recently underwent a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators reinstalled rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s. Curators recently welcomed a fascinating artifact as part of the restoration project. In early May, a rare early nineteenth-century Chinese ivory pagoda arrived to act as a stand-in for the Quincy family's pagoda, which is now in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. According to Miss Quincy, the pagoda came into the family in 1792 and moved along with them to several of their Boston homes before finally arriving at their home in Quincy in 1876.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The house, located at 20 Muirhead St in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment. For information call 617-994-5930 or visit www.HistoricNewEngland.org.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1913 real photo postcard view of the Atlantic Apartments building on the corner of Hancock and West Squantum Streets in the Atlantic section of Quincy. The first floor along with a small attached building was home to Richard J. Barry's butcher shop and grocery store by which this intersection became known as Barry's Corner. West Squantum Street goes off to the right and East Squantum begins in the left foreground. Barry was a butcher and owned a small brass foundry on Newport Avenue when he opened this store in the 1890's. He later went into real estate as did his son, Richard J. Jr and grandson Richard W., both of whom became attorneys and served as Quincy city councillors. After Barry sold his shop here various other business owners occupied the street level of these buildings including Timothy J. Shenick, a tinsmith whose sheet metal shop was in the small attached building in the 1920's. Then in 1936 the Atlantic Apartments and later the house to its left were replaced with a Sunoco gas station which was in business here until early this year. In 1938, Cornelius V. Keohane moved his funeral home into the house hidden by the trees on the left. And now this Keohane Funeral Home along with the Sunoco gas station will become the site of a TD Bank branch. (Editor's note: Timothy Shenick was Tom Galvin's great grandfather.) To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Presentation June 3

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will present a power point presentation on Cohasset's Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Wednesday, June 3 at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The public is invited to attend.

The presentation will include the construction of the first lighthouse which began in 1848 and was completed in 1849. The lighthouse was completely destroyed in a storm on April 16 and 17, 1851, described as "the worst engineering disaster suffered by the U. S. Lighthouse Establishment since its beginning."

Construction on its replacement began in 1855 and was built of Quincy granite supplied by the Granite Railway Company. On display at the meeting will be tools and lifting apparatus that would have been used in the construction of the lighthouse.

Thanks To All Who Aided Quincycles, First 'Spine' Ride

Readers Forum

On May 9th, the first day of Bay State Bike Week 2015, more than 40 cyclists met at Atlantic Middle School. Together we rode along Hancock and Washington Streets to celebrate the endorsement by City Council of the MAPC Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan. The route we rode – The Spine Route – is designated in that plan to receive bicycle lanes and sharrows.

I would like to express my gratitude to all who aided Quincycles in the planning of our first Ride the Spine event. Many thanks to Lt. Sorgi and his fellow officers of the Community Police Unit for helping the large group share the road with minimal impact. And special thanks to our event co-sponsors: Mayor Koch's Bicycle Commission, Quincy's Planning Department, Anderson Bicycle, and the Bay State Bike Week organizers.

If you are interested in cycling in Quincy, visit Quincycles.org for details about our rides on the second and third Saturdays of every month, as well as our Destination Rides. Join us at our monthly meetings to help us advocate for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promote responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation and exercise in Quincy.

Fears Unions Are In A Losing Battle

I note the call for unions to cease their demonstration for jobs in downtown development. They are urged to "sharpen their pencils" in submitting their bids for the work. In other words, low ball their price.

This is deja vu all over again. Unions came into response to the bosses playing workers against one another to improve the bosses' bottom line. This is how globalization has created a race to the bottom destroying industries in America. Quincy downtown development can't be globalized. So union busting is the order of the day. This has created the vast gulf in society where the few in the social order control the majority of the wealth.

Unfortunately, I fear that unions are in a losing battle. Quincy development is a microcosm of the haves versus the have-nots. I urge the mayor to stand by the unions.

Sheets Calls For Anti-Litter Ordinances

By FRANK McCAULEY

Pedestrians littering on public property and private property owners who don't keep their premises free of litter would be subject to a $25 fine under an ordinance proposed by Mayor James A. Sheets.

Sheets announced his administration is drafting a ticketing ordinance for litter. The mayor, who is using a Cambridge litter ordinance as a model, said he hopes to introduce such an ordinance at the June 4 meeting of the City Council.

The ordinance would need City Council approval before it is enacted.

METER FEEDING CRACKDOWN

Motorists who think they have out-maneuvered city meter maids by feeding the meters in Quincy Square should think again.

Beginning this week the Department of Traffic and Parking will step up its enforcement of the exceeding meter violation, the so-called "meter feeding" in the Quincy Center business district, said Traffic Engineer David Kinnecom.

The city ordinance provides a one-hour time limit on all metered spaces on Hancock Street in the Quincy Square area between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. The one-hour limit applies even if additional coins are inserted to extend the time on the meter to avoid expiration.

Violators may be ticketed under Code 21 "Exceeding Meter Ordinance." The fine for this violation is $55 and violators may be ticketed more than once per day.

According to Kinnecom, the purpose of the ordinance is to ensure there is a regular turnover of parking spaces for customers and patrons of businesses in the Square.

Jennifer's Individual Baked Omelet

By MARIE

At a recent cook-out at my granddaughter Stacy and husband John's house, somehow or other we started talking about food. And my other granddaughter Jennifer told me about a great breakfast recipe that she makes all the time. It's an individual baked omelet which contains yogurt and comes out looking like a soufflé.

Once it's made she said, it's refrigerated and enjoyed reheated for a quick, but delicious breakfast.

In today's recipe the amount of the ingredients can be changed according to how much you want.

BAKE OMELET IN A MUFFIN TIN
6 eggs (beaten)
8 ounces of Greek plain yogurt
Salt and Pepper to taste
1/4 cup of either uncooked spinach or kale (optional)
Preheat oven to 350 degrees

Beat the eggs and add the yogurt, salt and pepper and the vegetables if used.

Place in a paper lined muffin tin and bake for about 20 minutes.

This is a great way to make for a large group for breakfast or brunch.

Grain Free Banana Bread

By SUZIE

There is nothing like a slice of warm banana bread for breakfast with a dab of real butter.

Here is a recipe for one without using grains but instead it is using almond flour (from almonds) coconut flour (from coconuts) and arrowroot flour (from the cassava plant). This bread is loaded with fiber, protein, important nutrients and taste to get you through a busy morning. Starting the morning with protein instead of sugary high carbohydrate foods (like a typical muffin, bagel, or bowl of sugary cereal) only sets you up for failure for the rest of the day, making you hungry quickly and craving more carbs.

GRAIN FREE HIGH PROTEIN BANANA BREAD
Ingredients:
3/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon sea salt
3/4 cup almond flour
1/4 cup coconut flour
2 Tablespoons arrowroot flour
2 Tablespoons melted butter
3 eggs, room temperature
2 very ripe bananas
1/4 cup maple syrup
1/2 cup chopped walnuts or chocolate chips (optional)

Instructions

Preheat oven to 350° F/175° C.

Using a whisk or fork, mix all the dry ingredients together.

In a separate bowl, mix all the wet ingredients together, and then mix them into the dry ingredients. If needed, you can use a stick blender or mixer to ensure the batter is well blended.

Oil or butter the baking pan. Add the batter to a baking dish.

Bake for 45-50 minutes, or until well browned and a knife inserted in the middle of the bread comes out clean.

Eggplant Casserole

By MARIE

Today's recipe is from my daughter Rita, and the combination of the eggplant, rice, tomato and cheese is outstanding. It's made into a casserole, and slices just like lasagna.

The eggplant is used without the usual coating or frying as you will note. And how easy is it to boil rice and make a marinara sauce.

If you don't feel like making the tomato sauce, there are some pretty good ones sold in the markets.

FOR THE SAUCE
1 large can of either crushed or plum tomatoes
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves of garlic (chopped)
1 small onion (chopped) (optional)
1 teaspoon basil (or any favorite herb)

In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and onion- add the tomatoes and cook for about 20 minutes. Set aside.

FOR THE EGGPLANT MIXTURE
2 small egg plants (cut long ways)
1 cup rice (boiled)
8 ounces mozzarella cheese mixed with 1/4 cup grated cheese
Tomato sauce

Boil the rice and set aside.

Slice the eggplant and set aside.

Mix the two cheeses together

In a large casserole dish, place a little sauce on the bottom, Start by layering the eggplant, tomato sauce, rice and then the cheese.

Continue this until done, topping it with more cheese. Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes, and then uncover and bake for another 40 minutes. Let cool before slicing.

Sisters Honored For WWII Contributions

Raincoat Manufacturer, Shipyard Welder/Riveter

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sisters Bertha Glavin and Mary Kennedy – who worked in a factory that manufactured raincoats for Navy personnel and the other as a welder/riveter at the Fore River Shipyard, respectively, during World War II – were honored for their contributions to the American war effort at a recent City Council meeting.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin presented the commendations to Glavin and Kennedy at the council's May 18 meeting. He noted more than 19 million Americans worked in home front industries during the war; 37,000 civilian women died during the war effort and 210,000 were left permanently disabled.

"Without question the most iconic symbol of the role of American women in every aspect of the success of our nation's efforts in World War II is the Rosie the Riveter. Who were they? They were daughters, mothers, sisters, wives and grandmothers," Coughlin said.

"They worked as riveters, buckers, sanders, welders, train operators, bus drivers, uniform makers, bullet makers, parachute folders, clerical workers, shipyard workers, assembly line workers, the Red Cross and so much more.

"Bertha worked in a factory making raincoats for the Navy. Her sister, Mary Kennedy, worked in the Fore River Shipyard as a riveter. We are very faithful here in this city, as we are across this country, to remember the men who served in combat in World War II. I think sometimes we lose sight of the fact that women were here at home and some serving in many diverse places around the world during that World War II effort. If it were not for their contributions, for their service and their sacrifice, we wouldn't be here today."

"This recognition for these two women here and those that they represent is long overdue," Coughlin added.

Glavin was one of 14 American women honored by the Dutch embassy in Washington on May 4 for their contribution to the war effort to mark the 70th anniversary of the liberation of the Netherlands at the end of World War II; she attended that ceremony on behalf of herself and her sister.

"This is not necessary. Thank you so much. Mary was the welder. I had the easy job – I was making the payroll for the women who made the Navy raincoats," Glavin said, later adding, "I really appreciate this. I can't thank you enough. I don't really deserve all this. Everyone has been kind to me and Mary. We really enjoyed this very much."

"Thank you, everybody, for honoring me," Kennedy said. "I did my job."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest credited the sisters for paving the way for women like herself and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes.

"You do this deserve and I have to tell you it's women like you who paved the way for women like myself and Councillor Hughes," Laforest said. "The city of Quincy and the Fore River Shipyard is quite a legacy. My foray into community advocacy began at Broad Meadows where we interviewed a lot of women who worked in the shipyard and I know firsthand some of these stories.

"You're saying you don't deserve this award, but by all means you absolutely do for your work and what you've done for the women's movement. Thank you so much for paving the way."

Gutro Ordinance Aims To Increase Awareness Of Rx Disposal Location

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new ordinance introduced by Councillor Doug Gutro would mandate that Quincy's pharmacies inform customers that prescription medication can be properly disposed of at the city's police station.

Gutro's ordinance, submitted at the City Council's May 18 meeting, would require pharmacies in Quincy to post the location of permanent drug drop off locations in the city at check out and consultation windows. The postings would also have to reference the proper disposal method for prescription drugs and the risks of associated drug abuse; the pharmacies could instead keep literature covering those same topics easily accessible.

"Pharmacies, as the dispensary of prescription drugs, provide an important venue to educate on prescription drug abuse and proper disposal techniques. Essentially, this new law would require Quincy pharmacies to post a notice at consultation and checkout venues of permanent disposal locations and provide additional information about opiate risks and alternative disposal options," Gutro said.

"The law would engage local pharmacists in helping educate residents and provide a concrete, meaningful way to educate residents on local drug disposal options and associated risks of opiate abuse at their local pharmacy. It would clearly supplement the outreach to students, parents, and provide direct outreach to residents of all ages.

"I've talked to several local pharmacists; all thought it was quite simple to do and no-brainer that they could play a role in educating folks."

A drug drop off facility is currently located in Quincy Police Department headquarters at 1 Sea St. and is available 24/7, but Gutro said many residents might be unaware of this. He underscored that point by noting he met recently with a group of 40 seniors and only three knew its location.

At the May 18 meeting, Gutro said there have been 75 opiate deaths in Quincy over the past five years, including 14 this year. The Quincy Police Department, through the use of Narcan, has reversed 386 overdoses in five years; 52 of the reversals happened in 2015.

Gutro noted that four out of five heroin users become addicted because of the use of medications that were prescribed for pain relief.

The ordinance was refered to the council's ordinance committee and its environment and public health committee for review.

"Better promotion and understanding what the opportunity is to get those medicine cabinets clean is so important for parents. If you have medication in the home, lock the medication up because you don't want it getting into the wrong hands," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, chairwoman of the environment and public health committee, said.

"Many, many of our substance abuse addictions have started in the home medicine cabinet, so whatever we can be doing to get these prescriptions that are no longer needed I think is terrific."

THE THIRD WEEK in May traditionally marks EMS Appreciation Week. For the sixth year in a row, Quincy Credit Union celebrated the dedication and compassion of the employees of its business partner, Fallon Ambulance. Over 200 Fallon employees, Emergency Medical Technicians and staff – at both Quincy and North Quincy locations – kicked off the week's festivities. QCU employees were on-hand to distribute appreciation bags containing an EMS paracord keychain attached to a powerful poem honoring the men and women of Fallon who work to keep communities safe. The day ended with a visit from a traditional summertime favorite, an ice cream truck sponsored by QCU. Reminiscent of childhood days, employees enjoyed selecting their favorite frozen treats. Photo Courtesy Quincy Credit Union

Coddington Building Restoration Wins State Preservation Award

The City's restoration of the 106-year-old historic Coddington Building in Quincy Center has been awarded a prestigious preservation award by a statewide historic conservancy group.

Preservation Massachusetts, a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting the preservation of historic buildings, presented the Coddington project its Paul E. Tsongas Award earlier this month. Members of the architectural team from Wessling Architects and the City's project team were on hand to accept the award at the Annual Preservation Awards Dinner.

The project, completed in 2014, transformed the aging school building designed by famed architect Charles Brigham – the architect of Boston's Museum of Fine Arts – into administrative office space for the Quincy Public Schools and other City departments. The building was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1989.

"We have a great responsibility to protect our rich history in this community. The Coddington project is a wonderful example of our commitment, and this recognition is a testament to the efforts to so many people who made it happen," said Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch, who originally proposed the restoration.

Added Wessling Architects CEO Stephen Wessling, who led the design for the building's envelope restoration as well as its interior transformation into office space:

"The Coddington Building is an outstanding adaptive re-use of a historically significant building. The original design lent itself well to office use while we were able to preserve the architectural beauty of the original structure for future generations, and we are honored to see our work on the revitalization of this historic structure recognized by Preservation Massachusetts."

The $11 million project included the full restoration of the building's exterior to its original condition, including a new slate roof, new galvanized metal fascia, soffit and dentils to match the original design, and new energy efficient windows. The restored 40,000 square-feet of office space is home to the administrative offices of the Quincy Public Schools and a public meeting room for the School Committee as well the City Planning Department and Information Technology Department.

Prior to moving into Coddington, the School Department paid $300,000 to rent space in an office building on Burgin Parkway.

Moving Quincy Forward

OP ED

By K. DOUGLAS BRIGGS

Our local roots run deep. My maternal grandfather began his long career at Quincy Mutual in 1917, and my paternal grandfather was a math teacher at Quincy High School for many years. The grandfather of our executive vice president Jim Moran was a Quincy fireman for 34 years. We both were born at Quincy Hospital. More than half of our employees live in Quincy and the immediately adjacent communities, and many of us have relatives who also live and work in the city. So when local trade unions rallied in downtown Quincy recently stating "Quincy Mutual unfair for Quincy residents," it hurt.

We take great pride in our Company and the city of Quincy, which has been our home since 1851. The history of that relationship has been reinforced time and again. In the 1990's, when we significantly expanded our home office on Washington Street, it would have been much easier to move to a suburban office park but we stayed in the downtown area. We expended millions of dollars on the project that was built with 100% union labor.

The downtown improvement plan envisioned several years ago was, and remains, important to us and there is no Quincy business that has done more, spent more or devoted itself more to its success than Quincy Mutual. The initial developer made unaffordable promises, and failed. We agreed with Mayor Koch that a fresh start was needed using a qualified and proven development firm, a local contractor and a construction plan that is transparent and makes economic sense. We are not developers, nor do we really want to be in the real estate business, but we agreed to deepen our downtown investment and back the West of Chestnut residential project in order to get the downtown redevelopment back on track.

Quincy Mutual is investing its capital in privately developing a single block of downtown. The general contractor we've selected is a local Quincy company, Dellbrook Construction LLC of 859 Willard St. Union labor representatives have been involved in discussions with us since 2014, and we've repeatedly encouraged them to urge union subcontractors to submit competitive bids on project components.

We try to run our business in a quiet and respectful way that does not seek publicity, but feel now that our story must be told. We provide an economic benefit to local merchants, contribute significantly to the tax base of the city, and provide an attractive working environment for our 275 employees. Millions have been donated to worthy causes in our community to promote the health and welfare of residents of all ages. We sought no praise – we see this as the responsibility of good corporate citizenry.

It is time for all of us in this great city to stop the bickering and finger pointing about the past. Instead we should focus in a thoughtful and productive way on what is required today for the redevelopment of Quincy Center to be economically successful. A revitalized downtown will benefit all residents. We will continue to work with those who care so much about Quincy to make our city an even better place to live and work.

K. Douglas Briggs is President and Chief Executive of the Quincy Mutual Group.

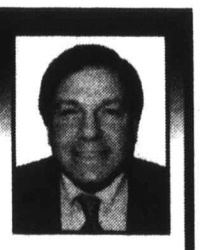
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.



LOOK FIVE YEARS YOUNGER WITH BRIGHTER TEETH

We hardly need scientific evidence that whiter teeth make a person look more attractive and youthful, but a study conducted by a major manufacturer of oral-health products does just that. The study showed that whiter teeth can make a person look as much as five years younger and increase attractiveness by 20%. Brightened smiles also seem to increase the perception that a person is more successful, more employable, and better educated. Nearly one-third of the men surveyed think that white teeth demonstrate wealth and status and double the perception that a person has received education at a private university. With all this in mind, professional tooth whitening may be as helpful in getting a job as in getting a date.

Your smile needs deserve an exceptional dental office, with a professional team that provides leading-edge care and more comforts than you ever thought possible in a dentist's office. We want to do more than meet your expectations – we want to exceed them. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The study mentioned above demonstrates that whitening one's teeth can exert as much of a rejuvenating effect as prescription anti-wrinkle creams.

Quincy Schools Attend DA's Safe, Supportive Schools Training

Quincy Public Schools Heath Services Coordinator Rita Bailey joined Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey and more than 60 school and police colleagues from across the county at the DA's Safe & Supportive School Training recently.

"Research tells us half to two thirds of all students, have experienced trauma – be it direct mistreatment, substance abuse, domestic abuse or mental illness in the home – sufficiently stressful to impact their capacity to learn and regulate their behavior," Morrissey said.

"These children can be successful, even after overwhelming trauma, when their school communities are shaped to support their academic success, self-regulation, health and relationships," Morrissey said. "The 2014 legislation establishing the statewide Safe & Supportive Schools Framework is an important basis for doing that, and we wanted to bring experts in the law and the science behind it to Norfolk County."

Bailey attended the all-day May 14 event in Canton, at the seminar facilities of the headquarters of the Bank of Canton.

"Presenter Joel Ristuccia was a school psychologist for decades before becoming the director of training at the Trauma & Learning Policy Initiative," Morrissey said. "He did an excellent job explaining the physiological changes that overwhelming stress can create in a child's brain, and how that shapes their classroom experience."

Trauma & Learning Policy Initiative Senior Attorney Michael Gregory's ensuing presentation explored the Safe & Supportive Schools legislation and how local districts can create trauma-sensitive school structures that benefit the entire student body. Attorney Matthew MacAvoy, from Nuttal & MacAvoy, P.C., explained the information sharing laws necessary to implement the new law.

"The more we learn about the brain and how it develops, the more we as a society can craft schools and systems where fewer kids fall through the cracks, and fewer kids run into behavior problems and consequences," Morrissey said. "Healthy schools where bullying is banished and all students feel safe and supported those are safe schools. And we want every school in Norfolk County to be a safe school."

Fleet Services Division: Backbone Of Quincy Fire

By MIKE SLADE
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

The Quincy Fire Department is an organization of dedicated professionals who are committed to serving the citizens of Quincy by protecting life, property, and the environment through prevention, education, and emergency medical and fire services.

The Quincy Fire Departments maintains an emergency response time of less than three minutes. To do this, Quincy Fire keeps in service eight pumper trucks, three ladder trucks, two spare pumper trucks, two spare ladder trucks, two special service units, two boats, and one hazmat truck.

All apparatus needs to operate continuously, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days of the year. The apparatus and its equipment require extreme reliability in order to rapidly save lives and protect property for the citizens of Quincy. This task is the responsibility of the Quincy Fire Department's Fleet Services Division, the backbone of the Quincy Fire Department.

Day after day, week after week, and year after year, the two men who operate the fleet services division make sure that fire department vehicles and its equipment are in continuous working order. Their names are Michael O'Connor and Kevin Mellor, and they are the mechanics who maintain all of the fire department's 40 registered vehicles.

On all second alarm fires, a fleet service mechanic will be on scene to make sure that the trucks and equipment are functioning properly to combat the fire effectively. A structure fire usually requires the trucks to work for long periods. At times, a truck will overheat, or a pump to flow water to a fire won't pump properly. I have witnessed numerous times how quickly the fleet services division will correct a mechanical issue in order for the fire department to continue their emergency response tactics.

The Quincy Fire Department's Fleet Services Division has in place a preventative maintenance program to prevent fire apparatus from unnecessary maintenance issues. Periodically throughout the year, the fleet services division will give classes to the firefighters on apparatus and equipment maintenance. This will include brake testing, fluid checks and equipment checks.

Preventative maintenance is maintenance that is regularly performed on fire trucks and equipment to lessen the likelihood of it failing. Fluid and equipment checks are performed daily while the equipment is still working, so that equipment does not break down unexpectedly. This is especially important for trucks that are built to save lives and property in extreme emergency conditions. The replacement of apparatus is very costly. The purchase of a new ladder truck is over $800,000 and a pumper truck is over $500,000. Quincy Fire still has trucks in operation from 1988. This is due to the preventive maintenance program done by firefighters through the direction of the Quincy Fire Department's Fleet Services Division.

The Quincy Fire Department is dedicated to serving the citizens of Quincy. If you should have any questions whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the fire prevention office at 617-376-1015.

'Thank You For Your Service. Rest In Peace'

By JOE REARDON

The sacrifices of those who fought and died for their country in its bloody conflicts was brought close to home at Quincy's Memorial Day service Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Speaking from atop the World War II podium in front of the largest crowd in years, U.S. Navy veteran Joseph McConville recalled two veterans in his neighborhood and the sacrifices they made for their country.

"Two houses away was Mr. Shea and one street away was Mr. Harris," said the 85-year-old McConville. "Both were mustard gas victims. Mr. Shea was my first hero. However, I never got to know Mr. Harris. Neither did his only son, my lifelong friend."

McConville, a Second Class Petty Officer who served from 1951-1954, has several family members who also sacrificed for the United States. His son, LT General James C. McConville, is the current Deputy Chief of Staff in the U.S. Army and former commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division. Another son, John R. McConville, is a 20-year veteran of of the Navy Reserve, while his grandson, Michael McConville, is a 1st LT in the U.S. Army and an Apache Pilot in the 82nd Airborne. Grandson Ryan McConville is a U.S. Army 2nd LT TAD at Fort Knox and daughter in law Maria McConville is a former captain in the U.S. Army.

McConville recognized the pilots who were killed when their two double wing biplanes out of the Squantum Naval Air Station collided during a flyover of an aircraft carrier launch at Fore River in the 1930s.

He went on to speak of two high school football stars, Tom Underwood, who played for North Quincy, and Harold "Turk" Beston, who starred at Quincy High. LT Underwood was captured by the Germans and was a POW when his bomber was shot down in Germany in 1944.

"During his confinement he came down with a severe case of malnutrition," said McConville. "The last time I saw him he was as thin as a rail and I never found out when he joined the fallen."

Beston was a ranger at Normandy on D-Day. "Their mission was to take out the heavy guns, but the Germans had moved them," said McConville. "So they took out the observation towers to protect the troops in the LSTs (Land Ship Tanks) and LCVPs (Landing Craft, Vehicle, Personnel) coming ashore."

In a lighter moment at the service, McConville told about an incident outside Paris where a local soldier accidently shot a single round through Beston's pant leg when his unit was exchanging gunfire. "Instead of anger there was GI humor," said McConville. "This was the first Quincy High School Class Reunion ever held in France."

The tone grew somber when McConville said the soldier became a POW "because true to the code, he could not leave a wounded comrade. We honor two you know and one you don't know so I will not violate a confidence."

McConville told a story of delivering the paper to 124 Hamilton Ave., as a young paperboy in 1945 and yelling to Mrs. Sweeney, "Mrs. Sweeney, Charlie just dropped a big bomb on Japan." McConville was referring to Major General Charles W. Sweeney who piloted the aircraft Bockscar that carried the "Fat Man" atomic bomb that was dropped on the Japanese city of Nagasaki on August 9, 1945.

"Her four other sons all served," said McConville. "We honor the Sweeney brothers today."

McConville also paid tribute to Walter A. Della Chiesa, who graduated 12th in his class at West Point and perished in an air accident in Okinowa on June 25, 1950, Robert Fay, a LT COL during the Vietnam War who was shot down, but never fully recovered after being rescued. "He joined the fallen much sooner than later," said McConville. "Fay had two aunts who served with the Women's Army Corps during the invasion of New Guinea. He also had an uncle, who was at Ford Island and was on the last plane from Wake Island when it fell."

McConville spoke of Colonel Richard Malvesti, who had a glowing reputation in the U.S. Army. A fellow officer once told McConville "It was too bad the whole world didn't know what a great officer he was." He was not only special, said McConville, but "he had a very special job. This is why we can and do very proudly honor Colonel Malvesti today."

He went on to ask the crowd to remember the

A YOUNG BOY listens to the speakers at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. In the background is the American flag at Faxon Field flying at half staff until noon in observance of Memorial Day.

MEMORIAL DAY PARADE and Observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery drew at least 1,000 spectators along the parade route and a strong showing of residents and veterans who gathered near the World War II Podium at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Here some of those gathered join in the singing of the National Anthem during the ceremony.

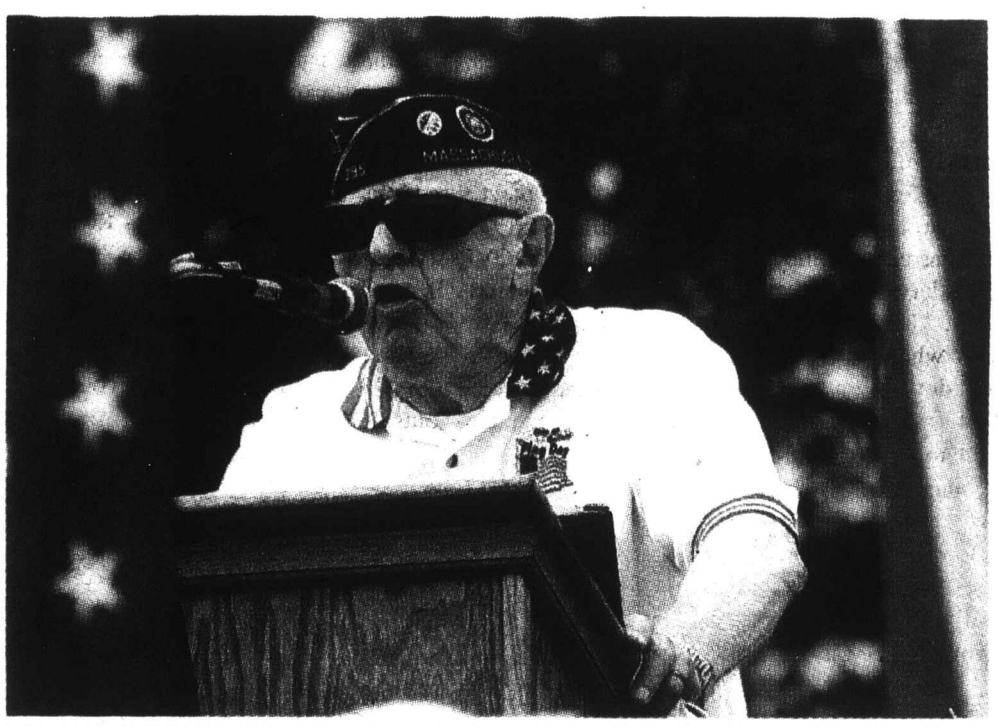
loved ones he didn't mention. "They may be at Arlington, Normandy, the beautiful Punch Bowl high above Pearl Harbor or right here where there is a flag, regardless of rank or branch," said McConville. "Each site has a separate story, but they all have two words in common. I SERVED. And we say, thank you for your service. Rest in Peace."

Parade Chairman George F. Nicholson of the Quincy Veterans' Services Department said there were over 8,000 flags on veterans' final resting places in the cemetery and that in a population of over 330 million, less than 1 percent are in the military. "You're damn right he or she is a unique individual," said Nicholson.



JOSEPH McCONVILLE, a U.S. Navy veteran and father of Lt. Gen. James C. McConville, the Army's deputy chief of staff, was the keynote speaker at Monday's Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Rev. John Carl Swanson, chaplain of the Quincy Veterans' Council, said during the invocation that his father was a World War II veteran and told his son there were more and more flags every time they drove past the cemetery. "May we never be indifferent to those who have gone on before," said Swanson.

In probably the most moving part of the ceremony, Gold Star Mothers Angela Durkin and June Quinn placed a wreath at the World War II Monument. Mayor Thomas Koch said that the roll of World War II veterans killed in the great conflict was right behind him and "Today we owe a great debt to the veterans of America."

City Council President Joseph G. Finn conveyed to the crowd gathered on the grass and wall in front of the podium that this country's soldiers made the "ultimate sacrifice for nation, friends and fellow combatants," and that there is no greater love than to give life for a friend and that "each one of us" has the deire to give life.

In her benediction, Reverend Rebecca Froom of the Quincy Church of Presidents asked the spectators to pray for the safety for those who are currently serving and that they may arrive home safely. "We have gathered this day in a great community of memory and hope," said Froom.

Twelve-year-old Eileen Durgin, who attends Central Middle School, has attended the Memorial Day events several times in the city. "I think it's good that they do it every year," she said. "They (soldiers) work so hard for us and it's good to think of the ones who died."

QUINCY'S BOB NOBLE, an Army veteran of World War II and former Prisoner of War, bows his head as Rev. Rebecca Froom, minister, United First Parish Church, Quincy, offers the benediction at the close of Monday's Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

REV. JOHN SWANSON, a Navy veteran and pastor of Union Congregational Church, gives the invocation at Monday's Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. "The opposite of love is not hate," Rev. Swanson told the crowd gathered at the cemetery. "The opposite of love is indifference. Let us never be indifferent to the sacrifices of those who came before us." Bowing their heads at right are Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall; Lawrence Norton, the Master of Ceremonies, and Leo Reardon, Officer of the Day and past commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council.

NQ Softball Wins - And Winners

By BILL GRIFFIN

Last year, they had barely enough players to fill a lineup card. The coach recruited from his homeroom. The players battled and stayed together through losses and long, difficult afternoons. They had fun and they grew close. They saved the program.

This year, they were better. Turnout improved. There were enough players and the players were good. There was help from talented freshmen and sophomores. They were in games. They were competitive. They played fine softball. They could hit, pitch, run and throw. They needed but one thing. They needed a victory.

And now they have it. North Quincy defeated Hull, 10-0 for its first softball win in two years. It ended the way it should have ended with two three-year starters, two terrific players who stayed true to their team, combining for the final out of the game at Mitchell-McCoy Field last Thursday.

Junior catcher Sarah Franklin, the best player on the team, fired a strike to senior shortstop Madison Hally, the soul and leader of the team, to gun down a base-stealer and give the Red Raiders a victory that they richly deserved.

"I couldn't be happier for them," said coach Jim Connor. "We pushed and pushed for this. We had been playing well, but we needed a win. These kids earned it. This is something they were owed because of their effort."

"Amazing. It's just an amazing feeling. This is a feeling we can remember and build on for the future," said Franklin who went 2-for-3 with a walk, and two RBI. She also caught a flawless game and threw out two base-stealers.

The long and winding road they traveled over the past two years to get here made the victory most sweet.

"The last two years brought us closer. We stayed together. We had each others' back. That makes the win mean a lot," said Franklin.

"The last two years showed what a great group of kids they are," said Connor. "They do all the right stuff. They show up prepared and they work hard. They are a team."

The Red Raiders played a complete softball game. They pitched. Freshman Mia Sapienza threw the complete-game shutout. She scattered six hits and grew stronger as the game progressed. Starting with two out in the third, she retired 12 straight and 13 of the last 15 batters she faced.

She threw quality strikes. She struck out one and walked one. She was around the plate all day, pitched to contact, and let her defense help her.

"Mia has pitched like that all season. She was in control of the strike zone," said Connor. "She's very young. She just turned 15, and we are fortunate to have her."

They hit. Every player in the starting lineup reached base. They had six hits and worked 10 walks. They hit in the clutch. Franklin and Sapienza each had two-run singles in the four-run fourth which hiked the lead to 7-0 and put away the game.

"We've had runners on base all year with a chance to score. We needed that big hit. Today we got it," said Connor.

Sapienza had two hits, two RBI and two runs scored. Sammie Caldwell had a single, a run scored and an RBI. Izzy Pilone had an RBI. Jessie Caldwell had a single and a run scored. Eight different players scored. Nancy Aimola and Kristen Thornton scored twice. Hally, Pilone and Maeve Keane each scored.

Could there be a better way to win a game? Right through the lineup, from top to bottom, everybody played a part in the victory.

"We got contributions from everyone. It was a team win in every way," said Connor.

They fielded. North made one harmless error. Aimola made an excellent running grab going towards the line in left with two on in the first, and then went deep to the threshold of the fence to catch a fly ball with one on in in third. Sapienza cleanly fielded three hard grounders back to the mound.

In the sixth, senior centerfielder Lindsay Delaney raced far into right center to run down a fly ball. She then made a leaping catch of a rising liner off the next batter.

In the seventh, Hally made the play of the game. She ranged deep in the hole to field a hot smash which hugged the ground and then caught the runner at first by a running step with a hard, accurate throw.

"That's the kind of defense we've been playing lately. Maddy is just a good, solid player. She makes all the plays at short," said Connor.

They ran the bases. Aimola, Hally and Sapienza had stolen bases. Aimola alertly scored from third when Hull mishandled the throw back to the pitcher following a walk. In the third, Hally walked and stole second. When Franklin hit a grounder to short, Hally faked going to third. Her bluff forced the shortstop to hold the ball, and Franklin had herself an infield hit.

"Pitching, hitting, fielding, running the bases. We played well in all facets of the game," said Connor.

North scored three in the second, four in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth.

When it was over, there were laughs and hugs and smiles of delight. Parents took team pictures at home plate. Players posed in small and large groups. Players fell to the ground and acted like, well, goofy winners. They had worked and waited for this. They would enjoy it.

"Every year I talk about what each class accomplished. Last year the seniors saved the program. This year we were in games, we were competitive, and we got a win. That's a big step. I'm proud of them," said Connor.

BOTTOM LINE

The small of a woman's back has long been the focus of painters', poets', and sculptors' attention. And according to recent research, this curved section of the lower back may have significance reaching beyond mere aesthetic appeal. This physical curvature of the spine, known as "vertebral wedging," is a sign of a woman's ability to have multiple children without increased risk of spinal injury. To our human ancestors, this feature was a sign of a woman's ability to shift her center of mass over her hips during pregnancy. Without such a curve, the pressure on a pregnant woman's hips increases by nearly 800%, rendering her significantly less mobile. Chiropractors take these and other factors into consideration when treating pregnant patients.

Is pregnancy in your future? A continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Find out how chiropractic care, combined with proper diet, exercise, can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy life to the fullest. Call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. According to the study mentioned above, angles greater than a 45-degree curvature expose women to back pain and the risk of slipped discs.

NQ Softball Wins - And Winners

By BILL GRIFFIN

Last year, they had barely enough players to fill a lineup card. The coach recruited from his homeroom. The players battled and stayed together through losses and long, difficult afternoons. They had fun and they grew close. They saved the program.

This year, they were better. Turnout improved. There were enough players and the players were good. There was help from talented freshmen and sophomores. They were in games. They were competitive. They played fine softball. They could hit, pitch, run and throw. They needed but one thing. They needed a victory.

And now they have it. North Quincy defeated Hull, 10-0 for its first softball win in two years. It ended the way it should have ended with two three-year starters, two terrific players who stayed true to their team, combining for the final out of the game at Mitchell-McCoy Field last Thursday.

Junior catcher Sarah Franklin, the best player on the team, fired a strike to senior shortstop Madison Hally, the soul and leader of the team, to gun down a base-stealer and give the Red Raiders a victory that they richly deserved.

"I couldn't be happier for them," said coach Jim Connor. "We pushed and pushed for this. We had been playing well, but we needed a win. These kids earned it. This is something they were owed because of their effort."

"Amazing. It's just an amazing feeling. This is a feeling we can remember and build on for the future," said Franklin who went 2-for-3 with a walk, and two RBI. She also caught a flawless game and threw out two base-stealers.

The long and winding road they traveled over the past two years to get here made the victory most sweet.

"The last two years brought us closer. We stayed together. We had each others' back. That makes the win mean a lot," said Franklin.

"The last two years showed what a great group of kids they are," said Connor. "They do all the right stuff. They show up prepared and they work hard. They are a team."

The Red Raiders played a complete softball game. They pitched. Freshman Mia Sapienza threw the complete-game shutout. She scattered six hits and grew stronger as the game progressed. Starting with two out in the third, she retired 12 straight and 13 of the last 15 batters she faced.

She threw quality strikes. She struck out one and walked one. She was around the plate all day, pitched to contact, and let her defense help her.

"Mia has pitched like that all season. She was in control of the strike zone," said Connor. "She's very young. She just turned 15, and we are fortunate to have her."

They hit. Every player in the starting lineup reached base. They had six hits and worked 10 walks. They hit in the clutch. Franklin and Sapienza each had two-run singles in the four-run fourth which hiked the lead to 7-0 and put away the game.

"We've had runners on base all year with a chance to score. We needed that big hit. Today we got it," said Connor.

Sapienza had two hits, two RBI and two runs scored. Sammie Caldwell had a single, a run scored and an RBI. Izzy Pilone had an RBI. Jessie Caldwell had a single and a run scored. Eight different players scored. Nancy Aimola and Kristen Thornton scored twice. Hally, Pilone and Maeve Keane each scored.

Could there be a better way to win a game? Right through the lineup, from top to bottom, everybody played a part in the victory.

"We got contributions from everyone. It was a team win in every way," said Connor.

They fielded. North made one harmless error. Aimola made an excellent running grab going towards the line in left with two on in the first, and then went deep to the threshold of the fence to catch a fly ball with one on in in third. Sapienza cleanly fielded three hard grounders back to the mound.

In the sixth, senior centerfielder Lindsay Delaney raced far into right center to run down a fly ball. She then made a leaping catch of a rising liner off the next batter.

In the seventh, Hally made the play of the game. She ranged deep in the hole to field a hot smash which hugged the ground and then caught the runner at first by a running step with a hard, accurate throw.

"That's the kind of defense we've been playing lately. Maddy is just a good, solid player. She makes all the plays at short," said Connor.

They ran the bases. Aimola, Hally and Sapienza had stolen bases. Aimola alertly scored from third when Hull mishandled the throw back to the pitcher following a walk. In the third, Hally walked and stole second. When Franklin hit a grounder to short, Hally faked going to third. Her bluff forced the shortstop to hold the ball, and Franklin had herself an infield hit.

"Pitching, hitting, fielding, running the bases. We played well in all facets of the game," said Connor.

North scored three in the second, four in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth.

When it was over, there were laughs and hugs and smiles of delight. Parents took team pictures at home plate. Players posed in small and large groups. Players fell to the ground and acted like, well, goofy winners. They had worked and waited for this. They would enjoy it.

"Every year I talk about what each class accomplished. Last year the seniors saved the program. This year we were in games, we were competitive, and we got a win. That's a big step. I'm proud of them," said Connor.

BOTTOM LINE

The small of a woman's back has long been the focus of painters', poets', and sculptors' attention. And according to recent research, this curved section of the lower back may have significance reaching beyond mere aesthetic appeal. This physical curvature of the spine, known as "vertebral wedging," is a sign of a woman's ability to have multiple children without increased risk of spinal injury. To our human ancestors, this feature was a sign of a woman's ability to shift her center of mass over her hips during pregnancy. Without such a curve, the pressure on a pregnant woman's hips increases by nearly 800%, rendering her significantly less mobile. Chiropractors take these and other factors into consideration when treating pregnant patients.

Is pregnancy in your future? A continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Find out how chiropractic care, combined with proper diet, exercise, can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy life to the fullest. Call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. According to the study mentioned above, angles greater than a 45-degree curvature expose women to back pain and the risk of slipped discs.

Quincy Boys Tennis Edges North, 3-2

By BILL GRIFFIN

For Quincy, it was a show of patience and consistency on a windy day with gusts strong enough to knock over the London Bridge. The effort was good enough to earn a sweep of the season series with its city rival.

For North Quincy, it was another example of the remarkable improvement the Red Raiders have made in a season which began with North seeking and finding a coach who, by his own admission, knew little about tennis.

The first time the two met this season, Quincy won, 5-0. The Presidents swept both doubles matches to defeat North in a much tougher battle, 3-2 in the second meeting at the Bishop Park Courts Friday afternoon.

"I was pleased with the consistency and patience we showed staying in points," said Quincy coach Elliot Columb. "The consistency is something I've seen develop over the second half of the year and it was a key for us today. The double teams did what they had to do for us to get the win."

"This is a tough loss, but I can't say enough about the improvement the kids have made," said North coach Matt Ramponi. "Their work ethic has been fantastic. It's been a great experience coaching them."

Ramponi is a basketball guy. He coaches with Dave Parry at Quincy. He works with Leo Papile in the BABC. His first experience with tennis came when he received a phone call before the season began.

"North couldn't find anyone to coach the tennis team, and they asked me," said Ramponi whose team earned victories over Hanover and Middleboro in the second half of the season. "I knew nothing about tennis. I'm happy I took the job. I found that some things apply to all sports. I talked to the kids about digging in when times are tough and responding with their best effort. They've done all that I've asked."

Quincy's Yu Yang Zhen posted a 6-2, 6-1 over Yeyang Wang in second singles. Genderson Lai and Jonathan Maung dropped Le Chen and Dan Wong, 6-4, 6-0 in first doubles. Captain Wei He and junior Jason Troung earned the deciding point with a 6-0, 6-1 decision over freshman Dan Chen and junior Wilson Tang in second doubles.

Brigham Mckee was steady and sure at No. 1 singles for North in a 6-2, 6-3 win over Martin Aliberti. Sophomore Bu Cao rolled to a 6-0, 6-0 win in No. 2 singles for the Red Raiders.

Both teams were without their No. 1 singles players for the match. North's Tin Tran will play tennis at UMass Boston next year. He is a strong, athletic player who makes hard, accurate placements. Lenny Strauss is a patient player for Quincy who stays in points and waits for the right moment to put away winners.

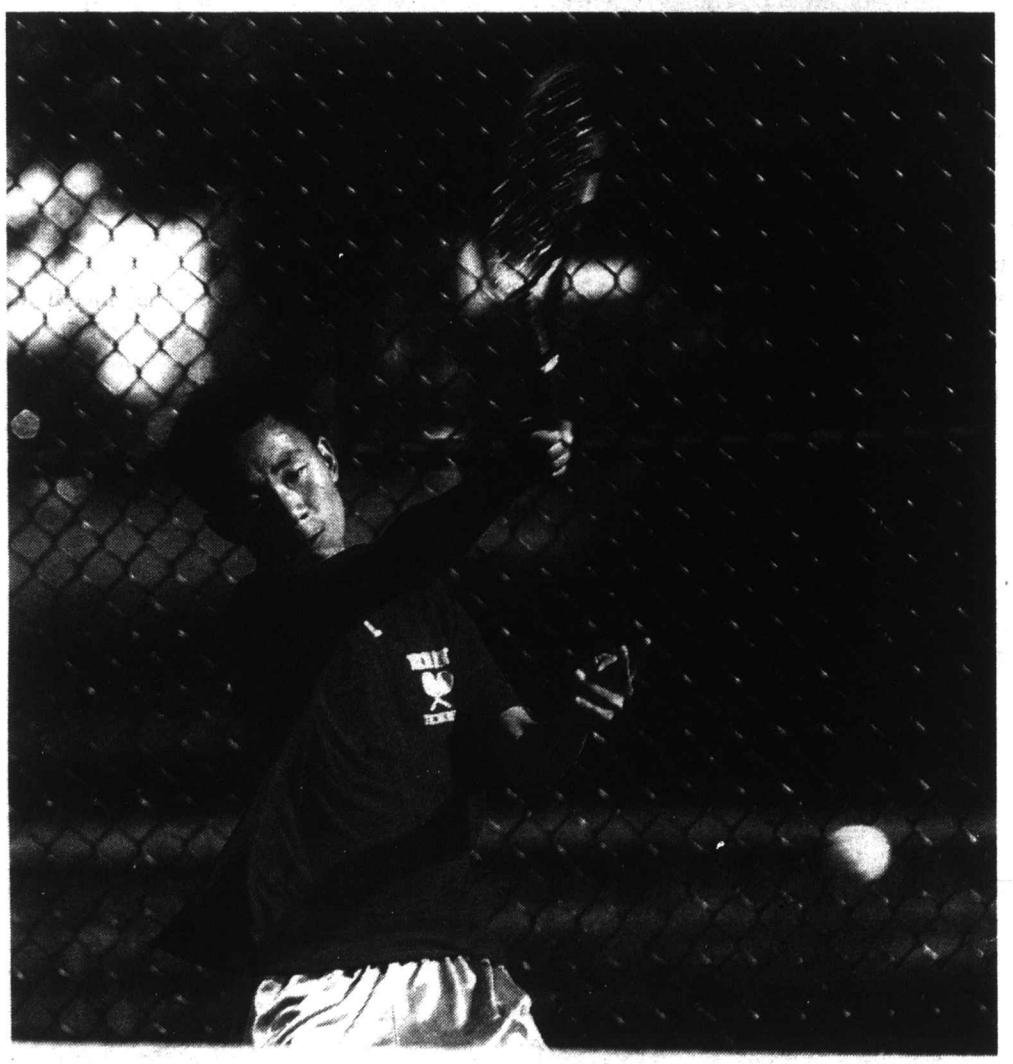
Zheng, Aliberti and Vincent Tran have been steady singles players for the Presidents.

"Zheng is a power player who hits winners," said Columb. "Tran has a very strong backhand. It's flat and moves like a laser. Martin has a big-time crosscourt forehand with a lot of spin."

In doubles, Lai and Maung have the ability to force weak returns with power ground-strokes and put away points. Troung and He team well at second doubles.

"They work well together and keep each other loose," said Columb.

McKee is a steady player for North who keeps himself in points and will do anything to get the ball back and keep it in play. Wang and Cao have also shown promise at singles.



YEYANG WANG hits a forehand shot in his match against QHS last Friday. Yeyang is a junior at NQHS and co-captain of the tennis team.

"Wang just works and works. He has a good forehand and hits hard," said Ramponi. "Cao has an excellent serve."

Le Chen is another strong server who has teamed with Cao for most of the year at first doubles. Dan Chen and Tang are new to the sport at second doubles. They have made great strides over the course of the season.

"They're new to the sport, but they are very athletic," said Ramponi. "They hit the alley well. They worked hard and earned a varsity spot."

The battle between McKee and Aliberti at No. 1 singles Friday afternoon was a classic duel between patience and power. McKee returns everything. He scrambles the width and depth of the court and will use any shot to stay in a point.

"My plan is to return a lot and try to stay in points," said McKee. "I try to play a consistent game and force mistakes."

Aliberti likes to hit out. His forehand can be overpowering, and he has a strong serve. He played his best early in the second set when he dialed back on his power and played longer points, but McKee's consistency won out in the end.

"I played better when I was in more control," said Aliberti who hopes to play tennis at the University of British Columbia next year. "I'm not discouraged by the loss. I know I've improved this year. I'm going to work over the summer on being more consistent."

The gusty winds, which could have swept a truck across Bishop Park, influenced each player.

"You had to be aware of whether the wind was at your back or in your face. You had to adjust your shot," said McKee. "Sometimes it made the ball curve and end up in a different place after you started your swing."

"I had one overhead when the wind made the ball just disappear. It was just gone," said Aliberti.

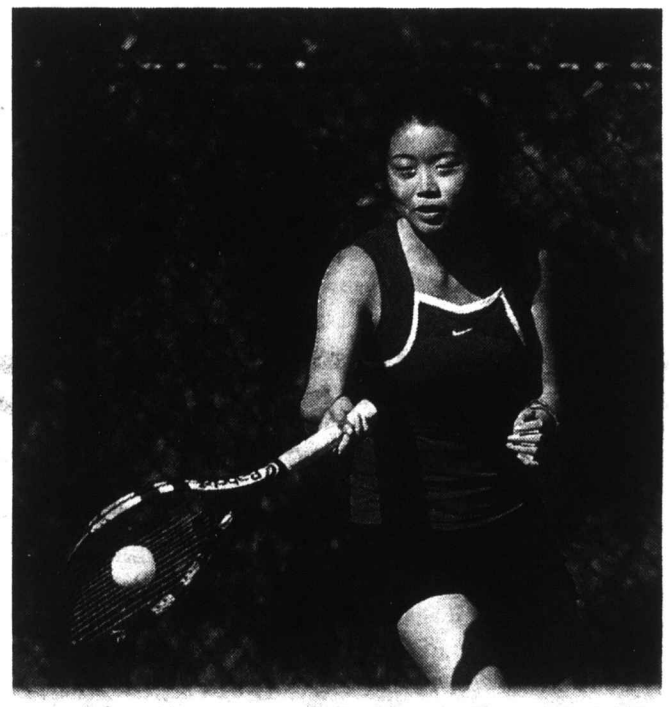
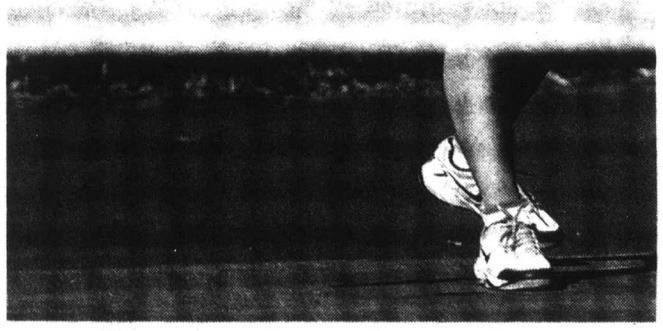
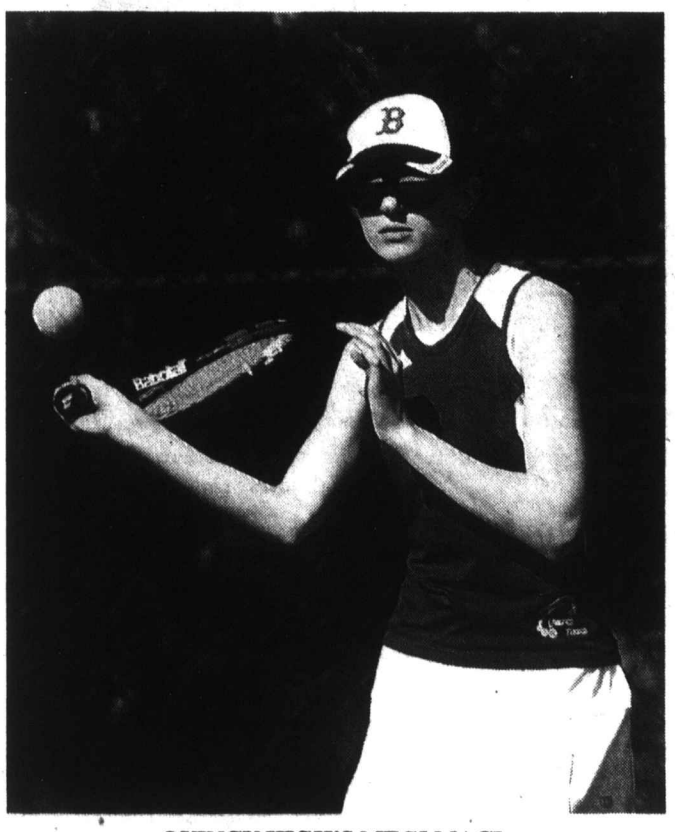
Decisive Match Goes 3 Sets, Over 3 Hours

NQ Girls Tennis Outlasts Quincy, 3-2





NORTH QUINCY HIGH'S LISA CHEN



QUINCY HIGH'S MEGI MACI

By BILL GRIFFIN

The most rewarding times of the rivalry are when it brings out the best in both teams.

So it went in the girls tennis match between Quincy and North Quincy Friday afternoon at the Quincy High courts. The match lasted over three hours. It was decided by a single point with North winning, 3-2. The decisive match went three sets. Another match went three sets and was a treat to watch. All five were closely contested and tested not only ability, but also poise on the big points.

"I'm so proud of my players," said North coach Francesca Quintero whose team swept the season series with the Presidents and went to 5-10 with the win. "It was a close match with a lot of tight moments, and we kept our composure. The same was true of the Quincy girls. Both sides should be proud of the match they played."

Quincy won the No. 1 and No. 2 singles. Junior Kalima Bukenya defeated Lisa Chen, 6-0, 6-2. In the best match of the day, Quincy's Tien Le outlasted North's Cindy Chau, 6-2, 5-7, 7-5.

North rallied in No. 3 singles and the two doubles matches. North's senior captain Amanda Huang defeated Daisy Ban, 6-3, 6-0.

"Kalima hit with great pace off her ground-strokes. She was aggressive especially to the forehand side," said Quintero. "I thought Cindy played her best match for us even though she lost. It was a great match to watch. Amanda is an excellent tactician. She played steadier and steadier for the whole match."

Geri Hu and Emily Luu posted a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Quincy's Vivian Tran and Jane Kuang in first doubles. North's Emily Chen and Nadia Lymswan held off Quincy's Megi Maci and Sylvene Tran in a beauty of second doubles match, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 for the decisive point of the match.

"Geri and Emily played well both on the baseline and at the net," said Quintero. "The second doubles was an excellent match. It was tight and nervous in the third set, but I thought both teams played with composure under pressure."

Neither team had their No. 1 singles player. Sophomore Tia McKee had a solid season for North gaining valuable experience against the best players in an excellent league. Senior Mary Ly led the Presidents and played better and better as the season went on.

"Mary really improved," said Quincy coach Meg Matthews. "She faced the best players and had a strong mental approach. She was a good leader for us."

Squantum School Celebrates Opening Of Outdoor Classroom

The Squantum School community celebrated the completion and official opening of its outdoor gardens and classroom space this past week with a tree planting ceremony as a way to say thank you to everyone supporting the project along the way. The project completely transformed an area outside the back of the school into an outdoor classroom learning area with raised planting beds and endless opportunities for students and the community.

Squantum students and school staff were joined by Mayor Thomas Koch, members of the Quincy School Committee, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Lisa Aimola from the Community Preservation Committee, Squantum Seaside Gardeners and many other community groups and families as a way to say thank you to all the groups supporting the transformation of this space.

"This is a terrific addition to the school, one that will have a lasting and enriching impact on students for years to come. These are exactly the kind of projects that we need to continue to focus on in the years to come," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

The project was approved and funded by the Quincy Community Preservation Committee and supported by so many families and includes some personal messages that can be seen on the bricks lining the main walkway to the gardens.

Squantum school parent Maureen Geary was a lead proponent of the project and was instrumental in presenting this idea to the Community Preservation Commission. "The outdoor classroom is a unique opportunity for students & teachers to bring learning outdoors. An amazing experience for all and a one of a kind program here in quincy," added Mrs. Geary.

The planting beds have already seen lots of action this spring as Squantum's Seaside Garden club has once again partnered with the school's junior garden club students and have been planting and caring for plants, vegetables and herbs around the space these last few weeks. Principal Stephen Sylvia said, "this has been a very rewarding project with tons of support from the community and so many departments in the city." He then added, "I cannot say thank you enough to everyone involved as we are very excited to now move to planning some exciting educational opportunities and uses for the space."

Mayor Koch was surrounded by students and supporters in planting a tree as part of the ceremony to celebrate the official opening of the space. The project was designed and completed by Frank Sullivan and his staff at Skinner Overlook located in Braintree.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, May 15, 2015, at approximately 8:20 p.m., Officers Paul Foley and Scott Smith were dispatched to Yesterday's Bar on Washington Street for a report of a man who had threatened people with a knife. Upon arrival, the Officers were joined by Sergeant J.P. Kelly.

The Officers spoke with the caller/owner, who said that he was working behind the bar when a man walked in. He said, "This man appeared to be under the influence of something and was mumbling to himself as he walked up to the bar." This man then stared at a patron at the far end of the bar and said, "What the @#$% are you looking at?" The owner said he stood directly in front of the man (with only the width of the bar separating the two men) and said, "Hey look, we're not looking for any trouble in here." The man then pulled out a folding knife from his pocket, unfolded it and held it in his hand (knife edge pointed toward the owner) and said to the owner, "I'm going back to jail on Monday, I got nothing to lose."

The man then put the knife back into his pocket and said, "I'm gonna go mess with this guy," referring to a different patron than the one he had first confronted.

The owner feared that this man was going to stab someone so he called the Police. The owner said that the man then left the bar and was walking south on Washington Street toward the Fore River Bridge. The owner provided an in depth description of the suspect as well as the knife. Officer Foley interviewed other patrons while Sergeant Kelly and Officer Smith searched for the suspect.

Soon after, the Officers located a male matching the description, sitting on a stone wall in front of 653 Washington Street, which is a short distance from the bar. Sergeant Kelly asked the man where he was coming from and he responded, "I didn't do anything - I just had a couple beers at the bar." While speaking with this man/suspect, Sergeant Kelly observed (in plain view) what appeared to be a folding knife, through the opening of his right pant pocket. Sergeant Kelly took the knife (so it could not be used against him during the encounter) and noted that it matched the one described by the owner of the bar.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Smith radioed Officer Foley that they had located the suspect down the street. Officer Foley instructed the Officers to place the suspect, a 33 year old Quincy resident, under arrest for "Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon (knife). A quick record check showed that the man/suspect had an outstanding straight warrant out of Dudley District Court for a probation violation. He also had an extensive criminal record with a total of 44 arraignments including multiple Assault and Battery and Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon charges.

It appeared that the suspect was to return to prison to serve the remainder of a two year sentence that had been suspended prior to him violating his probation for an incident that occurred in the Town of Oxford in March of 2014.

The suspect became combative by yelling, swearing and thrashing his body after being handcuffed and placed under arrest. He continued this behavior in the cell block. Uncuffed, he began slamming and punching the heavy cell door and eventually forced it open.

Officer Coletti had been watching the suspect on the camera system in the next room and immediately sounded the alarm. Numerous Officers rushed into the cell area, detained the suspect and placed him into a new cell. As the Officers were exiting the cell area, the suspect punched the Plexiglas window of cell #4 with tremendous force. He then looked at his hand and said to Officers, "I'm gonna sue the @#$% out of you for this." He soon calmed down. Keep in mind that this is not a reflection on Yesterday's, - this man could have walked into any bar. Nice Work!

CANCER FUNDRAISING SCAM: (excerpts from FTC) If you know someone with cancer, you may have considered donating to a cancer-related charity. Many legitimate charities use donations to find treatments. Some support patients and families but there also are bogus charities that are fraudulent and basically steal your donations for their personal use. The FTC recently identified the following 4 charities as "shams", collection over $187 million:

Cancer Fund of America
Cancer Support Services
Children's cancer Fund of America
The Breast Cancer Society

Two of the operations have agreed to shut down, and three people agreed to permanent bans against ever managing charities, controlling charitable funds, or fundraising. Litigation continues against the other defendants, seeking to permanently end their allegedly illegal practices. According to the complaint, the operators of these four so-called charities obtained more than $187 million from donors across the country. Potential donors were told their contributions would go to direct support for patients — things like medicine, cash help and groceries; transportation for chemotherapy; counseling; and hospice care. Some of those promises were just lies – the defendants did not pay for pain medication or hospice care for cancer patients at all. In truth, the sham charities spent most of the donated funds supporting themselves, their families and friends, and their paid fundraisers, who often received 85 percent or more of donations. Check out the Better Business Bureau's Wise Giving Alliance, Charity Navigator, Charity Watch, or GuideStar. Or, just call me, Lieutenant Dan Minton at 617 745 5719 and I will help you.
